CHAPTER 1
Project Background and Purpose and Need for the Proposed Action

1.1 Introduction

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has prepared this Final Environmental Assessment (EA) to identify the potential environmental effects associated with an FAA Proposed Action to implement a new Instrument Approach Procedure (IAP) to Runway 4L at Boston Logan International Airport (the Airport). This new IAP, the GPS-enabled area navigation for Runway 4L (RNAV [GPS] RWY 4L) procedure, will provide enhanced safety for aircraft approaching Runway 4L as well as the ability for the Airport to be operated more efficiently under poor weather conditions.

Federal actions, such as implementation of new arrival procedures with the potential to cause environmental impacts, must comply with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) of 1969 and other relevant special purpose environmental laws. Requirements for considering environmental impacts of FAA actions are found in FAA Order 1050.1F, Environmental Impacts: Policies and Procedures, which are based on the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) regulations for implementing NEPA at Title 40 of the Code of Federal Regulations Parts 1500-1508 (40 CFR 1500-1508).[1]

In March 2016, the FAA completed a comprehensive Initial Environmental Review (IER) for the permanent implementation of a RNAV GPS IAP to Runway 4L at the Airport.[2] The IER concluded that the proposed procedure qualified for the categorical exclusion (CATEX) found in FAA Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-6.5.g, entitled, "Establishment of Global Positioning System (GPS), Flight Management System (FMS), Area Navigation/Required Navigation Performance (RNAV/RNP) or essentially similar systems that use overlay of existing flight tracks."[3] Additionally, the IER found that extraordinary circumstances as defined in FAA Order 1050.1F do not exist.

Nevertheless, in response to public input received from the community, local, state, and federal elected officials, the FAA, in July 2016, elected to conduct an EA to further study the procedure. Due to budgetary constraints and other exigent circumstances, however,

[1] As permitted by 40 CFR 1506.13, the NEPA review documented in the Final EA was conducted under the regulations at 40 CFR parts 1500-1508 in effect when the NEPA process began, which preceded the updated regulations promulgated on July 16, 2020 and effective to any NEPA process begun after September 14, 2020.

[3] The proposed RWY 4L RNAV procedure also qualified for the FAA Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-6.5, q CATEX.

this effort was delayed. In late 2018/early 2019, the FAA ultimately acquired funding for a contractor to assist in analyzing the potential environmental impacts and in documenting the analyses through this EA. This effort eventually began in October 2019 and the present EA is being prepared using the format and processes defined in FAA Order 1050.1F, Section 6-2.

The format of this EA is as follows: Chapter 1 provides information on the project background and describes the purpose and need for the Proposed Action. Chapter 2 presents the alternatives for the Proposed Action. Chapter 3 and Chapter 4 provide full disclosure of the affected environment and environmental consequences, respectively, that are associated with implementation of the Proposed Action. Appendix A contains the IER on the RWY 4L RNAV GPS IAP, Appendix B provides a technical summary of the noise modeling and Appendix C shows the non-aviation anticipated projects within the General Study Area (GSA) for consideration of cumulative impacts. Appendix D provides a table of state-listed threatened, endangered, and special concern species and Appendix E provides copies of relevant communication with the public on the development of the procedure. Appendix F contains a list of local stakeholders and their associated agencies (where applicable) who were informed about the Draft EA. Finally, the listings of historic properties and parks in the GSA are provided in Appendices G and H, respectively.

1.2 Purpose and Need for the Proposed Action

The FAA's continuing mission is to provide the safest, most efficient aerospace system in the world. The purpose of the Proposed Action is to improve the safety and enhance the efficiency of the National Airspace System (NAS) by establishing and implementing an RNAV (GPS) IAP to Runway 4L at the Airport.

The Proposed Action is needed because currently there is no IAP of any kind available for approaches to Runway 4L. As such, aircraft arriving to Runway 4L lack vertical and lateral guidance during the approach phase of flight. Among large airports in the United States, like Boston Logan International Airport, it is rare to have an arrival runway for commercial traffic that does not have an IAP with vertical and lateral electronic guidance. As pilots do not have instrument references allowing electronic guidance of the flight, they must "hand-fly" their aircraft when approaching Runway 4L, and can only do so in good weather, known as Visual Meteorological Conditions (VMC). This creates additional cockpit workload during a critical phase of flight (approach to landing). Further, the lack of an IAP limits the operational flexibility of the Airport, particularly during poor weather when Runway 4L is not available for arrivals.

Consequently, during poor weather, known as Instrument Meteorological Conditions (IMC), the aircraft arrival rate (AAR) at the Airport is reduced which, in turn, causes delays further upstream in the NAS. Moreover, during extended periods of IMC, the arrival delays to the Airport multiply as the delayed AAR cannot support the scheduled arrivals. This delayed arrival situation can also cause flight arrival times to be pushed back later into the nighttime hours or possibly result in cancelling flights.

Additionally, the implementation of the Proposed Action would serve a secondary safety benefit by largely supplanting the need for small, maneuverable aircraft to fly a visual approach to Runway 4L after conducting an initial ILS approach to Runway 15R. This procedure, primarily used in marginal VMC, is relatively challenging and requires significant maneuvering at low altitude, followed by a short final to Runway 4L. Aircraft flying this procedure must keep the runway in sight at all times, as well as maintain visual separation with any aircraft landing on Runway 4R. The high workload required of this procedure has resulted in multiple runway incursions and other incidents in recent years. Additional information about this procedure and associated runway incursions and safety incidents is contained in Chapter 2 of this EA.

The purpose of the Proposed Action is to address these needs by implementing an RNAV (GPS) IAP to Runway 4L at the Airport. The Proposed Action will allow for a stabilized approach with vertical and lateral guidance. This will reduce pilot workload and provide an approach for aircraft to land on Runway 4L in IMC, which will reduce delays at the Airport and upstream throughout the NAS. The additional IAP for aircraft approaching the Airport in IMC during the Northeast configuration is anticipated to increase operational efficiency to a degree that would correspond to an additional 255 net annual arrivals based on an expected reduction in the number of canceled operations. While the Proposed Action will usually only be assigned to landing aircraft during IMC, it, like other published arrival procedures at the Airport, will also be available for flight crews to use on an advisory basis at their discretion when cleared for a visual approach no later than 5 miles from the runway.

Overall, the Proposed Action will create an IAP that meets the criteria of enhancing both safety and efficiency within the NAS. The implementation of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure where no instrument procedure currently exists will improve safety by providing pilots with a stabilized approach and enabling Air Traffic Control (ATC) to more precisely monitor each aircraft both vertically and laterally along the arrival track. The implementation of this procedure will also create efficiency benefits for the Airport in IMC by decreasing arrival delays.

Alternatives

This section describes the Proposed Action and Alternatives, discusses the methodology used to identify alternatives that meet the Purpose and Need, and presents alternatives that were considered, but did not meet the Purpose and Need and therefore were not carried forward for analysis. FAA Order 1050.1F requires a discussion of alternatives in an EA that the approving official will consider. FAA Order 1050.1F, Chapter 6, Section 6-2.1(d) states the following:

> There is no requirement for a specific number of alternatives or a specific range of alternatives to be included in an EA. An EA may limit the range of alternatives to the proposed action and no action when there are no unresolved conflicts concerning alternative uses of available resources. Alternatives are to be considered to the degree commensurate with the nature of the proposed action and agency experience with the environmental issues involved. Generally, the greater the degree of impacts, the wider the range of alternatives that should be considered. The preferred alternative, if one has been identified, should be indicated. For alternatives considered but eliminated from further study, the EA should briefly explain why these were eliminated.

2.1 Existing Conditions (No Action Alternative)

Boston Logan International Airport (the Airport) is a large commercial service airport in Massachusetts, with more than 20 million enplanements and approximately 427,000 aircraft movements in 2019.[4] It is the primary passenger airport for southern New England as well as the region's busiest passenger service airport. Of the six runways available at the Airport, Runway 4L is the only runway that typically handles commercial aircraft arrivals but does not have an IAP available to assist landings. An IAP is a series of predetermined maneuvers that facilitate the orderly transfer of an aircraft under Instrument Flight Rules (IFR) from the beginning of the initial approach to a landing or to a point from which a landing may be made visually. IFR are rules and regulations established by the FAA to govern flight under conditions in which flight by outside visual reference is not safe. When such conditions are present, these are known as IMC. IFR flight depends upon flying by reference using instruments in the flight deck, and navigation is accomplished by reference to electronic signals.

Currently, while operating in VMC, aircraft approaching Runway 4L to land are expected to maintain visual separation from other traffic at all times. As these aircraft presently lack electronic vertical and lateral guidance to the runway, pilots must “hand-fly” the aircraft and visually judge aircraft altitude and course alignment when arriving Runway 4L, leading to additional cockpit workload during a critical phase of flight. Furthermore, since the runway is not available during periods of IMC, operational flexibility and runway capacity are significantly limited during these times. During periods of significant delay, flights can often land much later than originally scheduled, potentially causing noise impacts to communities during late-night hours. Cancelling flights during periods of significant delay is not uncommon.

Presently, arrivals to Runway 4L primarily take place in VMC or marginal VMC (when the ceiling is 1,000 to 3,000 feet above field elevation (AFE), and/or visibility is three to five nautical miles (NM)) when the Airport is in the Northeast configuration--illustrated in Figure 2-1. The Northeast configuration consists of departures using Runways 4L, 4R, and 9, and arrivals using Runways 4L and 4R. As shown in Figure 2-1, Runways 4L and 4R are oriented in the northeast direction while Runway 9 is oriented to the east. When the Airport is in the Northeast configuration, Runways 4R and 4L are designated as the primary and secondary arrival runways, respectively. Runway 4L is only used in times of heavy demand for Runway 4R, and aircraft are usually only assigned to Runway 4L when the final approach queue for Runway 4R extends beyond 10 NM from the Airport.

Runway 4L is considered the secondary arrival runway for a variety of reasons;

- It does not have an instrument approach associated with it.
- In order to allow aircraft to have time to taxi across the approach area of Runway 4L to get to Runway 9 and Runway 4R for departures, Runway 4L arrivals require an expanded arrival separation interval of four to five miles between each aircraft, which contributes to a longer runway occupancy time compared to Runway 4R, which can use standard separation. The expanded interval is also necessary to facilitate Runway 4L departures.
- The layout of the taxiway network associated with Runway 4L necessitates that aircraft must slow to a near-stop in order to clear the runway. This also contributes to an increased runway occupancy time.

Due to the operational constraints associated with arrivals on Runway 4L, it is expected to remain the secondary runway in any future Northeast configuration scenarios, regardless of the presence of additional procedures to the runway.

2.1.1 Existing Situations for Use of Runway 4L

The existing use of Runway 4L is effectively described by the following three operational scenarios:

Visual 4L Arrivals

When the Airport is in the Northeast configuration and operating in VMC, Runway 4L arrivals are generally vectored to a position southwest of the Airport and west of the Instrument Landing System (ILS) localizer straight-in approach to Runway 4R. Controllers instruct pilots of Runway 4L arrivals to report when they can both visually locate traffic closer to the Airport that is on approach to Runway 4R, and when they have Runway 4L in sight. Once both these conditions are met, the controller has received the report and the pilot conducting the approach to Runway 4L confirms they are maintaining visual separation from the aircraft landing runway 4R, the controller will then issue a clearance to execute a visual approach to Runway 4L. After the clearance is issued, it continues to be the responsibility of the pilot conducting the approach to maintain visual separation from other aircraft while safely completing the approach to Runway 4L.

Below is an example of what the communications between an arriving aircraft ('Bostonian 123') and ATC for a visual Runway 4L approach might entail:

> TRACON: Bostonian 123 fly heading 070, report Runway 4L in sight. Caution Bostonian 456, an Airbus A321 on short final to Runway 4R at your 2 o'clock and four and one-half miles.
> Bostonian 123: Heading 070 for Bostonian 123 and we have the company A321 in sight.
> TRACON: Bostonian 123 maintain visual separation from the Airbus A321.
> Bostonian 123: Wilco.
> Bostonian 123 (upon visual identification of Runway 4L): Bostonian 123 has Runway 4L in sight.
> TRACON: Roger Bostonian 123 you are cleared for the visual approach to Runway 4L. Maintain visual separation from traffic landing Runway 4R.

Visual Change of Runway from ILS Runway 4R to Runway 4L on Final Approach

While the vast majority of aircraft landing on Runway 4L perform a visual approach, there are two additional maneuvers used to land aircraft on Runway 4L after initially following approach procedures to other runways – a visual change of runway maneuver and a visual transition to Runway 4L after conducting an IAP to Runway 15. The latter procedure is limited to small, maneuverable aircraft. The visual change of runway maneuver allows the controller to approve an aircraft to land on an adjacent parallel runway instead of its initially designated runway. The visual change of runway maneuver to land on Runway 4L involves aircraft arriving from the south in VMC or marginal VMC. Aircraft that will ultimately arrive on Runway 4L will begin following the ILS straight-in approach procedure to Runway 4R at about 15 NM from the Airport. An ILS is a type of IAP that uses ground-based equipment to provide precision vertical and lateral guidance to arriving aircraft and is used in this case to align arriving aircraft with the compass heading shared by Runway 4L and Runway 4R. When an arriving aircraft is approximately five NM from the Airport, the controller may issue a clearance to execute a runway change to land on Runway 4L if the Airport and other traffic are visible to the pilot.

It is important to note that the use of the visual change of runway maneuver to Runway 4L does not change the Airport's arrival rate. All aircraft using this approach are considered to be approaching Runway 4R for ATC separation purposes and are treated as a single arrival stream. Generally, an aircraft will only change runways to land on Runway 4L if an operational constraint to using Runway 4R exists. Examples of potential operational constraints that could result in the runway change maneuver to Runway 4L being used include the clearance of departures from Runway 4R or a tall vessel passing through Boston Harbor and temporarily obstructing the Runway 4R approach path.

Visual Approach to Runway 4L after conducting ILS RWY 15R approach in visual conditions

During periods of marginal VMC, pilots are not able to clearly see the airport environment and often utilize IAPs to assist with the approach to the airport. In cases where a suitable IAP does not exist for the preferred landing runway, pilots are able to utilize an IAP approaching a different runway before transitioning to a visual approach to land on the preferred runway. When traffic and weather (VMC or marginal VMC) conditions dictate, small, maneuverable Category A or Category B aircraft (limited to approach speeds of 120 knots or below) can follow the ILS straight-in approach to Runway 15R until descent below the cloud ceiling. Once the aircraft is below the cloud ceiling and has the Airport in sight, the pilot can execute a circling maneuver to the south to land on Runway 4L. This maneuver consists of the aircraft remaining clear of clouds (and with the Airport in sight at all times), then maneuvering to a visual landing on Runway 4L. Pilots are responsible for maintaining visual separation from other traffic (including traffic landing Runway 4R) at all times when executing this maneuver. As this approach requires significant manual low-altitude maneuvering while maintaining visual separation from other traffic in busy airspace at an airport with multiple intersecting runways, it can be a challenging and potentially hazardous maneuver. Numerous safety-related incidents have occurred with aircraft flying this procedure, including some particularly notable recent incidents as described below:

- In October 2016, a DeHavilland Dash 8 passed directly over an Airbus A320 at low altitude while executing a go-around following an errant approach to Runway 4L's parallel Taxiway Bravo instead of the runway itself.
- In October 2019, a Cessna 414, after receiving clearance to execute a final approach to land Runway 4L, mistakenly lined up with Runway 9 instead, where another aircraft was preparing for takeoff. Once the pilot of the Cessna realized there was another aircraft on the runway, he executed a go-around at low altitude, overflying a third aircraft by an estimated 300 feet.
- In October 2019, a DeHavilland Dash 8, when flying the left downwind leg to Runway 4L after departing the ILS 15R approach course, extended the left downwind more than expected due to excessive airspeed on that leg. This resulted in ATC cancelling the approach clearance and instructing the aircraft to complete a go-around due to the imminent risk of an airspace incursion.

The demonstrated propensity for aircraft to mistakenly line up on another runway, or even a taxiway, when executing this approach is a major point of concern for ATC personnel at the Airport. Additionally, it is often difficult for ATC to visually tell when an aircraft is incorrectly lined up to approach a parallel runway or taxiway. Instead, they rely on a system known as Airport Surface Detection Equipment (ASDE). which helps alert controllers to potential runway conflicts by monitoring movement on runways and taxiways. The ASDE system has the capability to provide ASDE-X Taxiway Arrival Prediction (ATAP) alerts, which specifically alert controllers when an aircraft is incorrectly lining up with a taxiway.

The Airport does not currently have an ATAP implementation available for aircraft flying the visual approach to Runway 4L after flying the ILS RWY 15R procedure because the curved taxiway surfaces responsible for capturing aircraft on this procedure do not meet standard alerting parameters for ATAP optimization, which are defined as the longer of 20 seconds or 3,000 feet from the runway threshold. However, FAA National Airway Systems Engineering was able to optimize this curved region to provide the 20 second alert time capability, with a possible caveat being that the system was expected to generate additional "nuisance" alerts under this scenario.

To allow themselves to test the ATAP implementation along the curved region that would capture aircraft flying the visual approach to Runway 4L after flying the ILS RWY 15R, the Massachusetts Port Authority (Massport) recently requested a waiver for an ASDE upgrade that would give ATC personnel the ability to exercise good judgment when responding to ATAP alerts for arrivals flying this procedure instead of issuing mandatory go-around instructions. This ability for ATC personnel to eschew a mandatory go-around was seen as desirable to limit the potential effects of an excessive amount of nuisance alerts during the testing phase. However, this waiver has not been approved for the following reasons:

- An update to FAA Order JO 7110.65, effective June 17, 2021, specifically states that a controller must issue a go-around instruction when an arrival aircraft activates an ATAP alert to a taxiway. This updated order conflicts with the waiver request to not be required to issue go-around instructions in this situation. (It should be noted that ATC personnel were aware of the pending FAA Order update before June 2021 which allowed them to prepare the procedure to comply with the updated Order.)

- This procedure does not allow aircraft to be flown in such a way that satisfies strongly-encouraged FAA stabilized approach criteria.
- Incidents of aircraft attempting landing on the wrong runway or on a taxiway have increased across the NAS. In many of these cases, controllers have not been able to recognize these occurrences in a timely fashion.
- The AAR at the airport will not be significantly impacted, as this procedure is currently infrequently used, even when the airport is in marginal VMC conditions.

As a result, the visual approach to Runway 4L after conducting an ILS approach to Runway 15R will continue to be in use, but will not have an ASDE alert system in place for aircraft flying it, which means ATC personnel will not have a non-visual means of determining if an aircraft flying this procedure is incorrectly lined up to land on a taxiway. The ability to implement an alternative procedure that can handle the small, maneuverable aircraft that use this procedure would represent a safety benefit to the Airport.

Of the three described methods that pilots can currently follow to land on Runway 4L, this procedure is used far less frequently than other visual approaches to the runway.

2.1.2 Current Approach Procedures for Runway 4R

Since Runway 4L is only used concurrently with Runway 4R, any changes to the use of Runway 4L affect Runway 4R operations. Runway 4R is the primary arrival runway under the Northeast configuration and has two IAPs available for use: “ILS or LOC RWY 4R”, and the “RNAV (GPS) RWY 4R.” While there are subtle differences between these two procedures with respect to visibility and ceiling minimums and when they are available, both use the same fixes and produce similar tracks over the ground. A waypoint is a designated geographical location used for route definition or progress-reporting purposes and is defined in terms of latitude/longitude coordinates.

When utilizing these IAPs, aircraft approaching the Airport are vectored to the final approach course within the final approach controller’s airspace, to a point that is laterally separated from other aircraft, where a pilot can intercept the glideslope and make a stabilized approach to the runway. Usually, this results in aircraft intercepting the final approach course near waypoint WINNI, which serves as the Intermediate Fix (IF) for the two procedures. (However, depending on operational factors, the final approach controller will sometimes vector aircraft to the approach inside of WINNI, resulting in a shorter final approach.) From WINNI, aircraft will transition through the fix at or above 4,000 feet above mean sea level (MSL) at a magnetic course of 035 degrees. Aircraft then proceed down the final approach course, crossing over waypoint NABBO at or above 3,000 feet MSL. For the ILS RWY 4R and ILS or LOC RWY 4R procedures, aircraft will proceed to waypoint MILTT and intercept the ILS glideslope at 1,700 feet MSL. In the case of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4R, aircraft will still proceed to cross MILTT at 1,700 feet MSL, but since this is a non-precision approach (which provides lateral, but not vertical flight path guidance), MILTT functions as a Final Approach Fix (FAF) for this procedure. Instead of intercepting the ILS glideslope at MILTT, aircraft performing the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4R approach will fly to the minimum descent altitude (MDA) or decision altitude (DA) before landing, depending on aircraft equipage.

