

What is considered a current ECG? (Updated 11/30/2016)

- Only an ECG performed up to 60 days prior to the exam is considered current.
- There is NO provision for issuance of a first-class medical certificate based upon a promise that an ECG will be obtained at a future date.

As of the August 2014 changes in AMCS, an AME cannot transmit the exam until the required ECG is attached.
