Dear Mr. Butler:

This replies to your letter of August 13, 1975.

If we understand the facts correctly, an unidentified aircraft is registered in the name of a corporation. Originally the shares of ownership in the corporation were held by two individuals, but the corporation stock was then transfered to another shareholder.

On the basis of these sparse facts, I would see nothing new for you now to file based on mere change of stock ownership and of corporate officers, and no need for issuance of a new certificate of aircraft registration.

My answer is necessarily brief, due to the fact that you did not supply the identification number of the aircraft. We would need that, if you want for us to take a deeper look at the problem.

Sincerely,