Aircraft that are equipped for Localizer Performance with Vertical Guidance (LPV) or Lateral Navigation/Vertical Navigation (LNAV/VNAV) can fly to their respective DAs, while aircraft equipped only with LNAV must fly to the MDA instead. The effect of the different minimums on this procedure is that there can be slight differences in altitudes inside of the FAF for aircraft that are equipped with LPV or LNAV/VNAV when compared with aircraft equipped for LNAV only. Additional information on the differences between LPV and LNAV/VNAV systems is also available in Section 2.2.2.3. Approach plates showing graphical representations of these procedures are available in Appendix A.

2.2 Identification of Potential Alternatives

The FAA endeavored to identify reasonable alternatives to meet the Purpose and Need described in Chapter 1. A reasonable alternative is one that would accomplish the Purpose and Need for the Proposed Action while being a feasible action. The FAA has prioritized the implementation of NextGen and alternatives meriting consideration should emphasize safety and increased efficiency. Safety improvements associated with alternatives might include elements such as improved lateral and vertical guidance in VMC and the ability to use additional runways in IMC. Efficiency improvements could come from reducing arrival delays, potentially reducing the volume of delayed aircraft arriving during late-night and early-morning hours. Such efficiency benefits also lead to environmental benefits via less fuel burn and less aircraft noise during late-night and early-morning hours. Alternatives that involve procedures on other runways, other modes of transportation, use of other airports, or changes in airport use may have the potential to decrease air travel or shift traffic to other airports, but these alternatives do not meet the Purpose and Need for the Proposed Action.

2.2.1 FAA Proposed Action

The Proposed Action is the implementation of a publicly available (published) RNAV IAP to Runway 4L at the Airport. The proposed RNAV procedure will provide lateral and vertical guidance, enabling continuous descent to the runway and offering a more predictable, consistent, and stabilized approach path, thus improving safety. Based on coordination with FAA's air traffic personnel in charge of managing the BOS airspace, the proposed procedure is expected to be used in three specific situations, (1) when the Airport is experiencing IMC, (2) when the Airport is experiencing VMC and a flight is cleared for a visual approach to Runway 4L, and (3) when the Airport is experiencing VMC and a flight is cleared for the new procedure. Like all precision IAPs, the procedure will be available for advisory use and can be used at the discretion of the flight crew for lateral and vertical guidance during periods of VMC. Advisory use of the procedure is only available to flight crews when aircraft have been cleared for a visual approach to Runway 4L – prior to this point in the approach (no later than 5 miles from the runway threshold) crews must continue to follow ATC instructions as they do today. Generally, advisory use of the procedure would only occur within the final few miles of the approach, a point at which most aircraft have long been established on the approach path. Thus, the vast majority of aircraft, even those using the procedure for advisory purposes, are not expected to experience significant changes in flight paths after the implementation of the procedure.

Use cases associated with the FAA Proposed Action are described in more detail below:

Case (1): IMC: During IMC, an aircraft would be cleared by ATC for use of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure beginning at the Initial Approach Fix (IAF) AAALL or the IF LVRON. Runway 4L and Runway 4R have a centerline separation of 1,500 feet, well below the threshold of 4,300 feet minimum separation between runways that is required to carry out dual simultaneous independent instrument approaches. Consequently, given that Runway 4L is the secondary runway when Runway 4R is in use, the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure must be flown as a dependent simultaneous approach with more complex separation requirements from aircraft flying the ILS RWY 4R approach.[5] Due to these factors, utilization of this case is expected to be limited to times when arrival traffic is heaviest.

Case (2): VMC (when receiving a clearance for a visual approach to Runway 4L): During VMC, an aircraft that is cleared for a visual approach to Runway 4L can utilize any available guidance on an advisory basis (i.e., without controller involvement) to improve safety and reduce fuel consumption. As the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L approach will be the only IAP available for Runway 4L, it will be available for pilot use during VMC. Pilots will fly similar ground tracks as they presently do when flying visual approaches to Runway 4L (as ATC operations during VMC are not expected to change relative to current operations), but will have guidance available during the final straight-in flight segment.

Case (3): VMC (when receiving a clearance for the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L approach): During VMC (or marginal VMC), an aircraft may be cleared by ATC for use of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure at the IAP AAALL or the IF LVRON. Generally, this will be used by aircraft approaching from the south that presently utilize the Runway 4R ILS and execute a change of runway maneuver to land on Runway 4L when the Airport is in sight. Essentially, aircraft will use the approach the same way it is used in Case (1), the only differences being in ambient weather conditions. The proposed procedure includes two charted transitions, as well as two uncharted transitions requiring ATC radar vectors, as described below:

- NUNZO transition – aircraft arriving from the south transition into the approach procedure at the charted fix NUNZO and follow the charted procedure to the runway from that fix.
- WOONS transition – aircraft arriving from the southwest transition into the approach procedure at the charted fix WOONS and follow the charted procedure to the runway from that fix.
- Cape-area transition – aircraft arriving from Cape-area airports such as Nantucket (ACK), Martha's Vineyard (MVY) and Barnstable (HYA), as well as other points east and southeast, will approach the Airport from the southeast and transition into the procedure north of the IAF AAALL and south of the IF LVRON. It will then follow the charted procedure to the runway. This transition is not charted and requires radar vectors.

[5] FAA JO7110.308C, Appendix A

The proposed procedure is designated as an RNAV (GPS) IAP, which requires that an aircraft flying the procedure remain within one nautical mile of the procedure centerline 95% of the total flight time. It is estimated that an additional 255 annual arrivals will occur due to fewer cancellations once the RNAV 4L procedure is implemented, which combined with the 104 annual arrivals relocated from Runway 4R, are approximately 2.2% of all Runway 4L arrivals from the baseline timeframe (November 1, 2018 through October 31, 2019). For more information on the annual arrival estimate, please refer to Section 4.6.6 and Section B.3 of Appendix B. As the procedure will not be restricted operationally and will be available any time the Airport is in the Northeast configuration, actual use by aircraft already arriving on Runway 4L could occur. A notional level of advisory use of the proposed procedure by aircraft approaching Runway 4L is not able to be accurately captured via modeling because aircraft using precision arrival procedures on an advisory basis usually only do so on short final, a point in the approach in which all aircraft approaching a runway generally fly very similar tracks over the ground. Prior to this point, aircraft are usually being vectored by ATC and fly more dispersed tracks over the ground as a result. Pilots may load the procedure up to track their location and relationship to the runway at any time, but cannot utilize the procedure (e.g. fly the line) for advisory purposes prior to receiving approach clearance from ATC.

Outside of the 359 additional annual arrivals utilizing the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure, estimates of runway use assume that the baseline level of traffic is operationally and meteorologically representative of future years. These represent the only additional arrivals modeled in the Proposed Action. However, as explained in Section 4.6.7, and in response to concerns from the public, the FAA also conducted a sensitivity analysis which assumed a scenario where all arriving traffic to Runway 4L would fly the procedure (including all transitions). The proposed RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure is illustrated in Figure 2-2 and Figure 2-3.

2.2.2 Alternatives Considered but Eliminated from Further Study

2.2.2.1 Memorandum of Understanding between FAA and Massport

In September 2016, the FAA and Massport signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) detailing how they will work together to address aviation noise from flights at the Airport. The agencies agreed that Massport is responsible for recommending flight procedure changes to the FAA. Massport engages with the Massachusetts Community Advisory Committee (MCAC) to coordinate recommendations. These efforts produced two sets of recommendations for implementation of revised procedures, known as the Block 1 and Block 2 recommendations. Procedures associated with Block 1 were characterized by clear predicted noise benefits, limited operational and technical barriers, and a lack of adverse environmental justice impacts. Procedures associated with Block 2 exhibit greater complexity due to potential operational barriers, technical barriers, or environmental justice impacts.

Block 1 technical recommendations were released by Massport and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) in December 2017.[6] A subset of these recommendations were deemed to be preliminarily feasible, but had not been validated or flight checked by the FAA at the time of the publishing of this EA. It is also important to note that since meeting the Purpose and Need involves obtaining safety and efficiency gains associated with implementing lateral and vertical guidance for traffic landing on Runway 4L at the Airport, the Block 1 technical recommendations do not meet the Purpose and Need for this EA. The Block 2 technical recommendations were discussed with MCAC in September 2020 and then fully released to the public in June 2021. The Block 2 procedure recommendations recommend approach procedure changes into Runways 22L and 4R and departure procedure changes out of Runways 22L, 22R, 27, and 33L. The Purpose and Need of this project concerns improving approach procedures into Runway 4L, which is outside the scope of the Block 2 Recommendations and there the Block 2 procedure recommendations do not meet the Purpose and Need. Because this alternative would not meet the Purpose and Need, it was determined not to be reasonable and eliminated from further study.

2.2.2.2 Install an Instrument Landing System for Runway 4L

Although the fundamental objective of the Proposed Action is to improve safety and reduce delays through implementation of an RNAV (GPS) procedure and to bring the Runway 4L approach procedures into conformance with national policy, multiple alternatives were considered and evaluated to determine feasibility. An early alternative considered was the installation of an ILS for Runway 4L. An ILS is a very common method of providing precision lateral and vertical guidance to landing aircraft and is extremely reliable and well understood. However, the land upon which an ILS would have to be installed is expensive, would involve the purchase of approximately 25 to 30 residential units and lots, and would require the closing of a portion of a local street. Additionally, construction, testing, and implementation of the ILS itself are activities that carry additional costs and complexities. As such, this alternative was eliminated early in the evaluation process as unreasonable.[7]

2.2.2.3 RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Alternative Designs

After the elimination of the ILS option, focus turned to an RNAV (GPS) procedure, which was the only realistic option for a procedure type that would be able to provide the necessary level of precision to facilitate safe, efficient, simultaneous dependent approaches to Runway 4L and Runway 4R. With respect to the design of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP, alternatives considered for an RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP must adhere to two requirements:

(1) Mitigation of wake encounters pursuant to FAA Order 7110.308C – Simultaneous Dependent Approaches to Closely Spaced Parallel Runways due to the proximity of Runway 4R approaches.
(2) Conformance with Performance Based Navigation (PBN) design parameters established by FAA Order 8260.58A – United States Standard for Performance Based Navigation (PBN) Instrument Procedure Design – Including Change 1 and 2.

Accordingly, the implementation of an RNAV (GPS) IAP for Runway 4L requires consideration of the following[8]:

- A survey of obstacles along the approach path
- Ensuring Runway 4L is properly marked for an IAP
- Selection of an appropriate approach course relative to Runway 4R
- Selection of an appropriate glide path angle (GPA), DA, and minimum visibility for the IAP
- Coordination with both Boston Terminal Radar Approach Control Facility (TRACON) and Airport Air Traffic Control Tower (ATCT) personnel

As described in Section 2.2.1, the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP will be flown as a simultaneous offset instrument approach (SOIA) in conjunction with aircraft flying the ILS RWY 4R due to the lack of horizontal separation between the two runways as well as the designation of Runway 4R as the primary runway when the Airport is in the Northeast configuration. A major concern when running dual simultaneous approaches to runways that do not have at least 4,300 feet of separation between runway centerlines is the propensity for wake turbulence encounters. Wake turbulence involves atmospheric disturbances that form behind an aircraft as it moves through the air. Other aircraft encountering these disturbances can experience significant turbulence and, in some cases, loss of control. While loss of control is usually a recoverable event at high altitudes, a wake turbulence encounter at low altitudes can be extremely hazardous for any aircraft and could potentially result in an accident.

In order to mitigate wake encounters associated with operations approaching Runway 4R, three methods may be employed:

[8] Air Traffic Initial Environmental Review, RWY 4L RNAV (GPS) IAP, Federal Aviation Administration, March 2016.

(1) Arrival operations on the two runways should be dependent with aircraft grouped in leader-trailer pairs with the lead aircraft approaching Runway 4R and the trailing aircraft approaching Runway 4L. In this situation, limiting the size and weight of the lead aircraft of the pair would also limit the magnitude of the wake potentially encountered by the trailing aircraft. Analysis of this wake mitigation measure indicated additional mitigation measures would need to be implemented. See Figure 2-4 for an example of dependent runway operations.
(2) Ensuring the glide path of the trailing aircraft on Runway 4L is higher than that of the leading aircraft on Runway 4R could reduce the magnitude of wake encountered.
(3) Ensuring adequate separation between the flight tracks traveled over the ground by the leading and trailing aircraft would also mitigate the impact of wake encounters.

For RNAV (GPS) procedures that offer both horizontal and vertical guidance, two approach types are offered – LPV and LNAV/VNAV. LPV approaches use the Wide Area Augmentation System (WAAS) to provide sensitivities very similar to that of a Category 1 ILS. LNAV/VNAV approaches utilize an internally generated glideslope based on either WAAS or a barometric VNAV system. Generally, an LPV approach will have a lower DA than an LNAV/VNAV approach due to the greater precision offered by WAAS lateral and vertical guidance.

To ensure the GPA of the leading aircraft on Runway 4R would be lower than that of the trailing aircraft on Runway 4L, consideration was given to lowering the established GPA for Runway 4R as well as raising the Runway 4L glideslope. A modeled alternative lowering the Runway 4R GPA was found to result in a reduction of the landing distance available and determined to be infeasible. Conversely, alternatives raising the Runway 4L GPA were found to result in fewer wake encounters experienced by aircraft executing LPV approaches when compared with wake encounters experienced by aircraft approaching Runway 4R with standard in-trail separation.

For aircraft on Runway 4L executing LNAV/VNAV approaches, the wake encounters experienced varied according to outside temperature. Aircraft traveling in temperatures that vary from the International Standard Atmosphere value of 59 degrees Fahrenheit (°F) fly either slightly lower or higher GPAs than indicated by aircraft altimeters due to the manner in which atmospheric physics and barometric altimeters interact. Temperatures lower than 59°F result in altimeter readings slightly lower than the actual glide path, while warmer temperatures result in altimeter readings higher than the actual glide path being flown. Accordingly, cooler temperatures resulted in lower GPAs flown on approach to Runway 4L and an increase in wake encounters experienced, and warmer temperatures resulted in higher GPAs flown and a decrease in wake encounters experienced.

In order to address variation in the effects of wake encounters associated with temperature on aircraft using the LNAV/VNAV procedure, four alternatives were evaluated, three of which were rejected from further consideration. The rejected alternatives were considered unsuitable due to accessibility, safety, and complexity reasons. The idea of limiting the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP to an LPV-only approach was eliminated from consideration as many aircraft are not equipped with WAAS and are limited to flying GPS approaches in LNAV/VNAV mode, limiting the usability of an LPV-only procedure. The other two alternatives, which both centered on modifying the GPA to be generally steeper than the standard 3.1° were not accepted by pilots and controllers. For pilots, a steeper GPA results in higher descent rates on approach, which erodes safety margin by decreasing the time that pilots have to react to unexpected circumstances on approach. Controllers viewed publishing multiple GPAs as a complicated alternative to mitigate potential wake turbulence encounters. Additionally, no criteria exist to support multiple published GPAs based on air temperature. The accepted alternative of a standard 3.1° GPA combined with a 2.0 degree westward offset approach course was carried forward as part of the Proposed Action These four potential enhancements to the Proposed Action are summarized in Table 2.2-1.

ALTERNATIVES TO MITIGATE WAKE ENCOUNTERS DUE TO TEMPERATURE VARIATIONS

Alternative Description	Determination
Limit the Runway 4L RNAV (GPS) IAP to the LPV procedure.	• Several Airlines serving the Airport objected because their aircraft are not equipped for the LPV procedure. ELIMINATED
Increase the Runway 4L GPA to a value larger than 3.1° reducing the wake encounter probability to an acceptable level at lower temperatures.	• Some pilots objected to such a steep GPA during warm temperatures as less safe (due to the associated increase in descent rate). • FAA Order 8260.3C (2-6-1) states that the Category D (aircraft with approach speeds of 141 knots to 165 knots) aircraft 3.1° slope is the maximum allowable glide path angle. ELIMINATED
Publish multiple GPAs based on the temperature (e.g., 3.4° GPA for 0ºF to 35ºF; 3.2° GPA for 36ºF to 72ºF; and 3.0° GPA for 73ºF to 105ºF).	• Controllers objected to this alternative as being complicated, thus more error-prone and a safety risk. • There are no criteria established that would allow multiple approach descent angles to be published for an instrument approach predicated on air temperature. • FAA Order 8260.3C (2-6-1) states that the Category D aircraft 3.1° slope is the maximum allowable GPA. ELIMINATED
Combination of 3.1° GPA and 2.0° westward offset approach course, retaining LNAV/VNAV approach as an option	• Selected after investigating alternative offset angles • Provides the required wake mitigation • Is compliant with Order 8260.58 and was acceptable to controllers, pilots, and airlines CARRIED FORWARD

2.2.2.4 Enhance Arrival Rates on Alternative Runways

From a theoretical perspective, increased AAR on other IAP runways could reduce delays, but this would not meet the Purpose and Need because this action would not fundamentally increase safety. Rather, increasing AAR on other runways would have a neutral effect on safety at best (assuming sufficient capacity), and at worst a detrimental one as ATC must handle more aircraft in the same time and space. Furthermore, with the Airport in the Northeast configuration only Runway 4L and Runway 4R are used for arrivals under normal circumstance--the Airport would have to determine a method of utilizing Runway 9 and/or Runway 15R for a significant number of landings given that the AAR to Runway 4R cannot be further increased. Both of these options would involve the development of an entirely new operating configuration at the Airport. Neither of these options is operationally feasible, and FAA air traffic specialists have been unable to identify other specific enhancements that increase arrival rates that are compatible with existing safety criteria. Thus, the idea of enhancing arrival rates on other runways is not a feasible alternative to meeting the Purpose and Need.

2.2.2.5 Other Alternatives

In addition to the alternatives discussed above, other alternatives were suggested during the IER public comment period that took place from May 18 to June 30, 2015. Alternatives were suggested by various elected officials as well as members of the general public. The suggested alternatives received during the public comment period that were deemed reasonable generally fell into three categories, summarized in Table 2.2-2. Although the suggested alternatives were considered, all were found to be infeasible as none were consistent with FAA Order 8260.58 – United States Standard for Performance Based Navigation (PBN) Instrument Procedure Design – Including Change 1 and 2.

ALTERNATIVES RECEIVED DURING THE PUBLIC COMMENT PERIOD FOR THE IER

Recommended Alternative	Determination
Utilize a curved approach from Boston Harbor to Runway 4L to reduce overflight of homes.	Not feasible for safety reasons since this requires that Runway 4L arrival traffic cross through the paths of aircraft approaching Runway 4R along its extended centerline while using ILS guidance. Also requires significant low altitude maneuvering in busy airspace.
Utilize a 4° GPA.	Not permitted by Order 8260.58 governing design of RNAV approach procedures. Extremely steep GPAs cannot be flown with electronic guidance in most commercial aircraft, and are uncomfortable and potentially hazardous to fly manually, particularly in aircraft without a dedicated steep approach mode.
Aircraft approach the runway at different azimuth angles to reduce concentration of flight paths.	While the FAA is authorized to consider implementing procedures featuring multiple dispersal headings in some instances, a fanning approach to the runway would increase pilot workload and/or controller workload during a critical phase of flight in busy airspace, thus introducing a potential safety risk. As a result, this alternative does not meet the Purpose and Need of the action.

2.3 Alternatives Carried Forward for Detailed Evaluation

This section provides descriptions of the alternatives selected for analysis in the EA, including the No Action and Proposed Action Alternatives.

2.3.1 No Action Alternative (Maintain Current Operations)

The No Action Alternative would maintain the current suite of available procedures and would not result in the implementation of a new IAP for Runway 4L. As a result, the current general lack of availability of Runway 4L during IMC would remain, and all arrivals to Runway 4L would continue to operate without vertical or lateral guidance. Although it does not meet the Purpose and Need, the No Action Alternative is carried forward for further environmental analysis in accordance with Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) regulations implementing NEPA.

2.3.2 FAA Proposed Action

As described in Section 2.2.1, the FAA developed an RNAV (GPS) arrival procedure to provide an IAP to Runway 4L and increase safety and efficiency at the Airport. This alternative, which was refined and technically evaluated to meet RNAV performance criteria and evaluated for noise impacts, has been carried forward for further environmental analysis.

Because all the other alternatives considered were determined to be unreasonable, the FAA has determined that the No Action and Proposed Action Alternatives represent a reasonable range of alternatives to be evaluated in this EA.

Affected Environment

This chapter describes the existing environmental conditions in those areas with potential to be affected by the Proposed Action. Section 3.2 describes the General Study Area (GSA) delineated for purposes of identifying potential environmental impacts. Section 3.3 lists those environmental resource categories unlikely to be affected by the Proposed Action. Lastly, Section 3.4 describes the baseline conditions of the natural and human environment with potential to be impacted by the Proposed Action.

