ADS-B Privacy

In order to ensure the integrity of the ADS-B system, the FAA requires each Privacy ICAO Address (PIA) requester to verify their transponder is performing correctly, before and after the agency issues a PIA. To that end, the requester must perform a validation test using the FAA's ADS-B Performance Monitor as a condition for receiving a PIA. Once the FAA assigns a PIA to an aircraft, the owner/pilot must perform a second test. These tests are required to safeguard the system from incorrect PIA installations.

Step One: Obtain Initial PAPR

Your first step is to perform a validation flight and obtain a Public ADS-B Performance Report (PAPR) with your permanently assigned ICAO address. You will need to complete this step if you haven't performed a validation flight within 180 days of your request. You may be familiar with this process if you performed a validation flight after your initial ADS-B installation. To obtain a PAPR, fly your aircraft in airspace covered by ADS-B for at least 30 minutes. You can use the tools on FAA's ADS-B website to determine where to fly in order to meet this requirement.

After your flight, go to the ADS-B Performance page to obtain a PAPR (follow the instructions on the website to produce the PAPR). Use this PAPR to verify your ADS-B equipment is performing correctly. If the report does not indicate any areas of non-performance, proceed to the next step. If the report indicates areas of non-performance, those will need to be corrected before proceeding to the next step. The FAA will not issue a PIA for an aircraft without a clean PAPR.

Note: you do not need to submit the PAPR to the FAA; use it only to verify your equipment before proceeding to step 2.

ADS-B Privacy

Step Two: Request PIA

The next step is to submit a request for a PIA. Proceed to FAA's PIA Request page and fill in the required information. As a reminder, here are the requirements for obtaining a PIA:

- Aircraft must be accurately registered in the United States
- Aircraft must have an Alternate Flight Identification issued by a third-party service provider
- Aircraft must be equipped with certified ADS-B avionics that complies with TSO-C166B
- ADS-B avionics performance must be verified (by completing step 1)

Be sure all of the statements above are true before requesting a PIA.

Below is a screenshot of the PIA Application Checklist:

The system will automatically complete an initial assessment to determine your eligibility based in part on information within the performance monitor. Any areas of non-performance will render your aircraft ineligible for a PIA. You will receive immediate feedback as to whether or not your aircraft is eligible for a PIA.

Once eligibility is confirmed, you will be asked to submit the following information:

1. Acknowledgement of the FAA notification of collection and management of personally identifiable information (PII) for the management of PIA assignment and their use in the NAS
2. Acknowledgement of the PIA Articles of Use in the NAS
3. Valid aircraft registration (permanent ICAO aircraft address) for the aircraft that will be assigned the PIA
4. Proof of authorization to use a third-party Flight ID with the identity of the provider
5. Aircraft owner's contact information (phone number, e-mail address, business or home address)
6. Aircraft owner's individual/company/organization Information
7. Requester's contact information (phone number, e-mail address, business or home address)
8. Validation that the aircraft's ADS-B emitter performance is qualified for ADS-B operations (operator will self-validate on website, but the system will check to see that a PAPR report was requested within the past 180 days)
9. Identify whether the PIA is requested for business or personal use.

Step Three: Provide Proof of Third-Party Call Sign

Please send confirmation of your third-party flight ID via email to adsbprivacyicao@faa.gov. You can forward an email or scanned copy of your documentation from your third-party flight ID provider.

Step Four: Verify PIA Installation

You may program the new PIA into your transponder at any time. Follow the guidance provided by your ADS-B equipment manufacturer when making changes to your 24-bit ICAO address.

Note that this is a TEMPORARY ASSIGNMENT. You must complete the remaining steps within 30 calendar days in order to continue using the PIA.

Step Five: Verify PIA Installation

The last step is to obtain a final PAPR to verify your equipment is broadcasting the new PIA. You need to complete another flight in airspace with ADS-B coverage¹. Again, the flight should last at least 30 minutes to ensure all parameters were captured by the performance monitor. Then, proceed to the ADS-B Performance page and request a PAPR. Ensure that the PAPR indicates that your transponder is broadcasting your newly assigned PIA. Then go to the PIA Verification page to validate your installation. You will be asked to confirm that you meet the criteria to verify your PIA using a checklist shown below:

¹ The FAA requires each requester to complete a test flight and use the resulting Performance Report to confirm the installation each time a new ICAO address is installed. For the purposes of this program, the FAA has eased restrictions regarding where these flights should take place. Any ADS-B airspace will suffice for the sake of a PIA test flight. Moreover, the test does not need to be a dedicated flight. Aircraft owners may elect to complete the test as part of any routine flight following the installation of a PIA. The important step is to remember to complete the verification process. Failing to do so may result in the revocation of the PIA assignment. If you cannot perform a flight test within 30 calendar days of receiving your PIA assignment, please respond to the email you received issuing your PIA. The FAA may grant an extension if no other flights by that aircraft have occurred.
