XCOR's Evaluative Process

- Customer interest – ready to move forward and has resources or likely to obtain resources
- Site is part of the “Free World” and likely to stay that way
- Regulatory Framework
  - Existing or strong willingness to move forward with an “informed consent” and “licensing” type environment
- Technical / Operational
  - Population density, runway configuration, airspace, supply chain, special needs, freedom to operate
- Quality of Life / Employee Base
  - Is this a place where our employees will live, is there a base of quality employees that we can hire or import, and community acceptance

- This presentation contains certain forward-looking statements within the meaning of Section 27A of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and Section 21E of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, including, but not limited to, statements as to future operating results and plans that involve risks and uncertainties. We use words such as “expects”, “anticipates”, “believes”, “estimates”, the negative of these terms and similar expressions to identify forward looking statements. Such forward-looking statements involve known and unknown risks, uncertainties and other factors which may cause the actual results, performance or achievements of the Company to differ materially from any future results, performance or achievements expressed or implied by those projected in the forward-looking statements for any reason.
- In addition, XCOR operates in highly competitive, consumer, technology-driven and rapidly changing aerospace, government, and civil space businesses. These businesses are affected by government regulation, economic, strategic, political and social conditions, consumer response to new and existing products and services, technological developments and, particularly in view of new technologies, the continued ability to protect intellectual property rights. Also, the industry we are in is risky and dangerous, with a history of catastrophic failures and loss of life. XCOR’s actual results could differ materially from management’s expectations because of changes in such factors or due to accident.
- The information contained herein is provided on a strictly and permanent confidential basis. By accepting a copy of this presentation, the recipient agrees that neither it nor any of its directors, officers, employees, agents or advisors shall use the information contained herein for any purpose other than evaluating the specific transaction or business relationship described herein, nor will the recipient divulge such information to any other party or persons. This Presentation shall not be photocopied, reproduced or distributed to others without the prior written consent of XCOR Aerospace, hereafter referred to as “the Company.” If the recipient determines not to participate in a business relationship with XCOR Aerospace, it will agree upon request to return all materials received in connection herewith (including this Presentation) without making or retaining any copies.
- This Presentation has been prepared for the purpose of facilitating business discussions between the recipient and the Company. While the information in this Presentation is believed to be accurate in all material respects, no representation is made by any party and nothing herein is or shall be relied upon as a promise or representation as to the future performance of the Company.
- Forecasts are contained in this Presentation. Prospective investors are cautioned that forecasts are speculative and because of the subjective judgments and inherent uncertainties of forecasts, there can be no assurance that the Company’s actual future results or subsequent forecasts will not vary significantly from the forecasts set forth in this Presentation. The inclusion of forecasts set forth in this Presentation should not be regarded as a representation or warranty with respect to their accuracy or the accuracy of the underlying assumptions or that the Company will achieve or is likely to achieve any particular results.