3.1 General Study Area

The GSA was delineated following a combination of physical and political geographic boundaries adhering to the general area in which aviation activities related to the proposed project could reasonably be anticipated to affect the surrounding environs. This area was determined using procedure flyability lines, flight corridors, and other indicators of potential overflights. The following sub-sections describe the setting and location where the Proposed Action could potentially have an impact. This GSA will be used as the area of potential impact for each of the impact categories in the report below with the lone exception being the historic resources analysis, which is discussed in detail in Section 3.4.5.

3.1.1 Setting and Location

The GSA, as depicted on Figure 3-1, encompasses an area of 1,173 square miles in Massachusetts. The GSA includes all or parts of Middlesex, Norfolk, Plymouth, and Suffolk counties and also includes the entirety of the City of Boston. The GSA has a population of 2,419,614 and includes 27,080 Census blocks (based on 2010 U.S. Census demographic data).

An analysis studying the Proposed Action and the historical flight paths of aircraft that were expected to be using the Proposed Action was performed. Using the results of the study, the GSA was constructed to encompass the geographic area where an aircraft flight path could be affected as a result of the Proposed Action up to 10,000 feet above ground level (AGL) in line with FAA Order 1050.1F.[9] The Airport is located in the northeastern corner of the GSA on the eastern edge of downtown Boston and bordered to the east by the Atlantic Ocean. The GSA extends to the south and west of the Airport since the Proposed Action will occur in the airspace above these areas. There are nine other airports in the GSA all of which are more than 12 miles away from the Airport and are shown in Figure 3-1:

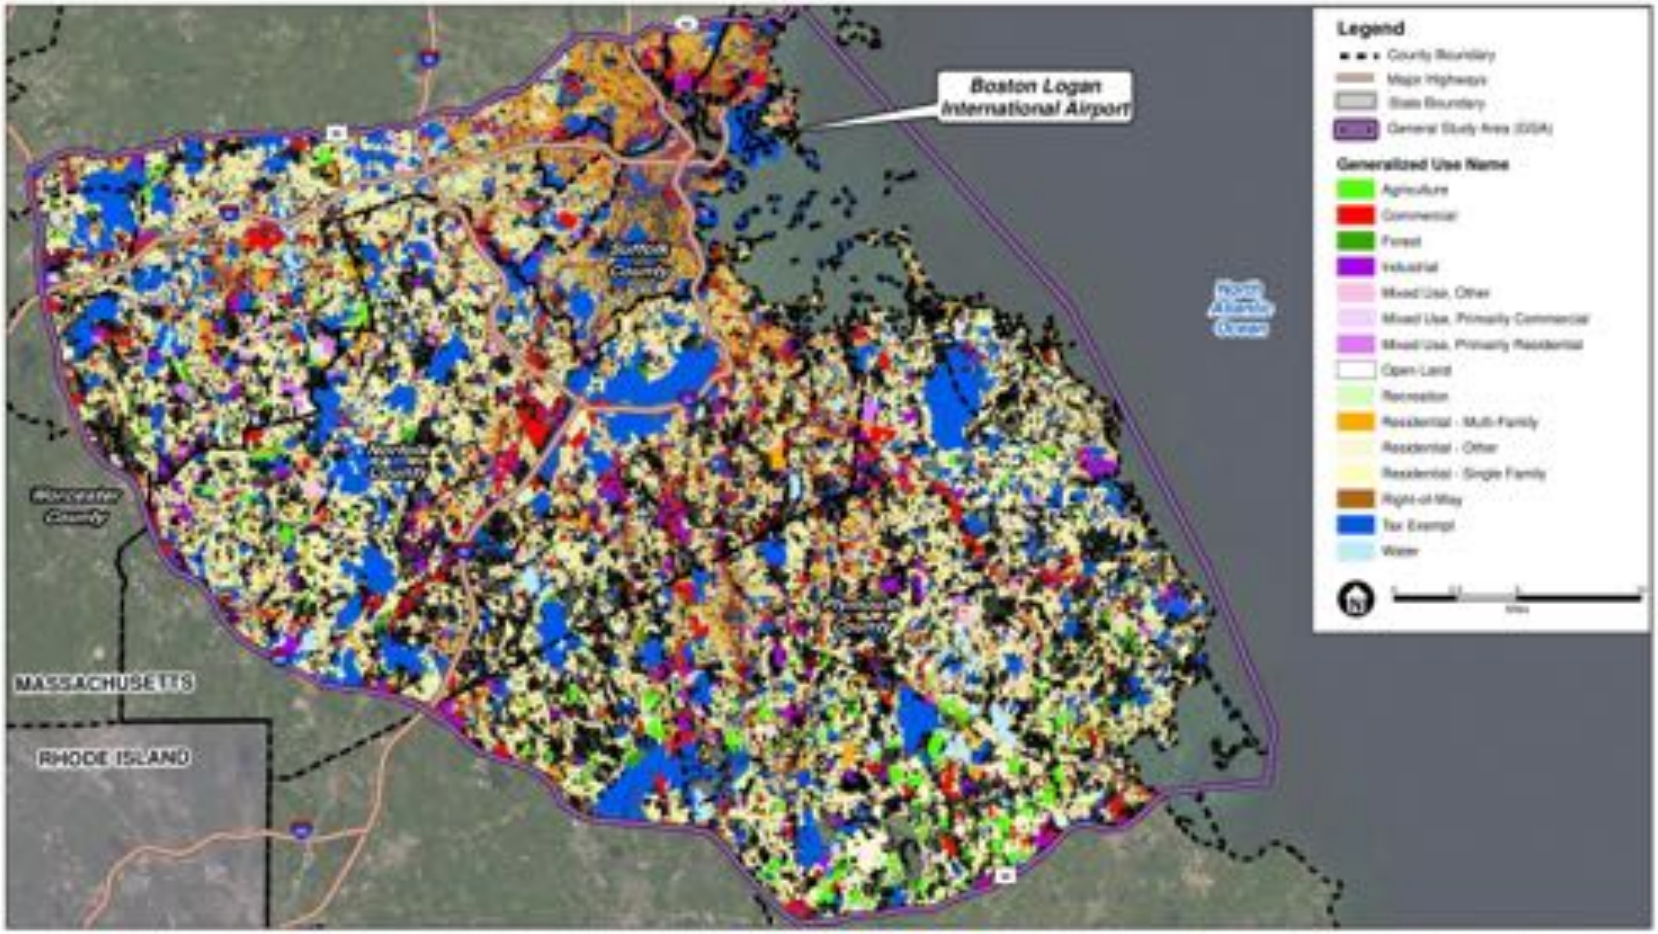
3.1.2 Boston Logan International Airport

The Airport is the primary air service facility serving the Boston Metropolitan Area and as shown on Figure 3-1 is located just one-mile due east of downtown Boston. The Airport serves as a domestic carrier hub while also serving multiple international destinations in North America, South America, Europe, Asia, and Africa. Massport owns and operates the Airport, as well as two additional airports in eastern and central Massachusetts. In 2019, there were 343,778 domestic flights, 54,476 total international flights, and 28,922 general aviation flights totaling 427,176 operations.[10] The Airport operates six runways with two pairs of parallel runways. Runways 4L/22R and 4R/22L are oriented in a northeast/southwest direction and are 7,864 feet and 10,006 feet long respectively. The other parallel runway pair, Runways 15L/33R and 15R/33L, are oriented to the northwest/southeast and are 2,557 and 10,083 feet long respectively. Runway 14/32 is oriented to the northwest/southeast on the southern edge of the airfield and is 5,000 feet long. Runway 9/27, oriented in an east/west direction, is located on the east side of the airfield crossing Runway 15R/33L and is 7,001 feet long.



3.1.3 Existing Land Use

Figure 3-2 depicts generalized land use in the GSA. In the vicinity of the Airport and the City of Boston, land use is dominated by multi-family residential and commercial areas dotted by large, interspersed parcels of tax-exempt land. Looking at the GSA outside the City of Boston, the primary residential land use shifts from multi-family to single-family with a more diverse range of neighboring land uses including agricultural and industrial tracts.

Figure 3-3 depicts existing land uses in the Airport environment. The areas immediately surrounding the Airport are highly urbanized with a variety of land uses within a dense environment. For example, the area closest to the Runway 4L threshold includes the Paul Conley Container Terminal (operated by Massport and considered tax exempt), multiple city parks, a mix of upscale commercial businesses and the City Point and Telegraph Hill neighborhoods of South Boston consisting of dense multi-family housing. Multi-family housing dominates the area with single-family housing increasing as distance from the Airport increases. Commercial and industrial development tend to dominate waterfront areas near the Airport.

3.2 Environmental Resources Unlikely to be Affected by the Proposed Action

Because of the nature of the Proposed Action, neither the Proposed Action nor the No Action Alternative are anticipated to affect certain environmental resource categories identified in the Desk Reference for FAA Order 1050.1F. Accordingly, no further discussion of these environmental resource categories is warranted. These environmental resource categories include:

- Biological Resources – Fish, Plants, and Terrestrial Species Only: the Proposed Action does not result in ground-based disturbance and is therefore not expected to have impacts on any terrestrial organisms considered as part of the Biological Resources impact category.
- Coastal Resources: the Proposed Action is an airspace action with no physical ground-based improvements and is thus not expected to have an impact on any coastal area or coastal ecosystem.
- Farmlands: the Proposed Action is an airspace action with no physical ground-based improvements and will not cause any conversion of farmlands into non-agricultural uses.
- Hazardous Materials, Solid Waste, and Pollution Prevention: the Proposed Action does not include construction or physical improvements and is not expected to have any impact on solid waste, hazardous waste, contaminated sites as defined by FAA Order 1050.1F, and solid waste management.
- Historical, Architectural, Archeological, and Cultural Resources – Archeological Resources Only: the Proposed Action is an airspace action with no physical ground-based improvements and is not expected to have any impact on any archeological sites. Historical, Architectural and Cultural resources are discussed below.
- Natural Resources and Energy Supply: the Proposed Action will not cause demand to exceed the availability of available or future supplies of natural resources as the increase in operations at the Airport due to the Proposed Action is just 255 additional annual aircraft arrivals.
- Socioeconomics, Environmental Justice, and Children's Environmental Health – Socioeconomics and Children's Environmental Health Only: the Proposed Action is not expected to cause any changes to a community tax base, or any disruption or relocation of any community business or houses. It should be noted that air quality impacts are being considered as part of the Air Quality impact category. The Proposed Action is not expected to disproportionately cause a health or safety risk to children. Thus, these parts of this impact category were not considered.
- Light Emissions and Visual Effects: the Proposed Action is an airspace action only. Airspace actions are associated with low levels of light intensity; therefore, the Proposed Action is not expected to cause any changes to visual effects in the GSA. Furthermore, the Proposed Action will affect aircraft in areas that are already overflown by thousands of aircraft annually.
- Water Resources (including Wetlands, Floodplains, Surface Waters, Groundwater, and Wild and Scenic Rivers): the Proposed Action is an airspace action with no physical ground-based improvements and thus is not expected to cause any changes to water resources in the GSA.

3.3 Potentially Affected Environmental Resource Categories

This section describes current conditions in the GSA for those environmental resource categories or sub-categories that the Proposed Action has the potential to affect. These environmental resource categories or sub-categories include:

Air Quality (Section 3.4.1)
Climate (Section 3.4.2)
Biological Resources – Wildlife Only (Section 3.4.3)
Department of Transportation Act, Section 4(f) Properties (Section 3.4.4)
Historical, Architectural, Archeological, and Cultural Resources – Historic, Architectural, and Cultural Resources Only (Section 3.4.5)
Noise and Noise-Compatible Land Use (Section 3.4.6)
Environmental Justice (Section 3.4.7)
Cumulative Impacts (Section 3.4.8)

The following sub-sections discuss each of these environmental resource categories in detail.

3.3.1 Air Quality

This sub-section describes the existing air quality conditions within the GSA, as related to national air quality standards. The Clean Air Act (CAA) is a federal law designed to control national air pollution, and requires the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to establish National Ambient Air Quality Standards (NAAQS) for ambient (i.e., outdoor) concentrations of the following criteria pollutants: carbon monoxide (CO), oxides of nitrogen (NO_x), ground-level ozone (O_3), oxides of sulfur (SO_x), lead (Pb), particulate matter with a diameter of 10 microns or less (PM_{10}), and particulate matter with a diameter of 2.5 microns or less ($PM_{2.5}$). The General Conformity Rule ensures that the actions taken by federal agencies, such as airport construction, do not interfere with a state's plans to attain and maintain national standards for air quality. States must identify geographic areas that do not meet the NAAQS for each criteria pollutant. These areas are then identified as non-attainment areas for the applicable criteria pollutant(s). States must develop a State Implementation Plan (SIP) for non-attainment areas that includes a variety of emission control measures that the state deems necessary to produce attainment of the applicable standard(s) in the future. If a SIP already exists, it must be revised if an area becomes non-attainment for a criteria pollutant.

An area previously designated non-attainment pursuant to the CAA Amendments of 1990 and subsequently re-designated as attainment, is termed a maintenance area. A maintenance area must have a maintenance plan for 20 years following attainment to ensure the air quality standard is maintained.

The mixing height is defined by EPA based on atmospheric turbulence and directly reflects the ability of pollutants emitted above the ground to impact people on the ground. Air traffic activities taking place above the mixing height are exempt from the General Conformity Rule, and criteria pollutants emitted above this height are not considered in the air quality analysis (see Chapter 4).

In the case of Boston, the mixing height is assumed to have an annual average height of 3,000 feet AGL.

Within the GSA, criteria pollutant emission levels associated with current flight operations at the Airport are shown in Table 3.3-1.

A summary of the attainment status of counties within the GSA for applicable NAAQS is shown in Table 3.3-2. Further details about these NAAQS are presented in Sections 3.3.1.1 through 3.3.1.4.

3.3.1.1 Ozone

Ozone at ground level is a harmful air pollutant because of its effects on people and the environment, and it is the main ingredient in “smog." Ozone is not emitted directly into the air but is instead created by chemical reactions between NO_x and VOC. This happens when pollutants emitted by cars, power plants, industrial boilers, refineries, chemical plants, and other sources chemically react in the presence of sunlight.

The entire GSA is part of the Boston-Lawrence-Worcester maintenance area[11] for ozone and contains all or part of the Massachusetts counties of Bristol, Essex, Middlesex, Norfolk, Plymouth, Suffolk, and Worcester. These counties were all designated as moderate nonattainment areas for ozone under the 1997 8-hour NAAQS, prior to the revocation of that standard. Additionally, these counties were also designated as severe nonattainment under the 1979 1-hour NAAQS before that standard was revoked. The 1-hour and 8-hour NAAQS refer to the amount of time over which ozone levels are averaged to meet each standard. None of the counties in the GSA are designated nonattainment or maintenance areas under the 2008 or 2015 8-hour NAAQS for ozone.

3.3.1.2 Particulate Matter (PM_{10})

Particulate matter, or PM_{10}, is the term for a mixture of solid particles and liquid droplets found in the air. Some particles, such as dust, dirt, soot, or smoke, are large or dark enough to be seen with the naked eye. Others are so small they can only be observed using an electron microscope. Particles less than 10 microns in diameter pose problems because they can get deep into lungs, and some may even get into the bloodstream.

None of the counties in the GSA are designated nonattainment under the 1987 PM_{10} standard.

3.3.1.3 Fine Particulate Matter ($PM_{2.5}$)

Fine particulate matter, or $PM_{2.5}$, consists of fine inhalable particles with diameters that are generally 2.5 microns and smaller. Exposure to such particles can affect human cardiovascular and respiratory systems. Numerous scientific studies have linked particle pollution exposure to a variety of problems, including:

- Premature death in people with heart or lung disease
- Nonfatal heart attacks
- Irregular heartbeat
- Aggravated asthma
- Decreased lung function
- Increased respiratory symptoms, such as irritation of the airways, coughing or difficulty breathing.

People with heart or lung diseases, children, and older adults are the most likely to be affected by particle pollution exposure.

None of the counties in the GSA are designated nonattainment under the 2012 NAAQS for $PM_{2.5}$.

3.3.1.4 Carbon Monoxide

CO is a colorless, odorless, and poisonous gas produced by incomplete combustion of hydrocarbon fuels. Most CO emissions are from transportation sources, with the largest share from highway motor vehicles. CO molecules survive in the atmosphere for a period of approximately one month, eventually reacting with oxygen to form carbon dioxide (CO_2). CO levels found in ambient air may reduce the oxygen-carrying capacity of the blood. Health threats are most serious for those with angina or peripheral vascular disease. Exposure to elevated CO levels can cause impairment of visual perception, manual dexterity and learning ability as well as decreased performance of complex tasks.

[11] A maintenance area is a former nonattainment area that has subsequently met or exceeded standards and has been redesignated as such by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Middlesex, Norfolk, and Suffolk Counties had previously been a moderate nonattainment area for the 1971 standard for CO. On April 1, 1995, air quality monitoring enabled EPA to re-designate the area as a maintenance area for the 1971 CO NAAQS.

Worcester County had previously been an unclassified nonattainment area for the 1971 standard for CO. On April 22, 2002, air quality monitoring enabled EPA to re-designate the area as a maintenance area for the 1971 CO NAAQS.

3.3.2 Climate

Greenhouse gases (GHG) are naturally occurring and man-made gases that can trap and disperse heat throughout the global atmosphere. These gases include CO_2, methane (CH_4), nitrous oxide (N_2O), hydrofluorocarbons (HFCs), perfluorocarbons (PFCs), and sulfur hexafluoride (SF_6). Combustion of fossil fuels is responsible for the majority of man-made GHG emissions. For airspace actions, the primary source of GHG is CO_2 emissions from aircraft fuel combustion. According to the EPA, the proportion of national CO_2 emissions attributable to the aviation sector was 3.0% in 2009 and approximately 2.5% in 2018.

CO_2 emissions for current flight operations within the GSA were calculated using the Aviation Environmental Design Tool (AEDT). Table 3.3-3 gives the current flight operations' CO_2 emissions along with the annual and statewide emissions totals for reference. In calendar year 2019, there were 427,176 aircraft operations at the Airport. This inventory only includes emissions associated with operations below the mixing height and does not include ground-based emissions sources on Airport property.

3.3.3 Endangered Species

3.3.3.1 Threatened and Endangered Species

The United States Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) operates the Information for Planning and Consultation (IPaC) service, which provides for the identification of federally-listed threatened and endangered species, candidate species, and designated critical habitat within geographically defined areas. Table 3.3-4 identifies federally-listed threatened and endangered bird and bat species and the counties in the GSA in which they are known or believed to occur. One bat species, the Northern Long-eared Bat, as well as two bird species, the Piping Plover and the Red Knot, are federally-listed as Threatened. One bird species, the Roseate Tern, and one reptile species, the Plymouth Redbelly Turtle, are federally-listed as Endangered. There are no candidate species or designated critical habitats found in the GSA.

The Massachusetts Endangered Species Act (MESA) protects 173 species of animals and 259 species of plants native to Massachusetts. The Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife maintains a database identifying each of the 432 species and its specific status as either Endangered, Threatened, or Special Concern. A complete list of these state-listed species can be found in Appendix D.

3.3.3.2 Migratory Birds

The Migratory Bird Treaty Act of 1918 (MBTA) (16 U.S.C. §§ 703-712) prohibits the taking of any migratory bird and any part, nest, or egg of any such bird, without a permit issued by the USFWS. A “take” under the MBTA is defined as the action or attempt to “pursue, hunt, shoot, capture, collect, or kill.” Federally-listed migratory bird species are managed by the same agency staff responsible for compliance with Section 7 of the MESA. Non-listed migratory bird species are managed by the Migratory Bird Program of the USFWS.

The GSA occurs in a coastal area of Massachusetts with potential for migratory bird travel. Migratory bird management policy is often based on the north-south routes flown by birds to and from northern breeding grounds and southern wintering grounds. Although actual routes vary by species, migratory routes have been grouped into four “flyways” occurring over North America for management purposes. The flyways are representative of broad areas where birds migrate and are often delineated by topographic features. The four North American flyways include the Atlantic, Central, Mississippi, and Pacific flyways. The GSA is located within the Atlantic flyway where individual migration routes tend to overfly river valleys and mountain ranges.

3.3.4 Department of Transportation Act, Section 4(f) Properties

Section 4(f) of the Department of Transportation (DOT) Act of 1966 (codified at 49 U.S.C. Section 303(c)), commonly referred to as Section 4(f), provides, in part, that:

> "…[the] Secretary of Transportation may approve a transportation program or project requiring the use of any publicly owned land from a public park, recreation area, or wildlife or waterfowl refuge of national, state, or local significance or land from a historic site of national, State, or local significance, only if there is no feasible and prudent alternative to the use of such land and the program or project includes all possible planning to minimize harm resulting from the use."[12]

The word "use" includes both direct and indirect or "constructive" impacts to Section 4(f) properties. A direct use is the physical taking of a Section 4(f) property. An indirect impact or "constructive" use does not require a physical taking of a Section 4(f) property. A constructive use would occur when a project would produce an effect, such as excessive noise, that would result in substantial impairment to a property to the degree that the activities, features, or attributes of the property that contribute to its significance or enjoyment are substantially diminished. The determination of use must consider the entire property and not simply the portion of the property being used for a Proposed Action. Privately-owned parks, recreation areas, and wildlife refuges are not subject to Section 4(f).

The FAA has established guidelines for aircraft noise and land use compatibility under 14 CFR Part 150 (Part 150). However, the applicability of Part 150 is limited when assessing noise impacts to areas where quiet and serenity are expected attributes. Accordingly, special consideration is given to parks and natural areas where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute. In these areas the FAA "must consult all appropriate Federal, State, and local officials having jurisdiction over the affected Section 4(f) resources when determining whether project-related noise impacts would substantially impair the resource."

For this analysis, natural areas are areas considered to have recreational or environmental significance and include national parks, wildlife refuges, forests, wildlife management areas, or other similar places. City, county, state, and federally maintained parks and natural areas within the GSA are depicted on Figure 3-4.

3.3.4.1 Section 4(f) Properties in the General Study Area

Section 4(f) properties within the GSA were inventoried using geospatial data from federal, state, and local sources. The sources inventoried include multiple datasets from the MassGIS (Bureau of Geographic Information for the state of Massachusetts), Open Space data from the City of Boston, and parks data from the City of Quincy. A total of 11,803 Section 4(f) properties were identified within the GSA with specific locations noted on Figure 3-4. Historic and cultural resources are addressed by both Section 4(f) and the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 (16 U.S.C. § 470, as amended), and are discussed further in Section 3.4.5. Locations of historic and cultural resources within the GSA are depicted on Figure 3-4.

A comprehensive list of Section 4(f) properties located within the GSA is included in Appendix C.

3.3.5 Historical, Architectural, Archeological, and Cultural Resources – Historic, Architectural, and Cultural Resources Only

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). Regulations related to this process are promulgated in 36 CFR Part 800, Protection of Historic Properties.

While FAA Order 1050.1F states in Exhibit 4-1 that there is no significance threshold for Historical, Architectural, Archeological, and Cultural Resources, the Order also states that a finding of adverse effect by the Proposed Action through the Section 106 process is a factor to consider.[13] A finding of "adverse effect," "no adverse effect" or "no historic properties affected" is made under 36 CFR part 800 in consultation with the State Historic Preservation Officer (SHPO) and other consulting parties. Section 8.3.2 of the 1050.1F Desk Reference expands on the text in Order 1050.1F to say that while an adverse effect under Section 106 is not necessarily a significant impact under NEPA, the FAA's determination on the level of impact under NEPA may be informed by advice from the SHPO, which for the Proposed Action is the Executive Director of the Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC).

The Proposed Action is an aircraft arrival procedure that is located entirely above the surface of the earth. Accordingly, it does not physically affect properties, alter properties in any way physically, remove properties from their historic locations, result in any neglect of a property, or result in the transfer of any property out of federal control or ownership. However, the FAA is considering, through the Section 106 process, whether changes in aircraft flight routes associated with the Proposed Action would introduce or increase aircraft routing over historic properties that could result in potential adverse effects due to the introduction of atmospheric, audible or visual elements.[14] In particular, the FAA has assessed, in consultation with the SHPO and other consulting parties, whether the Proposed Action would diminish the integrity of the historic features that make the properties eligible for inclusion in the National Register.

3.3.5.1 Historic, Architectural, and Cultural Resources in the General Study Area

The NHPA defines historic properties as:

> "…any prehistoric or historic district, site, building, structure, or object included in, or eligible for inclusion on, the National Register, including artifacts, records, and material remains relating to the district, site, building, structure, or object and located within such properties."[15]

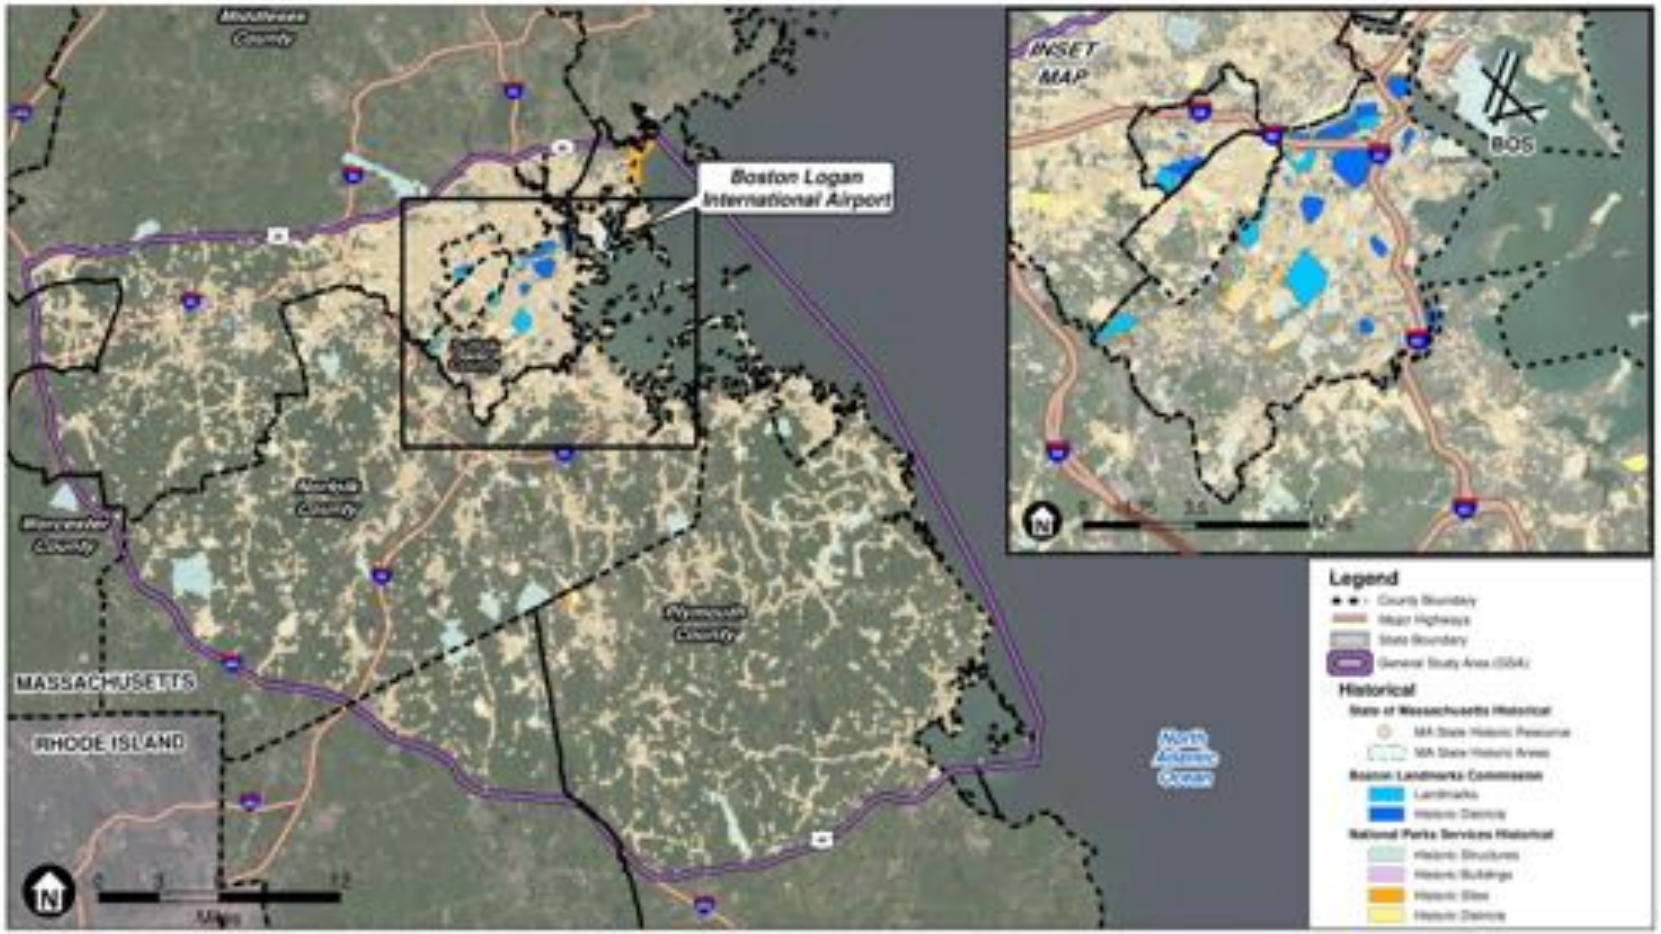
Figure 3-5 depicts the location of historic and cultural resources identified in the GSA. The NRHP, the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the GSA. A total of 70,142 listed properties were identified in the GSA. Figure 3-5 shows the location of historic and cultural resources identified in the GSA. A comprehensive list of the historic properties identified within the GSA is included in Appendix G. In addition to the review and inventory of properties listed in the NRHP, BLC and MHC databases, the FAA consulted previously prepared environmental documents from the Boston metropolitan area.

3.3.6 Noise and Noise-Compatible Land Use

This section includes a brief overview of aircraft noise, the noise analysis methodology used for this EA, and a discussion of the existing aircraft noise exposure levels in the GSA.

3.3.6.1 Noise Modeling Methodology



The FAA has developed specific guidance and requirements for the assessment of aircraft noise to comply with NEPA. This guidance, specified in FAA Order 1050.1F, requires that aircraft noise be analyzed in terms of the day-night average sound level (DNL) metric. DNL values are calculated for the average annual daily operations for the year of interest. The noise analysis evaluated all aircraft arriving and departing the Airport for the entire GSA. Noise modeling was based on fixed-wing and helicopter flight operations recorded by radar occurring in the baseline timeframe (November 1, 2018 through October 31, 2019).

Fleet information from the radar data was used to determine the number of operations and the types of aircraft to be modeled. Assumptions regarding fleet mix and operational considerations were verified by the Boston Consolidated TRACON (A90).

Noise Metric

Sound is energy transferred through the air that is detected by the ears as small changes in air pressure. The decibel (dB) is the unit used to measure the intensity of sound, and is measured on a logarithmic scale. It is important to understand this logarithmic nature as it is counterintuitive to our regular understanding of numbers; for example, a sound of 40 dB combined with a second sound of 40 dB will only produce a combined sound of 43 dB. Another way of putting this is that a 10 decibel increase or decrease in sound will be heard as a doubling or halving of a sound's loudness respectively. In order to assist in the understanding of certain levels, a figure of comparative indoor and outdoor noise levels are shown in Figure 3-6. Noise is defined as sound that is unwanted. Perception of aircraft noise by people on the ground depends on a variety of factors, including background (environmental) noise, relative proximity to aircraft operations, aircraft type, aircraft operational mode (arrival, departure, or overflight), ambient weather and terrain.

Noise being emitted from sources that are in motion (such as aircraft) will change over time relative to the person hearing the noise. While it can be useful to measure the maximum sound level of a single noise event, that does not account for the duration of the event. To account for differences in duration and loudness of noise, various noise metrics can be used to evaluate noise exposure and potential noise impacts.

Comparative Noise Levels (dBA)

The DNL metric is the sound level from aircraft operations for a 24-hour period, which includes all of the time-varying aircraft sound energy within the period. DNL accounts for the noise levels of all individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the period of day/ night in which they occur. Since people are more sensitive to noise events at night, DNL includes a 10- dB additional weight for night-time noise events (those that occur between 10:00:00 p.m. and 6:59:59 a.m.). Ambient (without aircraft) sound levels during nighttime are typically about 10 dB lower than during daytime hours.[16] FAA guidelines, established under 14 CFR Part 150, identify land uses that are generally considered compatible or incompatible with various DNL values.

As DNL values scale logarithmically, a 10 dB increase in DNL equates to a sound that is perceived as twice as loud. For example, a noise exposure increase from DNL 50 dB to DNL 60 dB is perceived as twice as loud by observers, while an increase from DNL 50 dB to DNL 70 dB would be perceived as four times as loud.

DNL is the metric prescribed in FAA Order 1050.1F and has been found to be the best measure of significant noise impact on the quality of the human environment. The DNL metric is based on a substantial body of scientific data on the reaction of people to noise. Federal interagency committees such as the Federal Interagency Committee on Urban Noise (FICUN) and the Federal Interagency Committee on Noise (FICON) which include the EPA, FAA, Department of Defense (DOD), Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), and Veterans Administration (VA), found DNL to be the best noise metric for representing aircraft noise resulting from approaches and application in land use planning.

Noise Model

AEDT is the FAA's approved model for assessing noise and emissions at civilian airports. AEDT has been used for environmental review of air traffic noise and emissions impacts since 2012 and is also used for 14 CFR Part 150 studies as well as NEPA EAs and EISs. For these types of analysis, AEDT is used to estimate the long-term average changes in environmental impacts.

Detailed information on aircraft operations at the Airport was input into AEDT, including specific fleet mix information such as aircraft type, arrival and departure times, trip distance, runway use, flight track location/usage, and weather conditions (e.g., temperature and humidity). Noise exposure from aircraft operations was calculated at the 27,080 Census blocks throughout the GSA. The locations consist of population centroids, representing the centers of 2010 Census blocks. Census blocks are the smallest geographic unit for which the U.S. Census Bureau tabulates 100% sample data. Census blocks are generally bounded by streets, legal boundaries, and other features. For this analysis, the Census block counts represent the maximum potential population within the Census block that could be exposed to the modeled DNL values, including family and non-family households, but excluding those residing in group quarters (often representing transient or temporary residential arrangements). The actual number of people impacted can be smaller than the total population represented by a single Census block because noise levels will vary throughout the Census block. More details on the specific inputs and assumptions used for modeling aircraft noise are included in Appendix B.

3.3.6.2 Operational Inputs

Operational inputs (aircraft flows and operations) were developed by processing radar traffic data for the baseline timeframe into backbones representing distinct traffic flows. These backbones were then loaded with traffic event data, which includes information such as the number of operations on an average annual day, the type and frequency of aircraft operations, runway locations and use, and the time of day of operations (daytime or nighttime). The operations derived from radar data were uniformly scaled to be equivalent to the total reported operation count of 432,328 operations for this period from the FAA's Operations and Performance Data (OpsNet), the official source of FAA air traffic operations and delay data. This resulted in an average annual day count of approximately 1,184 operations at the Airport that were reflected in the noise model.

This baseline noise analysis is the foundation upon which the noise modeling for the Proposed Action was developed. Appendix B, Noise Modeling Technical Report* provides additional details regarding noise model input data.

3.3.6.3 Existing Aircraft Noise Exposure at Population Centroids

Figure 3-7 shows the existing (2019) noise exposure levels at population centroids between DNL 45 dB and 75 dB. As would be expected, the areas closer to the Airport are exposed to the highest DNL values. Noise exposure levels are not calculated for Census blocks that did not include any residential population.

As shown in Table 3.3-5, approximately 52% of people residing within the GSA are exposed to aircraft noise levels associated with the Airport of less than DNL 45 dB. Noise levels between DNL 45 dB and 60 dB include approximately 45% of the GSA population. 22,969 people experience aircraft noise levels between DNL 60 dB and 65 dB, and 6,935 people experience aircraft noise levels of DNL 65 dB or higher.

3.3.7 Socioeconomics, Environmental Justice, and Children's Environmental Health – Environmental Justice Only

This section is limited to a discussion of Environmental Justice (EJ) as it pertains to potential aircraft noise impacts from the Airport in the GSA. The EPA defines EJ as the "fair treatment and meaningful involvement of all people regardless of race, color, national origin, or income with respect to the development, implementation, and enforcement of environmental laws, regulations, and policies."[17] An EJ analysis considers the potential of the Proposed Action Alternative to cause disproportionate and adverse effects on low-income or minority populations. If adverse effects are determined, applicable mitigations will be explored in order to avoid or minimize disproportionate impacts.

3.3.7.1 Definition of Impact Category

Executive Order 12898, "Federal Actions to Address EJ in Minority and Low-Income Populations," the accompanying Presidential Memorandum, and DOT Order 5610.2B, "Department of Transportation Actions to Address Environmental Justice in Minority Populations and Low-Income Populations," provide guidance for the Federal government, including the FAA, regarding EJ compliance. The FAA must provide (1) meaningful public involvement by minority and low-income populations and (2) analysis, including demographic analysis, which identifies and addresses potential impacts on those populations that may be disproportionately high and adverse. The Presidential Memorandum encourages the consideration of EJ impacts in EAs, especially to determine whether the Federal Action may cause a disproportionately high and adverse impact. For this EA, the FAA defined Census block groups of EJ concern as those in which either the concentration of minority population and/or the concentration of low-income population are higher than their respective averages of the GSA.

3.3.7.2 Existing Conditions

The socioeconomic and racial characteristics of the population within the GSA are based on data from the 2010 U.S. Census and 2015 American Community Survey (ACS 5-year dataset) - the most recent available - to identify minority populations and low-income populations in the GSA. DOT Order 5610.2(a) defines "low-income" as "a person whose median household income is at or below the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) poverty guidelines." The order defines "minority" as one of the following categories:

- Black – a person having origins in any of the black racial groups of Africa
- Hispanic or Latino – a person of Mexican, Puerto Rican, Cuban, Central or South American, or other Spanish culture or origin, regardless of race
- Asian American – a person having origins in any of the original peoples of the Far East, Southeast Asia, or the Indian subcontinent

[17] Technical Guidance for Assessing Environmental Justice in Regulatory Analysis, United States Environmental Protection Agency, page 1, https://www.epa.gov/sites/production/files/2016-06/documents/ejtg_5_6_16_v5.1.pdf

- American Indian and Alaskan Native – a person having origins in any of the original people of North America, South America (including Central America), and who maintains cultural identification through tribal affiliation or community recognition
- Native Hawaiian and Other Pacific Islander – persons having origins in any of the original peoples of Hawaii, Guam, Samoa, or other Pacific Islands

The EJ module of AEDT was utilized to perform analysis of the GSA at the U.S. Census block group level, defining Census block groups for minority and low-income population as follows:

- A disproportionate minority population Census Block Group is a group having a minority population percentage greater than the average minority population percentage in the GSA. Based on the 2010 data, the average percentage of minority population residing in the GSA was 33.4 percent. Therefore, every Census block group with a percentage of minority population greater than 33.4 percent was identified as a Census block group of EJ concern.
- A disproportionate low-income population Census Block Group is a group having a low-income population percentage greater than the average low-income population percentage in the GSA. Based on the 2010 Poverty Guidelines identified by the HHS, the poverty threshold for a household of three persons was set at $18,310 for the 48 contiguous states, and therefore is applicable to the GSA. For the purposes of identifying low-income population census tracts, the HHS threshold of $18,310 was used. Based on 2010 data, the average percentage of low-income population residing in the GSA was 12.3 percent. Therefore, every Census block group with a percentage of low-income population greater than 12.3 percent is identified as a Census block group of EJ concern.

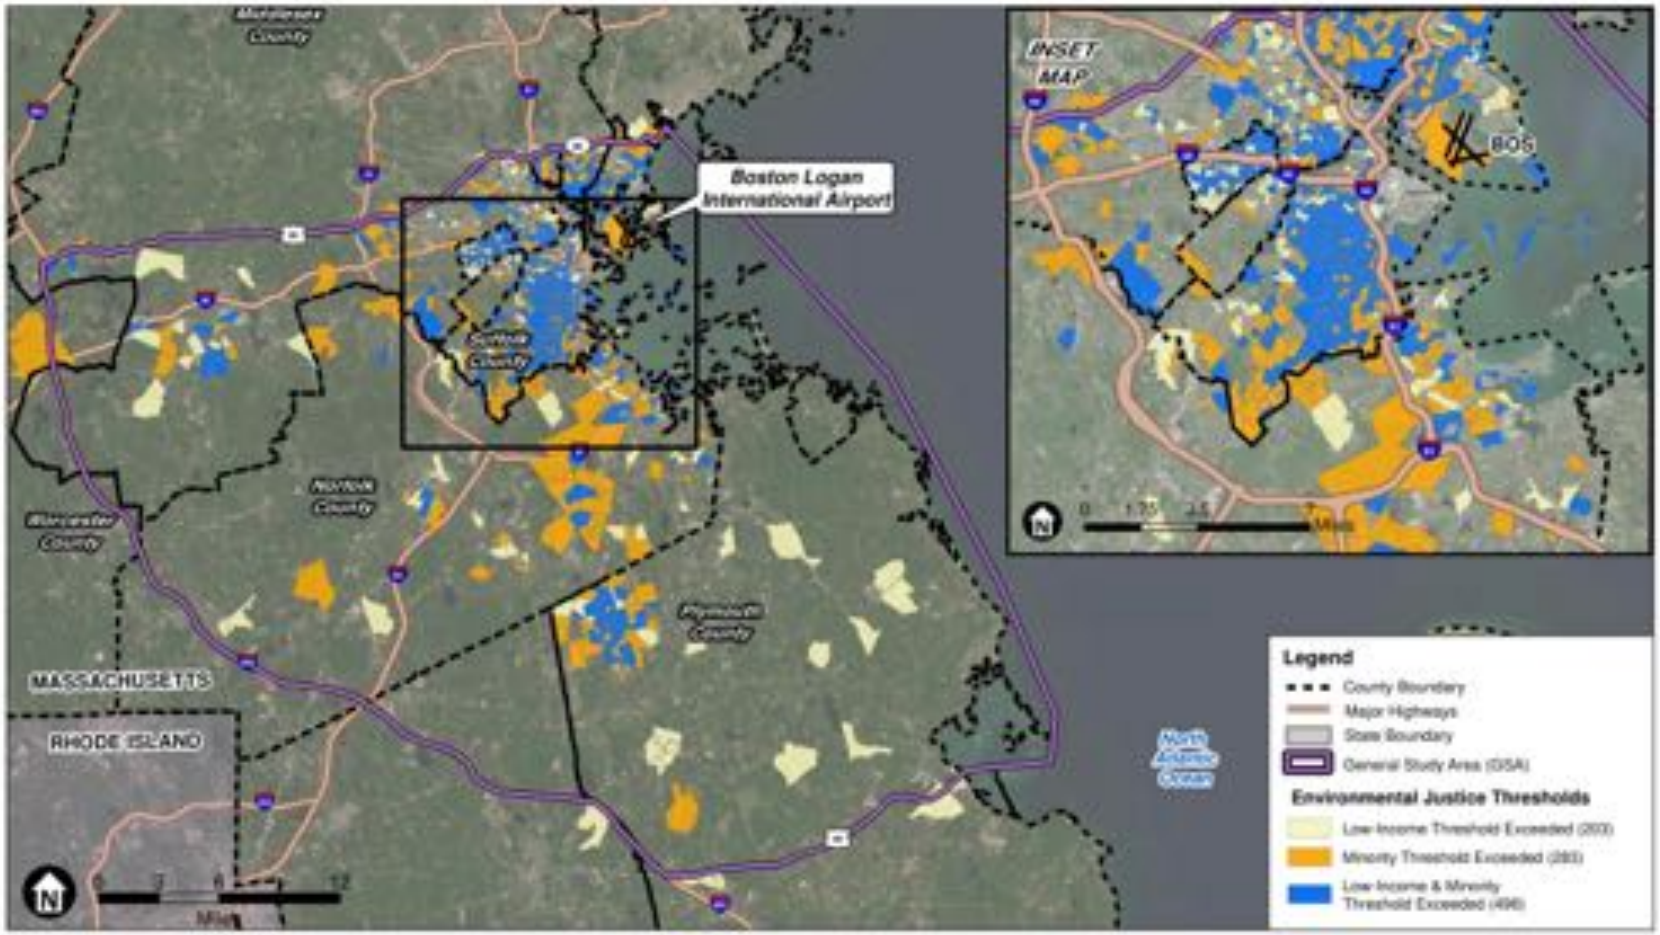

Table 3.3-6 presents the breakdown of minority and low-income population for the purposes of this EJ analysis.

Figure 3-8 depicts the areas of EJ concern located within the GSA, derived from Census block groups. In examining Figure 3-7, it is important to note that population distribution is not necessarily uniform across a Census block group. For that reason, the actual number of minority or low-income persons impacted can be more or less than the total population represented by a single Census block group because impacts may vary throughout the Census block group. In addition, because EJ includes the entirety of Census block groups intersecting the GSA, the total population reported as part of EJ will not equal the total block-derived population located inside the GSA. The GSA contains a large number of Census block groups that exceed EJ thresholds on all sides of the airport. However, these EJ Census block groups are particularly concentrated to the south and west of the airport, which are the primary areas of change due to the Proposed Action.

3.3.8 Cumulative Impacts

Cumulative impacts refer to the impacts resulting from the effects of implementation of the Proposed Action with other actions in the GSA that when combined have the potential to affect the environment. The White House Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) regulations define a cumulative impact as

> "an impact on the environment which results from the incremental impact of the action when added to other past, present, and reasonably foreseeable future actions regardless of what agency (Federal or non-Federal) or person undertakes such other actions."[18]

The CEQ regulations also state that cumulative impacts can result from individually minor, but collectively significant actions that take place over a period of time.

> "For cumulative effects analysis to help the decision-maker and inform interested parties, it must be limited through scoping to effects that can be evaluated meaningfully. The boundaries for evaluating cumulative effects should be expanded to the point at which the resource is no longer affected significantly or the effects are no longer of interest to affected parties."[19]

The Proposed Action is only expected to change the arrival path for a subset of air traffic at the Airport and has no effect on any activities once the aircraft has touched down. This Proposed Action Alternative and the changes related to this Proposed Action Alternative will be considered against past, present, and reasonably foreseeable future actions with direct or indirect effects on the human environment.

Reasonably foreseeable future actions are considered projects included in planning documents that are expected to proceed (e.g., funding has been allocated) and are described with adequate detail to inform decision-makers and the public. While there is not a specific time frame defined as "reasonably foreseeable", actions that occur many years in the future are typically speculative and their details are ill-defined for inclusion in analyzing their cumulative impacts.

Because the Proposed Action concerns an arrival path, aviation-related projects associated with airports within the GSA were emphasized when assessing cumulative impacts--these projects would be more likely to generate impacts similar to the Proposed Action. In addition to projects at the Airport, additional projects have been identified at other airports in the GSA—all these projects are listed in Table 3.3-7.

Non-aviation projects and plans within the GSA were also identified for consideration in the assessment of cumulative impacts. Regional and local plans for jurisdictions and agencies in the GSA were reviewed to identify projects which could contribute to cumulative impacts. While these plans have been identified from across the GSA, the environmental consequences from the considered impact categories in this EA will be tabulated and reviewed relative to these projects to ascertain if any of plans meet the definition of cumulative impacts with respect to the Proposed Action. Given that the project is entirely within the airspace around the Airport, the potential for cumulative impact for non-aviation projects and plans will be judged relative to any significant or reportable impacts from the considered impact categories. There are over 100 non-aviation projects that have recently occurred or are expected to occur in the reasonably foreseeable future within the GSA and given the large list, these projects are listed in Appendix C.

Environmental Consequences

This chapter describes the potential environmental consequences associated with the No Action and the Proposed Action Alternatives in accordance with FAA Order 1050.1F. The purpose of the Proposed Action is to implement an operational change for aircraft arriving at Boston Logan International Airport that will directly enhance the safety and efficiency of the National Airspace System. The potential impacts associated with the Proposed Action Alternative are determined by comparing the Proposed Action Alternative with the No Action Alternative.

4.1 Air Quality

This section presents a summary of the analysis of air quality impacts within the GSA under the No Action and Proposed Action Alternatives.

4.1.1 Overview of Impacts

Implementation of the Proposed Action would result in an increase of less than 0.1% in the amount of fuel burned and emissions emitted within the GSA compared to the No Action Alternative. Increased emissions of criteria pollutants would not reach the de minimis thresholds that the EPA defines as potentially delaying timely attainment of NAAQS in any of the counties that comprise the GSA. As a result, implementation of the Proposed Action would not have a significant impact on air quality.

4.1.2 Methodology

Emissions standards are set for criteria pollutants by the EPA as directed in Section 108 of the CAA. Areas or regions where these emissions standards are not met for one or more criteria pollutants are considered to be in nonattainment. Areas that were formerly in nonattainment status but have seen improvements in emissions levels that allow them to meet current standards are considered to be in maintenance status. The nonattainment and maintenance status of counties in the GSA is described in Section 3.4.1. Section 176(c) of the CAA specifies that Federal actions taking place in locations that are nonattainment or maintenance for one or more NAAQS must conform to the conditions of the applicable State Implementation Plan (SIP), which is known as General Conformity. 40 CFR 93.153(b)(1) and (2) specifies thresholds below which emission rates associated with a Federal action are unlikely to cause or contribute to a violation of the NAAQS or delay timely attainment of the NAAQS. These thresholds are defined by EPA as de minimis thresholds.

An ozone transport region (OTR), as defined under Section 184 of the CAA, consists of states that are required to submit SIPs and install certain controls for pollutants that form ozone, even if they currently meet ozone standards. The state of Massachusetts is part of an OTR spanning thirteen Northeast states, and thus has lower allowable de minimis thresholds for VOCs than areas outside of an OTR. For both PM_{10} and $PM_{2.5}$, the Boston region is in attainment with CAA standards, while for CO, the region is in maintenance status. De minimis values are shown in Table 4.1-1 for nonattainment areas (NAA), and Table 4.1-2 for maintenance areas.

Additionally, the Proposed Action falls within a list published by the FAA of actions that are presumed to conform with the national ambient air quality standards. Specifically, actions that will occur above the mixing height are presumed to conform. In addition, although some of the Proposed Action will impact aircraft below the mixing height, the procedure is designed to enhance operational efficiency and, therefore, is also considered an action that is presumed to conform.[20] The Proposed Action reduces delays by providing an additional IAP for aircraft approaching the Airport in IMC during the Northeast configuration, as well as providing a generally shorter and safer path to Runway 4L for aircraft that currently use the ILS Runway 15R approach to transition to a visual landing on Runway 4L. However, since the increased efficiency during those times when compared with current operations results in a corresponding increase of 255 net annual operations that are directly attributable to that new level of efficiency, de minimis thresholds were still used to determine potential air quality impacts resulting from the Proposed Action.

4.1.3 Potential Impacts

AEDT analysis indicated that implementation of the Proposed Action would result in a less than 0.1% increase in fuel burn when compared with the No Action Alternative. AEDT was also used determine if the increase of emissions exceeded the de minimis thresholds.

Table 4.1-3 below shows a comparison of criteria pollution emissions within the GSA between the No Action and Proposed Action Alternatives.

The net change in pollutant emissions below the mixing height for the Proposed Action is multiple orders of magnitude less than the de minimis thresholds for all criteria pollutants. Implementing the Proposed Action will not cause the de minimis thresholds applicable to the GSA for any pollutant to be exceeded. Based on the above analysis, adverse air quality impacts will not occur. Therefore, no further air quality analysis is necessary, and a conformity determination is not required.

4.2 Climate

4.2.1 Overview of Impacts

While fuel burn would slightly increase under the Proposed Action Alternative when compared with the No Action Alternative due to the additional operations, there is no significance threshold for GHG emissions set by FAA Order 1050.1F. Regardless of the lack of a threshold, this action is not anticipated to cause significant effects on climate. The corresponding increase in CO_2 emissions is minor in the context of current emissions, as well as regional and nationwide GHG emissions. As a result, increases in GHG tied to increased fuel burn resulting from the Proposed Action Alternative are not significant contributors to climate effects associated with the propagation of GHG in the atmosphere.

4.2.2 Methodology

In accordance with FAA guidance, AEDT was run to calculate fuel burn and CO_2 emissions for the entire lengths of modeled flight tracks for both the Proposed Action Alternative and the No Action Alternative. As all emissions associated with both alternatives result from the direct aircraft emissions, CO_2e emissions are assumed to be equivalent to direct CO_2 emissions.

4.2.3 Potential Impacts

The runway utilization changes in the Proposed Action cause only a marginal increase in the total miles flown by aircraft and therefore the total amount of additional fuel required for each arrival operation under the Proposed Action Alternative is minimal. Based on AEDT results, total annual fuel burn in the Proposed Action Alternative is less than 0.1% higher than in the No Action Alternative. This represents an increase of approximately 0.06 short tons of fuel on an annualized basis, with total fuel burn within the GSA rising from 384.30 tons in the No Action Alternative to 384.36 tons in the Proposed Action Alternative. In terms of CO_2 emissions, this increase in fuel burn corresponds with an annual increase of approximately 0.2 tons (400 lbs.) of CO_2. This represents a marginal increase in estimated CO_2 emissions at the Airport relative to area sources within the State of Massachusetts estimating emissions of 67.4 million metric tons of carbon dioxide.[21]

4.3 Biological Resources – Wildlife Only

The significance threshold pertaining to Biological Resources is if "the action would be likely to jeopardize the continued existence of a federally listed threatened or endangered species or would result in the destruction or adverse modification of federally designated critical habitat."[22] Since this is an airspace action, there is not expected to be any destruction of critical habitat but an impact on a federally listed species is possible through wildlife strikes. Wildlife strikes are a common occurrence at airports around the country with over 194,000 wildlife strikes on civil aircraft occurring between 1990 and 2017. Bird strikes tend to occur most often from July to October and 61% of strikes occur during the landing phases of flight. Almost all bird strikes (92%) occur at or below 3,500 feet AGL making the area near an airport the most critical area.[23]

The FAA National Wildlife Strike Database keeps a record of all reported wildlife strikes in the United States since 1990. The database contains records of over 227,000 different wildlife strikes across civilian and military airports. Since 1990, there have been 2,062 wildlife strikes at the Airport with 141 of these wildlife strikes occurring in 2018.

Based on the full list of threatened and endangered species from the Affected Environment section, the list of wildlife strikes was filtered by these species, by operation type, and by runway end to estimate the number of wildlife strikes with the species in question on Runway 4L arrivals. Runway 4R receives the bulk of arrival traffic when the Airport is in the Northeast configuration, and approaches from the same direction as the Runway 4L arrivals so it was decided to investigate Runway 4R wildlife strikes to provide context to the Runway 4L strikes. Of the 2,062 historical strikes at the Airport since 1990, a single strike was reported to include any of the federally listed species (red knot) but it occurred on Runway 27, which will be unaffected by the Proposed Action. From this dataset of 2,062 historical strikes, there were only two strikes of all state-listed species on approaches into Runway 4L with one strike of a threatened species and one strike of an endangered species. On Runway 4R, there were only three strikes of all state-listed species with two strikes of a special concern species and one strike of a threatened species.

This number of bird strikes since 1990 has occurred with average annual operations of 428,000 and totaling 427,176 in calendar year 2019. The Proposed Action would add 359 annual flights to Runway 4L, an increase of just 0.084% compared to calendar year 2019. As mentioned above, only one strike of any federal species has occurred since 1990 on a non-parallel Runway to the Proposed Action with just five strikes of all state species on both Runway 4L and 4R. Given this information and the Proposed Action increasing operations by just 0.084% overall, the FAA concluded this action would have no effect on threatened or endangered species.

4.4 Department of Transportation Act, Section 4(f

In considering the potential impact on Section 4(f) properties, the significance threshold defined in FAA Order 1050.1F says that a significant impact would occur when "The Action involves more than a minimal physical use of a Section 4(f) resource or constitutes a 'constructive use' based on an FAA determination that the aviation project would substantially impair the Section 4(f) resource." As the Proposed Action is an airspace project and has no direct interaction with any resources on the ground, there are no physical use or direct impacts that are expected from the Proposed Action. As discussed in Section 3.4.4, a constructive use would occur when a project would produce an effect, such as excessive noise, that would result in substantial impairment to a property where the features of that property are substantially diminished. When considering constructive use impacts, special consideration must be made for any Section 4(f) resource where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute of the resource.

The FAA considered the possibility of causing a constructive use in a Section 4(f) property by considering whether there were any significant or reportable increases in the noise at any property within the GSA. These properties were also evaluated with the same noise increase data for any noise sensitive areas within the Section 4(f) properties that have a quiet setting as an attribute. For each of the 11,854 Section 4(f) properties, a centroid at the center of each property was generated and the noise impact was calculated at each point for the No Action Alternative and for the Proposed Action Alternative. This noise impact was compared to the noise exposure levels spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, where a change of 1.5 dB in the DNL 65 dB or higher noise exposure level is considered significant, and a change of 3.0 dB in the DNL 60 to less than 65 dB noise exposure level or a change of 5.0 dB in the DNL 45 to less than 60 dB noise exposure level is considered as reportable.

For these Section 4(f) centroids, there were no significant noise impacts (increases of 1.5 dB in the DNL 65 or higher noise exposure level) or reportable noise impacts (increases of 3.0 dB in the DNL 60 to less than 65 dB noise level and increases of 5.0 dB in the DNL 45 to less than 60 dB noise exposure level) found within the GSA. This includes national, state, and local parks as well as state forests, state historic sites, and state and local refuges that were assessed as part of the analysis. There were also no reportable increases above the 45 DNL noise exposure level in Section 4(f) properties within the GSA located in a quiet setting, where the setting is an attribute of the site's significance, such as a national park or national wildlife refuge within the GSA. When considering all Section 4(f) properties, the maximum calculated change in noise exposure level was 0.2 dB. Furthermore, sound level changes of 1 dB or less are not readily perceptible to the human ear, except in a laboratory setting.[24] The detailed visual analysis described in Section 4.5 also indicates that there would be only a limited visual impact throughout the GSA which would not substantially impair any 4(f) resource.

As a result, it can be concluded that the Proposed Action Alternative would not cause a constructive use for any Section 4(f) property and the Proposed Action would not cause a significant impact.

4.5 Historical, Architectural, Archeological, and Cultural Resources - Historic, Architectural, and Cultural Resources Only

4.5.1 Area of Potential Effects

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4, the FAA consulted with the Massachusetts Historic Commission to develop an Area of Potential Effects (APE) for the undertaking. An APE is defined as

> "the geographic area or areas within which an undertaking may directly or indirectly cause alterations in the character or use of historic properties, if any such properties exist. The area of potential effects is influenced by the scale and nature of an undertaking and may be different for different kinds of effects caused by the undertaking."[25]

The Proposed Action would not cause any physical effects to historic properties.

The FAA developed the APE based on consideration of where noise and visual impacts are expected to occur, in accordance with FAA Order 1050.1F noise impact criteria. An analysis was first conducted to identify areas where any historic property that might be present could be affected by the introduction of overflights. The Proposed Action was used to generate two dimensional blocks covering all areas of potential visual change separated by the waypoints of the Proposed Action. These blocks are shown in reference to the Proposed Action in Figure 4-1. These blocks were then compared to an entire year of overflight data within the GSA as well as estimated usage of the Proposed Action and used to generate overflight data for each block for the No Action and Proposed Alternatives. Figure 4-2 shows the year of overflight data in reference to the Proposed Action and the visual change blocks. The radar data shows that the airspace around the Airport is already extremely dense with overflights, with over 427,000 annual operations in 2019.

Table 4.5-1 summarizes the number of overflights for each block in the No Action and Proposed Action Alternatives. Based primarily on the overall increase in overflights and filtered by the percent increase in overflights and minimum aircraft altitude, the FAA is focusing on the following blocks: BLOCK3, NUNZO2, BLOCK2, BLOCK1, and NUNZO1. In each of these blocks, the percentage increase in overflights was greater than 0.4% while adding considerably more than 100 overflights annually and a minimum altitude of 4,000 feet or less for the Proposed Action within each block.[26] WOONS1 and WOONS2 were considered for inclusion within the APE but the 0.04% increase in overflights at WOONS1 and the smaller number of existing overflights over WOONS2 led to their exclusion.

The databases from the NRHP, MHC, and the Boston Landmarks Commission were used to compile a comprehensive list of historic properties within the APE. Additionally, the FAA requested input from local historical commissions, planning boards, tribes, and interested parties to identify additional properties not previously identified as eligible for the NRHP. This effort identified 4,242 properties listed in or potentially eligible for listing in national, state, or local historic registers. Of these, 58 properties within the APE are currently listed in or have been formally determined eligible for listing in the NRHP. For the purposes of the analysis, FAA assumed all 4,242 properties within the APE were eligible for listing in the NRHP. A comprehensive list of these properties can be found in Appendix G.

4.5.2 Assessment of Adverse Effects

The Proposed Action would have an effect on a historic property if it alters the characteristics qualifying that property for the NRHP. Such effects are considered "adverse" by regulation if they would diminish the integrity of a property's significant historical features (including its setting, provided the setting is a contributing factor to the property's historical significance). The Proposed Action does not require land acquisition, construction, or ground disturbance, and the FAA anticipates no physical effects to historic properties. However, the FAA recognizes that for certain types of historic properties, particularly those where the property's setting contributes to its historical significance, the introduction of visual, atmospheric, or audible elements could diminish the integrity of a property's significant historical features, and therefore aircraft operations could result in non-physical effects.

Therefore, the FAA focused its assessment of effects on the potential for the Proposed Action to introduce visual or audible elements that would diminish the integrity of setting or feeling for historic properties where those are significant historical features. The FAA also considered the extent to which those aspects of integrity have already been diminished under existing conditions.

4.5.2.1 Assessment of Auditory Adverse Effects

In order to assess the auditory impacts of the Proposed Action on historic properties, the FAA first modeled the projected noise attributable to additional arrivals using the DNL metric. As used in Section 4.6 DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used to assess the potential noise exposure of every identified historic property within the APE.

The FAA's procedures for compliance with NEPA define a significant noise impact as an increase of a DNL by 1.5 dB in areas exposed to aircraft noise of DNL 65 dB and higher.

The noise impacts resulting from the Proposed Action are an order of magnitude below the significance threshold given above. Using the DNL metric, the largest noise change at a historic resource is 0.2 dB across the APE, which is a change in noise that is imperceptible to the human ear. Many historic resources within the APE experience either no difference or a small decrease in noise exposure between the Proposed Action and the No Action Alternative. These locations are currently affected by the noise from 78,879 annual flights. The additional net 255 annual flights introduce a relatively small noise change reflective of an average of less than one additional daily flight and a projected decrease of 52 nighttime arrivals.

However, FAA's NEPA procedures also note that special consideration needs to be given to the evaluation of the significance of noise impacts on noise sensitive areas within historic sites, including traditional cultural properties, where the land use compatibility guidelines in 14 CFR Part 150 are not relevant to the value, significance, and enjoyment of the area in question. For example, the DNL 65 dB threshold may not adequately address the impacts of noise on areas where other noise is very low, and a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute.

In order to assess the potential for incremental changes in noise levels or changes in the character of aircraft noise that may result in alteration of those characteristics of historic properties that qualify them for inclusion in the NRHP, the FAA considered the projected increase in the number or concentration of overflights over these areas. This analysis also informed the assessment of visual effects described below. Increasing overflights by an average of less than one per day would not introduce audible elements that would alter those characteristics of a historic property that qualify it for inclusion in the NRHP.

4.5.3 Assessment of Visual Adverse Effects

Recognizing that some types of historic properties may be affected by overflights due to visual impacts, the FAA also considered the potential for the introduction of visual elements that could diminish the integrity of the property's historical features. In order to assess the potential visual impacts on historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at the airport was overlain on the APE in ArcGIS. The APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually, which corresponds to 216.1 daily arrival overflights and 52.0 daily departure overflights within the APE. Looking at the APE as a whole, the undertaking is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. This is a 0.26% increase in overflights within the APE. This shows that the APE is already heavily overflown as a whole. However, existing flights are not evenly distributed over the APE but follow flight paths which converge close to and in line with the runways.

In order to further assess the impact of the undertaking on individual historic resources within the APE, the FAA considered the possibility that the undertaking could increase flights over parts of the APE that are not heavily overflown under current conditions. This was done by mapping the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights over the APE to look for specific areas within the APE that would experience overflights from the undertaking in locations that are not already heavily overflown. Figure 4-3 shows that when looking only at departures, the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flight tracks become more dispersed as the APE moves to the southwest. However, when arrivals are considered, this pattern disappears. Figure 4-4, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, shows that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE. The combined effect is that historic properties throughout the entire APE are heavily overflown under current conditions.

4.5.3.1 Finding of No Adverse Effect

To support a Finding of No Adverse Effect, an undertaking must not meet any of the criteria set forth in the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation's Section 106 regulations at 36 CFR 800.5(a). This section presents why the undertaking does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the undertaking physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The undertaking would not have any physical impact on any property.

- Does the undertaking alter the property in any way that is inconsistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The undertaking is located in the airspace above the historic resources and would not result in any alteration or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the undertaking remove a property from its historic location?
    - The undertaking would not remove any property from its location.

- Does the undertaking change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The undertaking would not change the character of any property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.

- Does the undertaking introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual element to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - As discussed above, the small increase in overflights attributable to the undertaking, less than one additional overflight per day, would not introduce audible or visual elements that would diminish the integrity of the significant historical features of any historic resource in the APE.

- Does the undertaking result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale, or lease?
    - The undertaking would not cause any property to be neglected, sold, or transferred.

Based on these analyses, the FAA has determined that there would be no adverse impacts to historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources. The incremental increase in overflights (an average of less than one per day) in an area already densely overflown would not diminish the integrity of any historic properties' significant historical features.

All consulting parties were provided an opportunity to review the FAA's finding of no adverse effect and, in a response to the MA SHPO, the FAA reaffirmed its finding as part of continued consultation pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c)(2)(i). The FAA also provided notice to the Secretary of the Interior pursuant to 36 CFR 800.10(c). This correspondence can be found in Appendix E.

4.6 Noise and Noise-Compatible Land Use

This section describes the operational input, the noise analysis methodology used in determining noise-related environmental impacts, and the environmental consequences by comparing forecast aircraft noise exposure levels in the GSA for the No Action and Proposed Action Alternatives.

4.6.1 Noise Modeling Methodology

The noise modeling methodology described in Section 3.4.6.1, Affected Environment, is also used for the Proposed Action noise modeling. This methodology is consistent with noise modeling of aircraft operations as required by the FAA, inclusive of requirements for consideration in airspace actions, such as changes to air traffic routes. Under FAA Order 1050.1F, noise impacts are analyzed in terms of the DNL metric in reference to specific impact thresholds as described further in this section.

4.6.2 Operational Input

Since the Proposed Action involves a single procedure proposed for one runway, large parts of the input data developed to assess the Affected Environment remained the same and were effectively unchanged. These noise model inputs, representing the baseline timeframe, were modified to encompass the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure comprising the Proposed Action Alternative. The aircraft fleet mix for the Proposed Action Alternative remains identical to the No Action Alternative as described in the Affected Environment section. Changes in traffic under the Proposed Action Alternative includes a net of 255 additional arrival operations annually and 255 additional departure operations annually compared to the No Action Alternative. These operations are enabled by additional efficiency at the Airport due to implementation of the Proposed Action Alternative. Utilizing estimated efficiency data for the Proposed Action Alternative and a detailed study of estimated aircraft delays, the number of net additional annual arrival operations was calculated with an equal number of departure operations offsetting the additional arrival operations. Appendix B provides additional details pertaining to the No Action Alternative and Proposed Action Alternative noise modeling and gives a detailed methodology of the additional operations calculations in Section D.3.1.

4.6.2.1 Noise Impact Criteria

Changes in noise exposure for each population centroid in the GSA were evaluated based on FAA requirements to determine the degree of change in noise exposure. Per FAA Order 1050.1F, aircraft noise is required to be evaluated in terms of the DNL metric. FAA Order 1050.1F further defines that a significant impact would occur if a proposed action would result in an increase of 1.5 dB or more in any noise sensitive area at or above the DNL 65 dB exposure level when compared to the No Action Alternative for the same timeframe.

Per FAA Order 1050.1F, increases of 1.5 dB in the DNL 65 dB and above area are considered significant. Increases of 3 dB between DNL 60 dB and less than DNL 65 dB are to receive consideration when evaluating the environmental impacts of a proposed project, and will be identified regardless of whether a significant impact is identified. Increases of 5 dB or greater at levels between DNL 45 dB and less than DNL 60 dB are also to be disclosed. The FAA noise level criteria are used to compare DNL changes at the population locations in the GSA. Population locations are evaluated under the following categories: (1) those showing an increase in noise exposure relative to the No Action Alternative; (2) those showing a decrease relative to the No Action Alternative; and (3) those having no change relative to the No Action Alternative. The criteria for defining the increase, categories, and the sources for each are presented in Table 4.6-1. Additionally, in accordance with FAA Order 1050.1F, special consideration has been given to the evaluation of the significance of noise impacts on noise sensitive areas within national parks, national wildlife refuges and historic sites, as described in Sections 4.3 and 4.4, respectively. For example, the DNL 65 dB threshold does not adequately address the effects of noise on visitors to areas within a national park where other noise is low and a quiet setting is a recognized attribute of the area.

CRITERIA FOR DETERMINING IMPACT OF CHANGES IN AIRCRAFT NOISE

DNL Noise Exposure with Proposed Action	Minimum Increase in DNL with Proposed Action	Level of Impact
DNL 45 to <60 dB	5 dB	Reportable Noise Increase (Information disclosed when evaluating air traffic actions)
DNL 60 to <65 dB	3 dB	Reportable Noise Increase (Considered when evaluating air traffic actions)
DNL 65 dB or higher	1.5 dB	Exceeds Threshold of Significance

4.6.3 Aircraft Noise Impact Analysis

Based upon the noise methodology described in Section 4.6.1 and the noise impact criteria described in Section 4.6.2, a noise analysis was conducted to evaluate noise exposure levels using the applicable thresholds for the Proposed Action Alternative as compared to the No Action Alternative.

4.6.4 No Action Alternative

Under the No Action Alternative, the proposed RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure would not be implemented. Given the fact environmental impacts could be obfuscated by changes in the makeup of the aircraft fleet using the Airport, the fleet used to model the No Action Alternative was identical to that given in the input data. Noise exposure was calculated for the 27,080 population centroids in the GSA with a population greater than zero for the No Action Alternative. Table 4.6-2 presents the overall population exposed to various noise levels associated with the Airport during the baseline timeframe. Noise exposure greater than DNL 45 dB at Census block centroids is depicted in Figure 3-6. Areas immediately to the north, south, and west of the Airport have the highest noise exposure values in the GSA due to Airport operations.

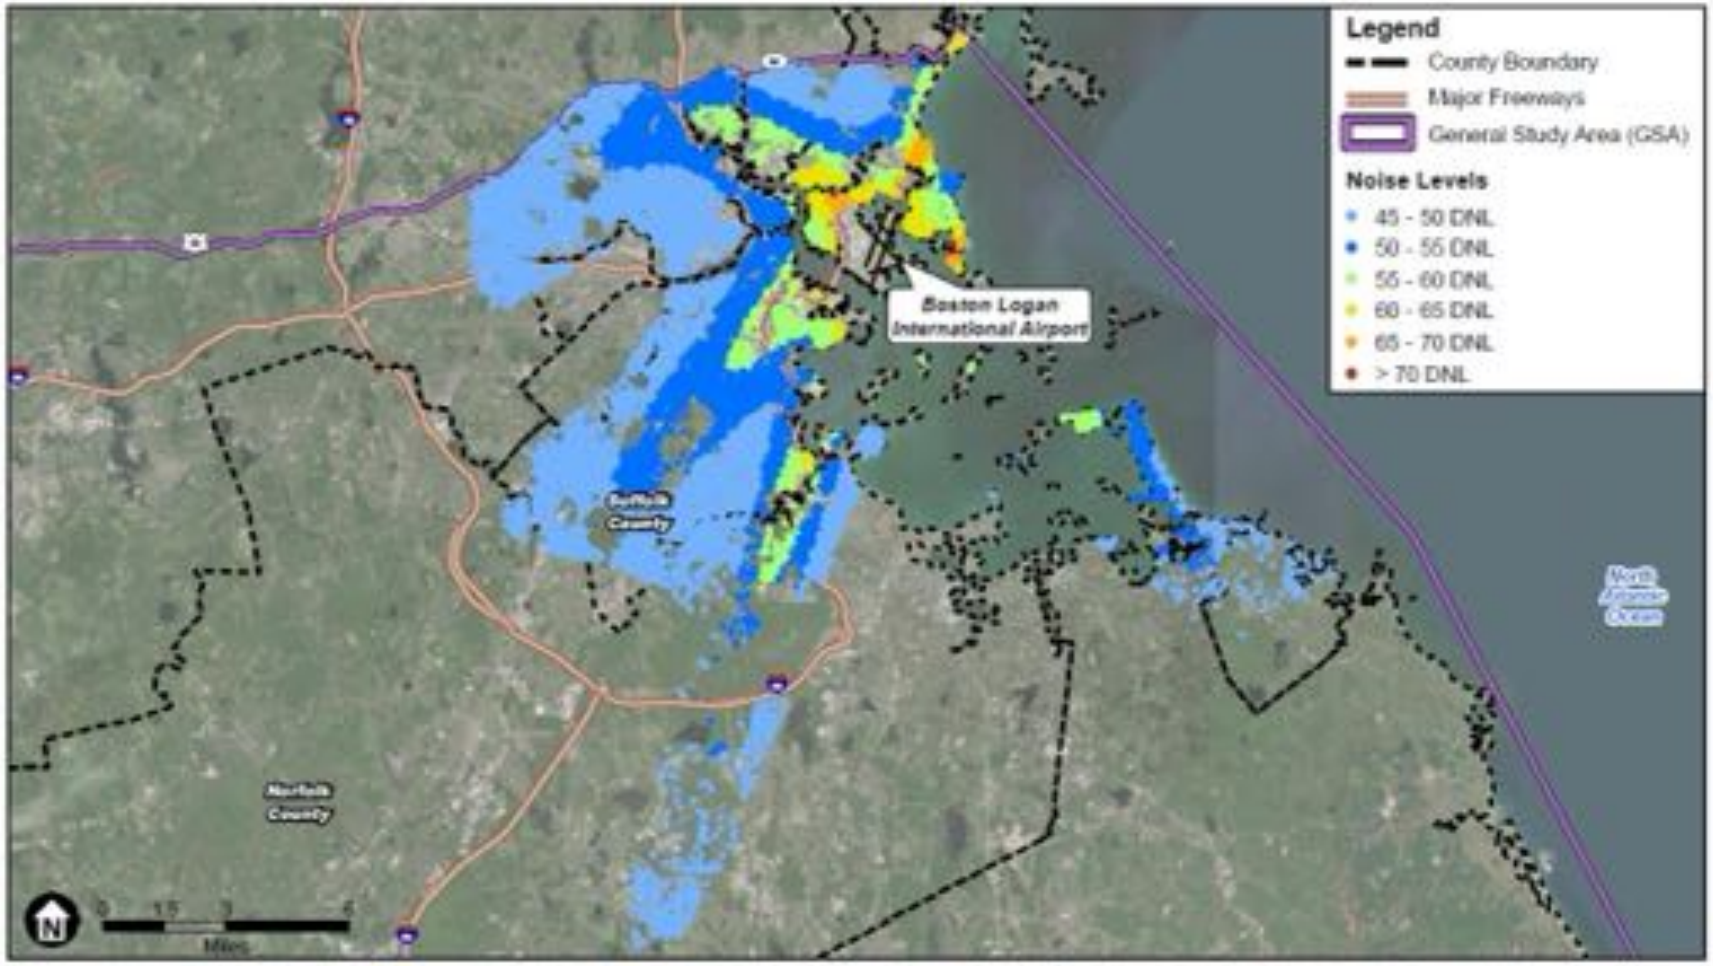
4.6.6 Proposed Action Alternative

The Proposed Action Alternative represents traffic at the Airport during the same timeframe as the No Action Alternative but assumes that the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure is implemented. There is no future fleet forecasting associated with the Proposed Action Alternative since environmental impacts could be obfuscated by changes in the fleet. This alternative includes an additional 255 net arrivals annually to the Airport that are enabled by increased efficiency at the Airport during IMC. These 255 annual arrivals are comprised of:

- A net annual increase of 255 arrivals at Boston Logan. This increase is attributable to previously scheduled arrivals that will no longer need to be cancelled due to increased Airport efficiency during IMC or “poor weather.” With the availability of the 4L RNAV procedure, these arrivals will now be able to land on Runway 4L instead of being cancelled.
- A shift of 104 annual arrivals from Runway 4R to Runway 4L. These 104 arrivals represent flights that would otherwise have been delayed for a landing on Runway 4R, but with the availability of a 4L RNAV procedure would instead be able to land on Runway 4L earlier in the day.
- Combined, there will be an expected increase of 359 arrivals to Runway 4L, representing 255 flights that no longer need to be cancelled and 104 flights no longer delayed due to poor weather conditions.

An associated 255 net departures annually are also included in the noise analysis. Only two sets of flights were placed on the backbones representing the new procedure – the 255 new net arrivals that will be able to take place in IMC and cannot do so today, and the 594 flights that were previously using the ILS 15R procedure and transitioning to a visual landing on Runway 4L. These assumptions in the noise model were based on coordination between the project review team and the FAA air traffic personnel stationed in the BOS Terminal Radar Approach Control Facility (TRACON) who are responsible for managing the BOS airspace and will be assigning the procedure to arriving traffic. All other flights in the No Action Alternative and the Proposed Action Alternative are identical. The noise analysis therefore reflects changes in noise exposure solely due to the implementation of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure when compared to the No Action Alternative. A more detailed explanation of all of these modeling assumptions and how they were arrived at is available in Appendix B.

A comparison of noise exposure between the No Action Alternative and the Proposed Action Alternative indicates no significant impacts (increases of DNL 1.5 dB in areas that would be exposed to DNL values of 65 dB or higher) to population centroids within the GSA. Though no significant impacts were identified, the Proposed Action was also evaluated for any reportable increases of 3.0 dB or greater in population centroids with a baseline exposure between DNL 60 dB and DNL 65 dB, or an increase of 5.0 dB or greater for population centroids with a baseline exposure between DNL 45 dB and DNL 60 dB. There were no reportable impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Figure 4-3 and Figure 4-4 depict noise exposure at population centroids due to the implementation of the Proposed Action Alternative. As seen in the No Action Alternative, the highest noise exposure is located within population centroids to the north, south, and west of the Airport, with exposure tapering off with increased distance from the runways.



Noise sensitive communities south of the Airport include several neighborhoods within the City of Boston, as well as other independent suburbs. The Proposed Action does not have an appreciable effect in the noise exposure ranges associated with any of these communities, as shown in Table 4.6-3.

The current EA represents the fourth time that this specific Proposed Action has been evaluated for noise impacts by the FAA. The March 2016 IER, which used data from the FAA's older Integrated Noise Model (INM) tool, represented the initial evaluation of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure. As part of a NEPA evaluation supporting the reconstruction of Runway 4R at the Airport, a December 2017 noise screening was run using the FAA's Terminal Area Route Generation, Evaluation, and Traffic Simulator (TARGETS) Noise Plugin, which allows an analyst to feed TARGETS procedure designs directly into AEDT for rapid noise evaluations that do not require the detailed population and supporting data found in an EA. In this evaluation, the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure was used temporarily while Runway 4R was reconstructed. Similarly, a NEPA evaluation supporting the reconstruction of Runway 9-27 at the Airport was completed in summer 2020, with the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L again being evaluated as a temporary procedure to be used during the reconstruction. None of these three evaluations have found any significant or reportable noise increases brought about by the implementation of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure.

Table 4.6-4 depicts the population exposed to various levels of noise associated with the Airport under the Proposed Action Alternative. Approximately 39% of the GSA population would be exposed to levels between DNL 45 dB and DNL 55 dB, and less than 7% would be exposed to noise levels above DNL 55 dB. The areas of highest noise exposure are in the immediate vicinity of the Airport.

Table 4.6-5 presents the changes in the population exposed to various levels of noise exposure for the Proposed Action Alternative compared to the No Action Alternative. Implementation of the Proposed Action Alternative would not result in changes to the number of persons exposed to noise levels of DNL 65 dB or higher.

Table 4.6-6 summarizes key results of the noise analysis for conditions under the Proposed Action Alternative. The results indicate that the Proposed Action Alternative does not include 1.5 dB or higher increases in any areas exposed to DNL 65 dB or higher, 3 dB or higher increases in areas exposed to DNL between 60 dB and 65 dB, nor 5 dB or higher increases in areas exposed to DNL between 45 dB and 60 dB. In summary, there are no significant or reportable increases in noise because of the Proposed Action.

4.6.5 Noise Sensitivity Analysis

FAA believes the assumptions in its noise analysis are reasonable for the reasons explained above and based on coordination with FAA's air traffic personnel. However, in response to concerns from the public during the comment period for the Draft EA, and in light of the inherent uncertainties about future weather conditions and also the extent to which pilots may choose to fly the 4L RNAV procedure on an advisory basis, the FAA elected to also conduct a secondary noise analysis for informational purposes. This secondary noise analysis assumed that 100% of the arrivals to RWY 4L would use the RNAV procedure. To be clear, this is not a plausible operational usage scenario. However, the results of the noise analysis demonstrate the limited impact this procedure could have even in an unrealistic 100% usage scenario. Under this scenario, the maximum noise increase observed at any population centroid was DNL 2.2 dB, while the maximum noise decrease observed at any population centroid as DNL -2.8 dB. Notably, there would still be no reportable or significant noise impacts. This is primarily because even if pilots elected to fly the RNAV procedure on an advisory basis as they approach the runway, there is limited variation in tracks between arriving aircraft regardless of whether they are flying a visual approach or assigned to the RNAV procedure. In fact, according to ATC, aircraft using the procedure on an advisory basis would not do so until they were cleared by ATC to complete a visual approach, which would not occur until the flight crew establishes visual contact with the runway.. As a result, the secondary noise analysis is even more conservative than what would actually occur operationally if the RNAV procedure were to be used on an advisory basis. In sum, the implementation of Proposed Action under this implausible scenario would have a limited and non-significant impact relative to the existing conditions at BOS.

4.7 Socioeconomics, Environmental Justice, and Children's Environmental Health – Environmental Justice Only

This section is limited to a discussion of Environmental Justice (EJ) as it pertains to the environmental consequences of aircraft noise impacts in the GSA. As outlined in Section 3.4.7, an EJ analysis considers the potential of the Proposed Action Alternative to cause disproportionate and adverse effects on low-income or minority populations. If adverse effects are determined, applicable mitigation ensures that no minority or low-income populations bear a disproportionate burden of those effects.

The Proposed Action Alternative will not involve any construction of physical facilities or change in noise exposure levels more than the applicable thresholds of significance. There would be no acquisition of real estate, no relocation of residents or community businesses, no disruption to local traffic patterns, no loss in community tax base, and no changes to the fabric of the community. Under the Proposed Action Alternative, there are no Census block groups of low-income concern that would exceed any applicable thresholds of significance for noise impact or air quality. While the FAA does not define a threshold of significance associated with visual impacts, visual impacts associated with the 255 net new flights, as well as the flights that previously flew the ILS RWY 15R and transitioned visually to a landing on Runway 4L that now use the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L approach in the Proposed Action, occur over an area with a high concentration of EJ Census block groups. Additionally, it should be noted that the small increase in CO associated with the 255 new net flights, while marginal in the context of total Airport CO emissions, does similarly occur over an area with a high concentration of EJ Census block groups. However, these new arrival operations comprise less than 0.5% of all arrivals at the Airport and given the high volume of flights currently using the Airport, any potential impacts are likely to be small and not detectable to the overflown population. As such, no persons of low income or minority populations are expected to experience disproportionately high and adverse effects. Accordingly, under the Proposed Action Alternative there would be no significant EJ impacts.

4.8 Cumulative Impacts

The anticipated projects at the airports in the GSA were identified in the Affected Environment Cumulative Impacts section, which can be found in Section 3.4.8.

> "Cumulative effects analysis should 'count what counts', not produce superficial analysis of a long laundry list of issues that have little relevance to the effects of the proposed action or the eventual decisions.
> "Do other activities (whether governmental or private) in the region have environmental effects similar to those of the proposed action?"[27]

The evaluation of this array of past, present, and reasonably foreseeable projects, was based on 40 CFR 1508.25(a)(3), which instructs that the analysis consider:

> "Similar actions, which when viewed with other reasonably foreseeable or proposed agency actions, have similarities that provide a basis for evaluating their environmental consequences together, such as common timing or geography. "

In following this guidance and based on the lack of environmental consequences from the Proposed Action Alternative, this analysis focuses on projects from the list of projects compiled within Section 3.4.8 and listed fully in Appendix C that could cumulatively affect noise and/or the impact on noise sensitive resources (e.g., compatible land use, Section 4(f), and Section 106).

In the research of potential projects at airports within the GSA, some of these projects at the Airport consisted of projects on the landside area such as the Logan Airport Parking Project and the Terminal C Canopy, Connector, and Roadway Project. These landside projects impacts would likely be limited to the landside areas but the environmental documents for the Framingham Logan Express Expansion, Logan Airport Parking, Terminal C Canopy, Connector and Roadway, Terminal E Modernization, and Logan Airport Renovations and Improvements at Terminals B & C/E projects were all reviewed for documentation of any noise impacts. The only noise impacts discussed in the review of the environmental documents were temporary construction related noise impacts. All but one the documents stated that aircraft noise levels would not change due to the project--the one exception was the Terminal E Modernization Project, which was expected to "improve noise conditions from ground operations as compared to the future No-Action Alternative, as the terminal extension would act as a noise barrier to the community."[28] The Airport recently completed an rehabilitation of Runway 9-27 and an enhancement of the Runway Safety Areas off of Runway 9-27, which will have no impact on the Proposed Action Alternative as traffic on Runway 9-27 is unaffected by the Proposed Action. With the recent slowdown in flight activity, the project was moved up and the runway was reopened on August 7, 2020. There is a scheduled project to rehabilitate Runway 4L-22R in 2021 depending on the availability of funds, but no cumulative impact is expected as the Proposed Action, an arrival procedure into Runway 4L, would not be operating during a closure of Runway 4L.

The proposed reconstruction work at Mansfield Municipal Airport is in the vicinity of the Proposed Action Alternative as this airport is just due south of the NUNZO waypoint. The Mansfield Municipal Airport is a general utility, general aviation airport and the reconstruction of Runway 14-32 (the airport's primary runway) could result in changes to the local soundscape. However, the noise impact of the Proposed Action Alternative around Boston Logan International Airport is orders of magnitude below the 1050.1F thresholds with a No Action DNL value below 32 DNL, well below the 45 DNL threshold.

Non-aviation projects can also have a cumulative impact when considered alongside the Proposed Action Alternative. A full list of non-aviation projects in the GSA was compiled and can be found in Appendix C. This list of projects includes projects originated from the Boston Region Metropolitan Planning Organization, the City of Boston, the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA), the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, and multiple local municipalities. Several projects were eliminated from potential consideration as the extent of the project was unaffected by the Proposed Action Alternative such as MBTA's Wellington Yard and Maintenance Facility Rebuild. The remaining projects were assessed for potential permanent noise impacts that would be supplemented by the impact of the Proposed Action Alternative. No projects were identified that could conceivably contribute to the noise levels reported in Section 4.6 where the cumulative impacts could create a significant noise impact.

On top of the aviation and non-aviation projects already considered, the Proposed Action Alternative has already been considered for cumulative impacts relative to all existing arrival and departure procedures at the Airport. The radar traffic data covering the period baseline timeframe that was used to build the No Action Alternative includes aircraft flying those existing procedures at the Airport and so the comparison between the No Action and Proposed Action alternatives considers the potential impact from all other existing Airport procedures. As there were no significant or reportable noise increases discussed in Section 4.6, the addition of the Proposed Action to the existing Airport airspace will not contribute to any noise threshold being exceeded. As a result, it can be concluded that the small incremental impacts of the Proposed Action Alternative will not create a cumulative impact that will reach the significant or reportable threshold with respect to noise when environmental consequences are considered cumulatively with the consequences of past, present, and reasonably foreseeable projects.

Public Involvement

5.1 Summary of Public Outreach and Coordination

As outlined in FAA Order 1050.1F, information about the EA must be coordinated with various stakeholders including various government agencies, tribal communities, and the public. The Proposed Action will likely be familiar to many members of the Airport community as the Proposed Action was introduced to the public in two well attended meetings in 2015, and the environmental impacts were initially evaluated in March 2016 and this Environmental Assessment was prepared in response to public input received from the public, local, state, and federal officials as part of outreach summarizing that initial 2016 environmental review. The FAA has been providing updates to both Massport and the Massport Community Advisory Committee on the status of the Proposed Action and FAA's environmental review.

The FAA initiated consultation regarding the Proposed Action under Section 106 and the ACHP's implementing regulations in June 2020 to satisfy Section 106's public involvement requirements in conjunction with the NEPA process. The correspondence included the FAA's proposed finding which was sent to all consulting parties (e.g., local historical commissions, tribal parties, interested parties, and planning commissions) to allow for the 30-day review period prescribed in 36 CFR § 800.5. The correspondence developed by FAA during the consultation process for the assessment of adverse effects to historic resources from the Proposed Action as prescribed in 36 CFR § 800.5 is included in Appendix E and is listed below.

- June 2020 – FAA Letter to MHC
- July 2020 – MHC Responding to FAA's Consultation Initiation Letter
- October 2020 – FAA Letter to MHC Proposing APE
- December 2020 – MHC Responding to FAA and Concurring with Proposed APE
- June 2021 – FAA Letters to Historical Commissions, Tribal Parties, Planning Commissions, and Other Interested Parties
- July 2021 – MHC Letter to FAA Requesting Additional Information
- August 2021 – FAA Letter to MHC with Additional Requested Information
- September 2021 – MHC Letter to FAA Asking Additional Project Questions
- October 2021 – FAA Letter to MHC with Additional Answered Questions
- November 2021 – MHC Letter to FAA Identifying Potentially Impacted Historical Properties
- January 2022 – FAA Letter to MHC with Additional Information in Support of FAA's Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect
- January 2022 – FAA Letter to Interior Secretary with Notification about National Historic Landmarks

On September 21, 2020, the Draft EA was published and its Notice of Availability was published in the Boston Globe, the Boston Herald, and the Patriot Ledger. The notice of the Draft EA availability was provided to key local stakeholders and these notices and publications can be found in Appendix E of this document. The full list of these notified stakeholders can be found in Appendix F. The Draft EA was made available on the project website starting on September 21, 2020 and was also available at the following libraries:

- Boston Public Library, Central Library, 700 Boylston St, Boston, MA
- Boston Public Library, Codman Square, 690 Washington St, Boston, MA
- Boston Public Library, Fields Corner, 1520 Dorchester Avenue, Dorchester, MA
- Boston Public Library, Grove Hall, 41 Geneva Avenue, Boston, MA
- Boston Public Library, Lower Mills, 27 Richmond St, Boston, MA
- Boston Public Library, Mattapan, 1350 Blue Hill Avenue, Boston, MA
- Boston Public Library, Roxbury, 149 Dudley St, Roxbury, MA
- Boston Public Library, South Boston, 646 E Broadway, South Boston, MA
- Boston Public Library, South End, 685 Tremont St, Boston, MA
- Milton Public Library, 476 Canton Avenue, Milton, MA
- Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St, Quincy, MA

A briefing of these findings were also given to members of Congress and local elected officials on September 21 and 22, 2020. The Notice of Availability included the project website address (FAABostonWorkshops.com), instructions as to how to comment on the Proposed Action via the project website, information about the Virtual Public Workshops and the complete details about the comment period. The project website allowed interested members of the public the opportunity to review the Draft EA, information about the public comment period, and information about the upcoming public meeting.

Two Public Workshops were held in a “virtual” format on October 23, 2020 from 11:00 am to 12:30 pm and October 28, 2020 from 6:00 pm to 7:30 pm. During each Public Workshop an informational presentation was followed by a question and answer period during which members of the public shared concerns with members of the FAA and its consultant staff. These questions asked during this question and answer period were not considered official comments on the Draft EA and this fact was announced multiple times throughout the Public Workshop; participants in the Public Workshops were repeatedly encouraged to submit their questions as comments to the Draft EA through email, mail, or the project website All comments were considered equally by FAA and its consultant in the development of the Final EA. Comments could be made via email or mail. In response to a request from the public for additional commenting time, the original planned comment period was extended from the 30 days to 60 days when public comments would be accepted.

There were forty-one comments received in response to the Draft EA including four physical letters, eighteen emails, and nineteen messages submitted through the project website. The comments covered a wide range of categories including ongoing development at the Airport, historic procedures used at the Airport, and multiple impact categories discussed within the Draft EA. The Final EA was updated in response to these comments and Appendix I of the document contains a full directory of the comments received in response to the Draft EA and a written response to every comment.

On May 4, 2022, the Final EA was published and its Notice of Availability was published in the same three newspapers as before, the Boston Globe, the Boston Herald, and the Patriot Ledger. This Notice of Availability will also be available for review in the Federal Register. The Final EA document will be available for review on the project website and will also be available in the same Boston area libraries listed above.

DRAFT

This Initial Environmental Review (IER) should provide some basic information about the proposed project to better assist in preparing for the environmental analysis phase. Although it requests information in several categories, not all the data may be available initially. However, it does represent information, in accordance with FAA Order 1050.1F, "Environmental Impacts: Policies and Procedures," which ultimately will be needed for preparation of the environmental document.

I. Project Description

A. Attach copy of the most recent Project Status Report.

Attachment 1: Proposed RNAV (GPS) IFR Approach to Boston Logan Airport Runway 4L, briefing charts, prepared by U.S. DOT Volpe Center for Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), presented at Outreach Meeting at the Mass. State Transportation Building, May 18, 2015.

B. Has airspace modeling been conducted using SDAT, TAAM, TARGETS, or other airspace/air traffic design tool?

☒ Yes Model: FAA Procedure Design Software ☐ No

A Non-Rule Airspace Study (Attachment 2) was performed by the FAA Eastern Service Area (ESA) and a prototype approach plate has been generated (Attachment 3) by the FAA Flight Standards Service. The proposed procedure has been accepted by the FAA Instrument Flight Procedures (IFP) office. Its current status is "At Flight Check" (Figure 1), as shown by the IFP Gateway internet site: https://www.faa.gov/air_traffic/flight_info/aeronav/procedures/.

C. Describe the present (no action alternative) procedure in full detail. Provide the necessary chart(s) depicting the current procedure. Describe the typical fleet mix, quantifying (if possible) the number of aircraft on the route and depict their altitude(s) along the route.

Logan Airport — Boston Logan International Airport is the busiest airport in New England and among the nation's busiest. In 2013, Logan ranked 19th among U.S. airports when measured by passenger enplanements and ranked 18th in number of aircraft operations.[2] Logan's annual passenger count (arriving and departing) exceeds 30 million. Logan Airport is an economic engine for the metropolitan Boston area (population: 5.8 million) and the entire New England region (population: 14 million). Logan accounts for approximately $9 billion in annual economic activity. It directly provides over 11 thousand jobs, and impacts approximately 90 thousand jobs.

Logan is one of the Core 30 airports designated by the FAA to have an overall significance to the national air transportation system.[3] It is the only Core 30 airport in New England. Due to their importance, the Core 30 airports are the initial implementation sites for many Next Generation Air Transportation System (NextGen) projects. Boston Logan is also the only New England airport whose real-time departure and arrival status is provided on the FAA's Command Center website.[4]

Runway Instrument Approach Guidance — Although it receives approximately 10% of Logan's arrivals, Runway 4 Left (4L) lacks any instrument approach guidance system or associated procedure. This is unusual for a frequently-used arrival runway at a major airport. A report[5] prepared by the MITRE Corporation for the FAA in 1997, when only the Instrument Landing System (ILS) was available as a source of both lateral and vertical guidance, estimated that 95.2% of approach operations by air carrier aircraft had lateral and vertical guidance. Undoubtedly, the percentage is higher today, with GPS available as an alternative source of lateral/vertical guidance. Generally, at busy airports that service passenger carriers, all runways that are regularly used for arrivals have both ILS and GPS guidance.

The current near-universality of approach guidance at major airports was not always the case. Lack of an approach guidance system for a runway occurred for a variety of reasons, but at older, smaller airports such as Logan was often based on real estate constraints. However, during the past few years, several major airports with real estate constraints — including LaGuardia Airport (LGA), John F. Kennedy International Airport (JFK) and Newark Liberty International Airport (EWR) — have implemented a GPS-based Instrument Approach Procedure (IAP) to a runway that could not satisfy ILS's real estate requirements.

The International Civil Aviation Organization[6] (ICAO) strongly supports use of satellite navigation systems, terming them the Global Navigation Satellite System (GNSS), as other nations have deployed satellite systems as well. ICAO recommends that GNSS-based lateral and vertical guidance be provided to all runways having instrument approaches — including those with ILS already installed, as any ILS will be unavailable at times.[7] The FAA follows this practice, and has implemented GPS-based RNAV approaches to over 3,500 runways nationwide (Table 3, page 14). All five runway ends at Logan that have ILS installed also have a GPS-based RNAV IAP.

At Boston Logan, there is residential housing at the location where the localizer antenna for an ILS serving Runway 4L would be placed — see Section VI.A (page 80). There is also a history of opposition to perceived airport improvements. As a result, Logan Runway 4L is one of a few runways in the U.S. which land over 500,000 passengers annually without an approach instrument guidance system. However, the situation at Logan does not preclude establishing an RNAV GPS IAP to Runway 4L, as RNAV GPS IAPs do not require equipment or real estate on or near the airport.

Logan Northeast Flow Configuration — Because Boston Logan Runway 4L lacks an instrument approach guidance system, when the airport is configured for a northeast flow (Figure 2), which occurs approximately 35% of the time, approaches to Runway 4L from the south are only conducted when the cloud ceiling is at least 3,000 feet (and preferably 4,000 feet) and the visibility is at least 5 statute miles — the operationally usable Visual Meteorological Conditions (VMC) for this configuration.[8] When the ceiling is 1,000 feet or higher, but less than 3,000 feet, a few approaches to Runway 4L are conducted using two other procedures that are discussed below.

No-Action Alternative — The No-Action Alternative is that the current procedures for use of Runway 4L will continue. When the airport is configured for a northeast flow:

a) If operationally usable VMC prevails — Runway 4L will continue to be utilized as the secondary arrival runway, with Runway 4 Right (4R) remaining as the primary arrival runway. Runway 4L will continue to be generally assigned to smaller / lighter aircraft. Arrivals will continue to utilize controller vectors followed by pilot visual operation, and to be steered by the pilot throughout an approach operation. The maximum Airport Arrival Rate (AAR) of 61 aircraft per hour, 32 on Runway 4R and 29 on Runway 4L, will not change.

[6] ICAO is a specialized agency of the United Nations. It codifies the principles and techniques of international air navigation and fosters the planning and development of international air transport to ensure safe and orderly growth.

[7] ICAO's 37th General Assembly (2010) adopted Resolution A37-11.

[8] Other operationally usable ceiling and visibility limits may apply to other airport configurations and at different airports. For Class B airspace, including the region surrounding Boston Logan, the regulatory definition of VMC is visibility at least 3 statute miles and that the aircraft be clear of clouds (Federal Aviation Regulations, Part 91.155).

b) If operationally usable VMC does not prevail — Runway 4L will remain largely unavailable (exceptions are described below). The current AAR, 32 aircraft per hour, all on Runway 4R, will not change. Arrival delays similar to those which occur today will continue to occur.

The predominant Runway 4L VMC arrival procedure is illustrated in Figure 3 (arrivals are shown in red and departures in blue). Flight ASQ4694, an Embraer E145 regional jet intending to land on Runway 4L has been vectored by the controller into a position west of the ILS localizer straight-in course for Runway 4R that is being followed by flights SWA1739, AAL2141 and VRD352. The controller will instruct the ASQ4694 pilot to promptly report when he/she: (1) Can visually locate traffic closer to the airport on approach to Runway 4R and (2) Has Runway 4L is in sight. When both conditions are met, the controller will issue a clearance to execute a visual approach to Runway 4L. It then becomes the pilot's responsibility to maintain separation from other aircraft while safely completing an approach/landing on Runway 4L. To do so, the pilot will manually steer the aircraft throughout the approach.

DRAFT

Most aircraft that land on Runway 4L follow the procedure described immediately above. Aircraft arriving from the south/southwest begin to form a well-defined path that is aligned with the runway near the Neponset River separating Milton and Boston. Other aircraft, particularly those arriving from the northwest, join this path over the Boston neighborhoods of Mattapan, Dorchester and South Boston.

Two other procedures, observable in Figure 4 and Figure 5, are used less often.

- Some aircraft arriving from the south follow the ILS straight-in approach to Runway 4R beginning about 15 nautical miles from the airport. With clearance from ATC, and when the airport and other traffic are visible, they execute a "sidestep" maneuver and land on Runway 4L.
- When the cloud ceiling has decreased below the operationally usable level of 3,000 to 4,000 feet, some maneuverable (generally propeller) aircraft arriving from the northwest follow the ILS approach to Runway 15R. When an aircraft is below the cloud ceiling, it executes a circling approach and lands on Runway 4L.

With a Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP available, it's expected that these alternative procedures would be used even less frequently than they are today.

The most significant characteristic observed in the vertical profiles in Figure 6 is the relatively large spread in aircraft altitudes. This generally occurs with visual vertical guidance. With the proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP, the vertical spread will be significantly smaller (test data indicate approximately one-half), and will be concentrated near the middle of the spread seen in Figure 6 — see Section II.A (starting on page 41), especially Figure 20. Also evident in Figure 6 are level flight segments at 3,000 feet and 4,000 feet. Level flight consumes more fuel and generates more emissions than the continuous descent trajectory that an RNAV (GPS) IAP provides.

Separate from the FAA Proposed Action, JetBlue Airlines has proposed an RNAV Visual Flight Procedure (RVFP), pursuant to FAA Order 8260.55[9], for approaches to Runway 4L. If approved, the RVFP would be placed on file at the FAA. Other air carriers could apply to the FAA for approval to use it.

If the proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP is adopted, its use would largely occur when reduced ceiling and/or visibility conditions prevail. The current VMC procedure described above (combination of controller vectors and pilot visual operation) is considered to be safe and effective when conditions permit its use, and it would continue to be used during operationally usable VMC. For aircraft equipped with advanced navigation capabilities, the pilot executing a visual approach could use the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP guidance information on an advisory basis (i.e., without notify the controller) during the final segment of the operation.[10]

The RVFP proposed by JetBlue involves flight trajectories similar to those of the current vector-visual procedure. If approved, it could also be utilized during VMC — either on advisory basis or upon being cleared for the procedure.

Current Runway 4L/4R Usage — Table 1 and Figure 7 portray arrival statistics to Runways 4L and 4R during 2013. Data are from the Airport Surface Detection Equipment, Model X (ASDE-X) system at Logan. Under operationally usable VMC — which reflects the inherent demand for arrival services — the actual number of arrivals on 4L were 58.1% of those on Runway 4R (15,135 / 26,030). Pertinent here is that Boston TRACON has a requirement to favor Runway 4R (a primary arrival runway) over Runway 4L (a secondary arrival runway) at all times of day/night until the Runway 4R final arrival stream extends to 10 nautical miles. Thus:

a) In combination, Runways 4L and 4R have sufficient capacity to meet peak levels of arrival demand (there are no arrival delays when both runways are available); and [10] Pilots cleared for a Visual approach may utilize instrument guidance, if available, on an advisory basis, but remain responsible for separation from other aircraft and obstacles.

DRAFT

b) Without Runway 4L being available (except for small propeller aircraft arriving from the northwest) during Instrument Meteorological Conditions (IMC), there is insufficient capacity to meet the demand for arrival capacity. The result is that delays occur.

At the onset of IMC, the current practice is to cease approach/landing operations to Runway 4L from the south and southwest using the controller-vector/pilot-visual procedure described above. Most aircraft that would land on 4L using the current procedure are then added to the queue of those that will land on Runway 4R. A significant consequence is that aircraft with Boston Logan as their destination experience delays — primarily in the form of ground holds before departure and some in the form of flight patterns that are longer than would be otherwise necessary. Since more aircraft must land on Runway 4R during IMC, the time when traffic is busiest is extended, sometimes beyond midnight. Subsequent undesired effects include:

- Additional fuel burned;
- Additional greenhouse gas emissions (such as CO_2) as well as other emissions
- Increased noise later in the evening, when noise is most annoying to the public;
- Passenger time lost;

- Airline schedules disrupted; and
- Controllers' workday extended.

Fleet Mix — The mix of aircraft landing on Runway 4L today is similar to that landing on Runway 4R, except that it does not include widebody aircraft. It includes aircraft from single piston-engine propeller aircraft up to and including turbojets weighing approximately 270,000 pounds (e.g., B757s). Arrival aircraft on Runway 4L during 2013 are detailed in Table 2 (only aircraft making up 1.0% or more of the total are displayed). Approximately 48% of Runway 4L arrivals during 2013 were jet aircraft. Three aircraft types accounted for 47.9% of the arrivals.

D. Describe the proposed project, providing the necessary chart(s) depicting changes. Describe changes to the fleet mix, numbers of aircraft on the new route, and their altitude(s), if any.

RNAV (GPS) IAP — The proposed project is the implementation of a publically available (published) area navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) IAP to Boston Logan Runway 4L.[11] RNAV (GPS) IAPs are one of several types of Performance Based Navigation (PBN) procedures which are a key element of the FAA's Next Generation Air Transportation System (NextGen) program.

[11] A runway end having an RNAV (GPS) IAP usually has multiple procedure types listed on a single approach plate — i.e., some or all of the following: Localizer Performance with Vertical guidance (LPV), Lateral Navigation (LNAV), Lateral Navigation/Vertical Navigation (LNAV/VNAV), Localizer Performance (LP). All types provide lateral guidance; only LPV and LNAV/VNAV also provide vertical guidance and are proposed for Runway 4L.

DRAFT

The proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP will provide lateral and vertical guidance, enabling continuous descent to the runway and use of the aircraft autopilot, if desired. The RNAV (GPS) IAP guidance will be available and utilized in three distinguishable situations (termed 'use cases'):

- Use Case: IMC — During IMC, typically an aircraft will be cleared by ATC for use of the RNAV (GPS) IAP[12] beginning at the Initial Approach Fix (IAF) AAALL or the Intermediate Fix (IF) LVRON (see Figure 12, page 21). Because of the proximity of Runway 4R and the roles of each runway (Runway 4R is primary, Runway 4L is secondary), utilization of this case is expected to be limited to approximately 2,500 operations per year when arrival traffic is heaviest. Today, all of these aircraft would land on Runway 4L at a later time.
- Use Case: VMC/Visual — During VMC, an aircraft which are cleared for a Visual approach[10] can utilize any available guidance on an advisory basis (i.e., without controller involvement) to improve safety and reduce fuel consumption. Pilots will fly the same ground tracks that they do today, but have guidance available (particularly vertical) during the final straight-in flight segment. This case is expected to be utilized 2,500 to 4,000 times annually.
- Use Case: VMC/IAP — During VMC, an aircraft may be cleared by ATC for use of the RNAV (GPS) IAP[10] beginning at the Initial Approach Fix (IAF) AAALL or the Intermediate Fix (IF) LVRON. This is expected to be the least utilized of the three cases – utilized, roughly, a few hundred times annually. Generally, use will be by aircraft approaching from the south that today utilize the Runway 4R ILS and execute a sidestep maneuver when the airport is in sight.

Currently, Runway 4L does not have any approach procedure that authorizes use of an instrument guidance system during low ceiling/visibility conditions. RNAV (GPS) procedures are the most cost-effective option to address this deficiency.[13] RNAV (GPS) approach procedures are widely used in the U.S. Over the past decade, the FAA has implemented RNAV (GPS) IAPs for over 6,000 runways at over 2,700 airports (Table 3). This includes RNAV (GPS) IAPs for six runway ends at Logan Airport, one of which does not have an ILS — see Figure 18 (page 45).

DRAFT

[12] When an aircraft is cleared for an instrument approach, ATC retains responsibility for safe separation from other aircraft, regardless of weather conditions. When an aircraft is cleared for a Visual approach under VMC, the pilot is responsible for safe separation from other aircraft; the pilot may use guidance signal that he/she considers to be safe and appropriate.

[13] Largely due to factors associated with the airport equipment required — especially the need for dedicated land at specific locations and the cost of purchasing, installing and maintaining safety-critical equipment — U.S. ILS installations were limited to less than 2,000 nationwide. Priority was given to arrival runways at airports serving air carriers. The low cost and absence of the need for real estate has enabled RNAV (GPS) to provide equivalent service to 3,628 runway ends (1,929 that also have ILS and 1,699 that do not), and lateral-only guidance to more than 2,400 additional runway ends.

† Generally, "Part 139" Airports — i.e., certified by the FAA in accordance Title 14, Part 139 of the Code of Federal Regulations — serve scheduled air carriers.

‡ Provides lateral and vertical guidance, and is proposed for Logan Runway 4L.

In Table 3, consider the Part 139 (air carrier) airports and the LPV procedure type (ILS equivalent). The number of LPV approaches implemented on non-ILS runways (48) is 2.8% of the total number (1,396) of LPV / Part 139 installations. A study referenced earlier[5] found that, in circa 1997 (before the advent of GPS approaches), 4.8% of air carrier approaches were done without vertical guidance. Given the wide deployment of GPS during the past 15 years, it appears that Logan Runway 4L is among the last 1% or 2% of runways that service air carriers without providing any form of vertical instrument guidance.

Ground Track and Vertical Path — Figure 8 depicts the proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP course to Runway 4L (with waypoints) over its full 15.4-NM length. The procedure's minimum altitudes at waypoints are denoted by an underscore. For context, tracks for JetBlue Airlines flights (Airbus A320 and Embraer E190 jets) during April-May of 2013 using the current arrival procedure are also shown. The tracks for the proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP are within the "footprint" of the tracks for current jet arrivals to Runway 4L.

For the proposed IAPs, lateral guidance will be provided by GPS satellites. Depending upon the aircraft's equipage, vertical guidance will be provided by either GPS satellites (LPV procedure type) or the aircraft's VNAV system (LNAV/VNAV procedure type). VNAV is an advanced aircraft capability requiring a barometric altimeter system, a Flight Management System (FMS) computer, specialized software, and flight director (and autopilot in most cases). Functionally, both GPS and baro-VNAV guidance sources provide steering and thrust information needed to follow a pre-defined vertical path. Virtually all modern aircraft with "glass cockpits" (computer type displays rather than individual instrument gauges) have these capabilities.

Figure 9 shows the vertical path of the proposed procedure, along with vertical paths currently flown using visual guidance. Runway 4L has a Precision Approach Path Indicator (PAPI) light/prism device located beside the runway with a 3.00 degree glide slope angle. The PAPI's purpose is to provide visual vertical guidance during VMC. However, depending upon the prevailing visibility and the aircraft distance from the centerline extended, it may not be seen beyond 4.3 nautical miles (5 statute miles) from the airport. Almost half of the visual approaches seen in Figure 9 are below the 3.1 degree glide path angle that will be followed by aircraft utilizing either the RNAV (GPS) IAP or the RVFP — and some may be lower than the 3.0 degree PAPI glide path. Also, several of the flights have level segments. Level flight consumes more fuel and generates more noise than continuous descent does.

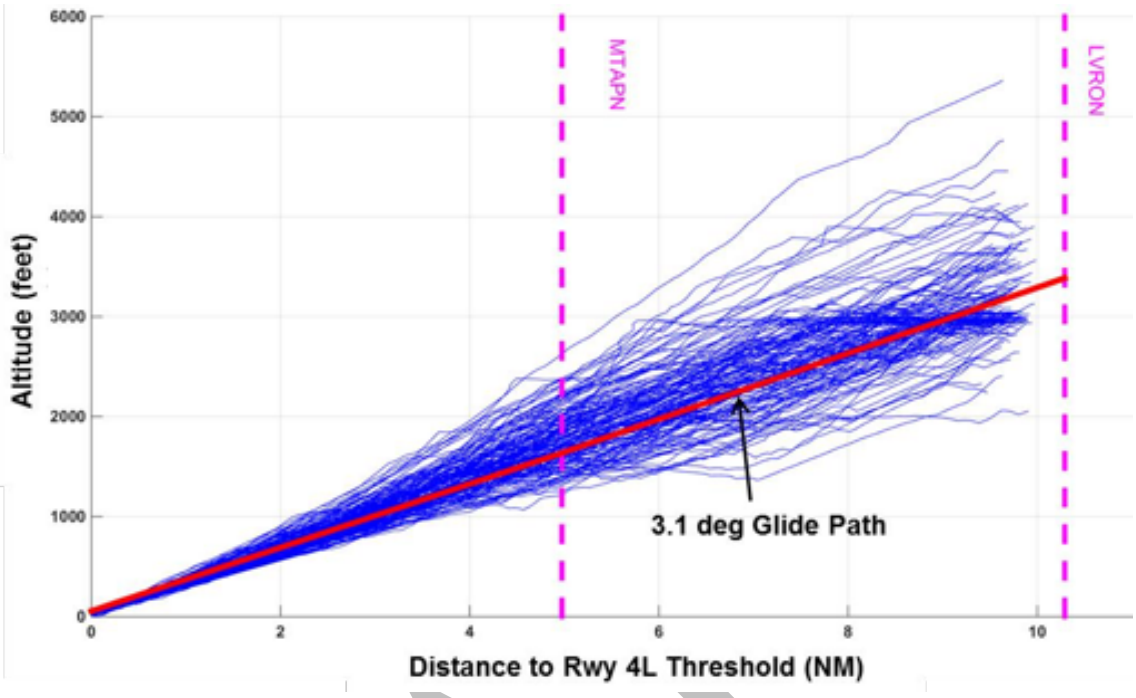

Figure 9 Proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP Vertical Path and Vertical Paths for JetBlue Flights Using Visual Guidance during April-May 2013.

Because the centerlines of Runways 4R and 4L are separated by 1,500 feet, use of the proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP (or the RVFP) for Runway 4L must take account of the way the arrivals to Runway 4R are controlled. That is, Runway 4L arrivals cannot be managed independently of Runway 4R arrivals. Moreover, the designation of Runway 4R as the primary arrival runway for the VMC Northeast flow airport configuration, whereas Runway 4L is the secondary arrival runway, must also be taken into account. Under all conditions, arrivals to Runway 4R follow the ILS course that is aligned with the runway centerline. Arrivals to Runway 4L must be separated from arrivals to Runway 4R in accordance with a complex set of air traffic rules.[14]

Expected Usage of Proposed Action during IMC — Under IMC, only the FAA's proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP will be available to conduct approaches to Runway 4L. When visibility and ceiling conditions are deteriorating ("marginal VMC"), controllers may cease use of Visual approaches more quickly than they would if the IAP were not available.

Under IFR, aircraft approaching Runways 4R and 4L must be separated either longitudinally or, if both are in level flight, vertically (Figure 10).[10] Approaches to closely-spaced parallel runways cannot be conducted independently. Rather, aircraft at the same altitude (within 1,000 feet) must take account of the separation distance to the preceding aircraft on both runways.

When two aircraft employ instrument approach guidance, each approaching one of a specific runway pair for which wake mitigation measures have been approved, including Logan Runways 4R and 4L, reduced longitudinal separation standards apply. [15] It is expected that use of reduced minimum longitudinal separations will enable the Logan AAR under IMC to be increased from the current 32 per hour (for Runway 4R used exclusively) to 36 per hour (with both runways used). The same increase in AAR was achieved at San Francisco International Airport (SFO) when wake mitigation procedure was implemented.

Expected Usage of Proposed Action during VMC — Figure 11 depicts paths for both the proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP and JetBlue's proposed Runway 4L RVFP, as well as tracks for the representative arrivals to Runway 4L utilizing the controller-vector/pilot-visual procedure. Both proposed RNAV procedure would be available under VMC. Figure 11 utilizes ASDE-X data collected during 2013. Attachment 14 presents similar information collected from the Logan airport radar system (ASR-9/Mode S) during 2015. The airport radar system has greater measurement range than the ASDE-X. Attachment 14 shows conclusively that both the FAA's proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP and JetBlue's proposed Runway 4L RVFP would only involve overflying areas that are currently overflown by Visual approaches.

Should both of the proposed Runway 4L RNAV procedures be approved, during VMC it is expected that 80% to 90% of aircraft will be cleared for Visual approaches (as today). Most arrivals to Runway 4L will have ground tracks similar to those flown currently (see Figure 4 and Figure 5). This conclusion was reached after consultation with Air Traffic Controllers who managed traffic during the six-month test of JetBlue's proposed RVFP.

Depending upon the track flown, when an aircraft on Visual approach is near one of the Runway 4L RNAV procedures' Final Approach Fixes (FAMRR, WITTR or MTAPN), the pilot is expected to elect to use the RNAV procedure guidance on an advisory basis (i.e., without involvement of ATC), to obtain the safety and environmental benefits provided by vertical guidance during the final phase of the approach.

Under VMC, a limited number of aircraft may be cleared to LVRON or HOCCY. Issuance of these clearances will depend upon several factors — e.g., controller workload and nearby traffic.

Flight Director / Autopilot Utilization — When approaching Runway 4L today without instrument guidance, the aircraft must be steered manually ("hand flown") using visual guidance. However, if an approach instrument guidance system (e.g., ILS or RNAV), were available, the pilot could utilize displays on the aircraft depict the path to be flown. Then the pilot does not need to navigate based on visual information from airport, but has more precise guidance information displayed in the cockpit.

Even with instrument guidance available, there remains the task of steering the aircraft so that it follows the path defined by the guidance system in the presence of unanticipated disturbances (e.g., wind gusts). This can be, and in aircraft without advanced avionics must be, done by the human pilot.

The path defined by an approach guidance system can be followed more accurately if the aircraft has (in addition to instrument guidance) a Flight Director (FD).[16] An FD is a specialized computer that calculates the roll, pitch and yaw angle commands that enable the aircraft to closely follow the path defined by the instrument guidance system. The pilot enters the procedure to be flown into the FD, and the GPS receiver and altimeter provide real-time position information. The FD then displays steering cues for achieving the desired trajectory. The FAA's proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP requires the use of a Flight Director.

By regulation, aircraft with more than 20 seats must have both an FD and an autopilot installed. Modern business jets generally have both an FD and autopilot as well. When engaged, the autopilot steers the aircraft in accordance with the FD's commands and pilot performs a monitoring (rather than steering) function.[17] The result is that: (1) the desired trajectory is followed more closely than it would be without an FD/autopilot; and (2) the pilot's workload is decreased, thereby increasing safety. Much of the benefit of having an instrument guidance system available is that it enables the use of an autopilot.

VMC Safety Improvement — The Proposed Action will have a substantial safety benefit, as detailed in Section II.A (Project Purpose and Need, starting on page 41). During VMC, some aircraft will utilize RNAV (GPS) guidance information, including coupling the RNAV (GPS) guidance signal to the autopilot to improve safety and reduce pilot workload. Safety benefits are inherently statistical — reducing accident risk from a rare event to an even rarer event — and may not be immediately meaningful to all parties. However, in the long run, they are the most important benefit.

IMC Delay Reduction — The Proposed Action's most readily perceived benefit will occur when visibility is less than 5 statute miles or the cloud ceiling is less than 3,000 to 4,000 feet. For these conditions, Runway 4L cannot now be used for arrivals. With the proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP available, approach/landing operations would be conducted to Runway 4L as well as to Runway 4R during less-than operationally usable VMC. The benefits will include:

- Aircraft and passenger delays reduced (Section II.A, starting on page 41, and Section II.B.1, starting on page 56)

[16] https://www.faa.gov/regulations_policies/handbooks_manuals/aviation/advanced_avionics_handbook/media/aah_ch04.pdf

[17] When the autopilot is used to fly the proposed RWY 4L RNAV GPS IAP, it must be disengaged at or before reaching the decision height (specified on the procedure approach plate). The pilot manually controls the aircraft thereafter. Automatic landing ("autoland") is not authorized for the proposed RWY 4L RNAV GPS IAP.

DRAFT

- Periods of heavy arrival traffic during IMC (when Runway 4R is operating close to its capacity and Ground Delay Programs (GDPs) and Ground Stop (GS) programs are often operative) would be reduced (Section II.A, page 41).

Environmental Impacts — The Proposed Action's noise exposure impact will be negligible (Section I.D.7, starting on page 26). Aircraft fuel consumption and emissions will be reduced (Section II.B.2, starting on page 62).

Increased Resiliency — The Proposed Action will increase the airport's resilience in unusual, adverse circumstances — e.g., Runway 4R closed for repairs, or being cleared snow, or by the presence of a disabled aircraft.

Procedure Description — For planning purposes, an Air Traffic Procedures specialist has designed RNAV (GPS) approaches to Runway 4L for LPV and LNAV/VNAV procedure types (Figure 12). The procedures types have the following characteristics:

- Course Azimuth: offset to the west of runway centerline by 2 degrees
- Glide Path Angle: 3.1 degrees
- Threshold Crossing Height: 50 feet
- LPV: Decision Altitude, 318 feet; RVR, 50 (5,000 feet)
- LNAV/VNAV: Decision Altitude, 658 feet; Visibility, 2½ statute miles — provided aircraft climb capability is at least 443 feet per nautical mile
- LNAV/VNAV: Decision Altitude, 766 feet; Visibility, 2½ statute miles — when aircraft climb capability is less than 443 feet per nautical mile

The RNAV (GPS) procedure is not available to approach category E aircraft (i.e., certain military aircraft). [18]

Arrival Rates — The maximum VMC AAR for KBOS in a northeast flow configuration would remain at 61 arrivals per hour (32 on Runway 4R, and 29 on Runway 4L) for ideal visual conditions with no runway or taxiway closures. Under IMC, the AAR for KBOS in a northeast flow configuration would increase from the current level of 32 per hour using Runway 4R exclusively, to 36 per hour using both runways. The expected decrease in arrival delays is discussed in Section II.B.1 (page 56).

No Change in Number of Airport Operations — No changes are anticipated in the number of Logan Airport arrivals or departures as a result of the Proposed Action. Airlines are not regulated, and generally have the ability to establish fight frequencies. Airlines' primary concern when planning flight activities is economic. Only when an airport is "slot controlled" do improvements to the airport or surrounding airspace come into consideration. Boston Logan is not one of the four U.S. airports that are slot controlled by the FAA.[19] When economic and other factors are favorable, airlines can add flights to/from Logan today, and will continue to have this flexibility with or without the Proposed Action.

[18] Aircraft approach categories are based on landing speed (Code of Federal Regulations, Title 14, Part 91.3).

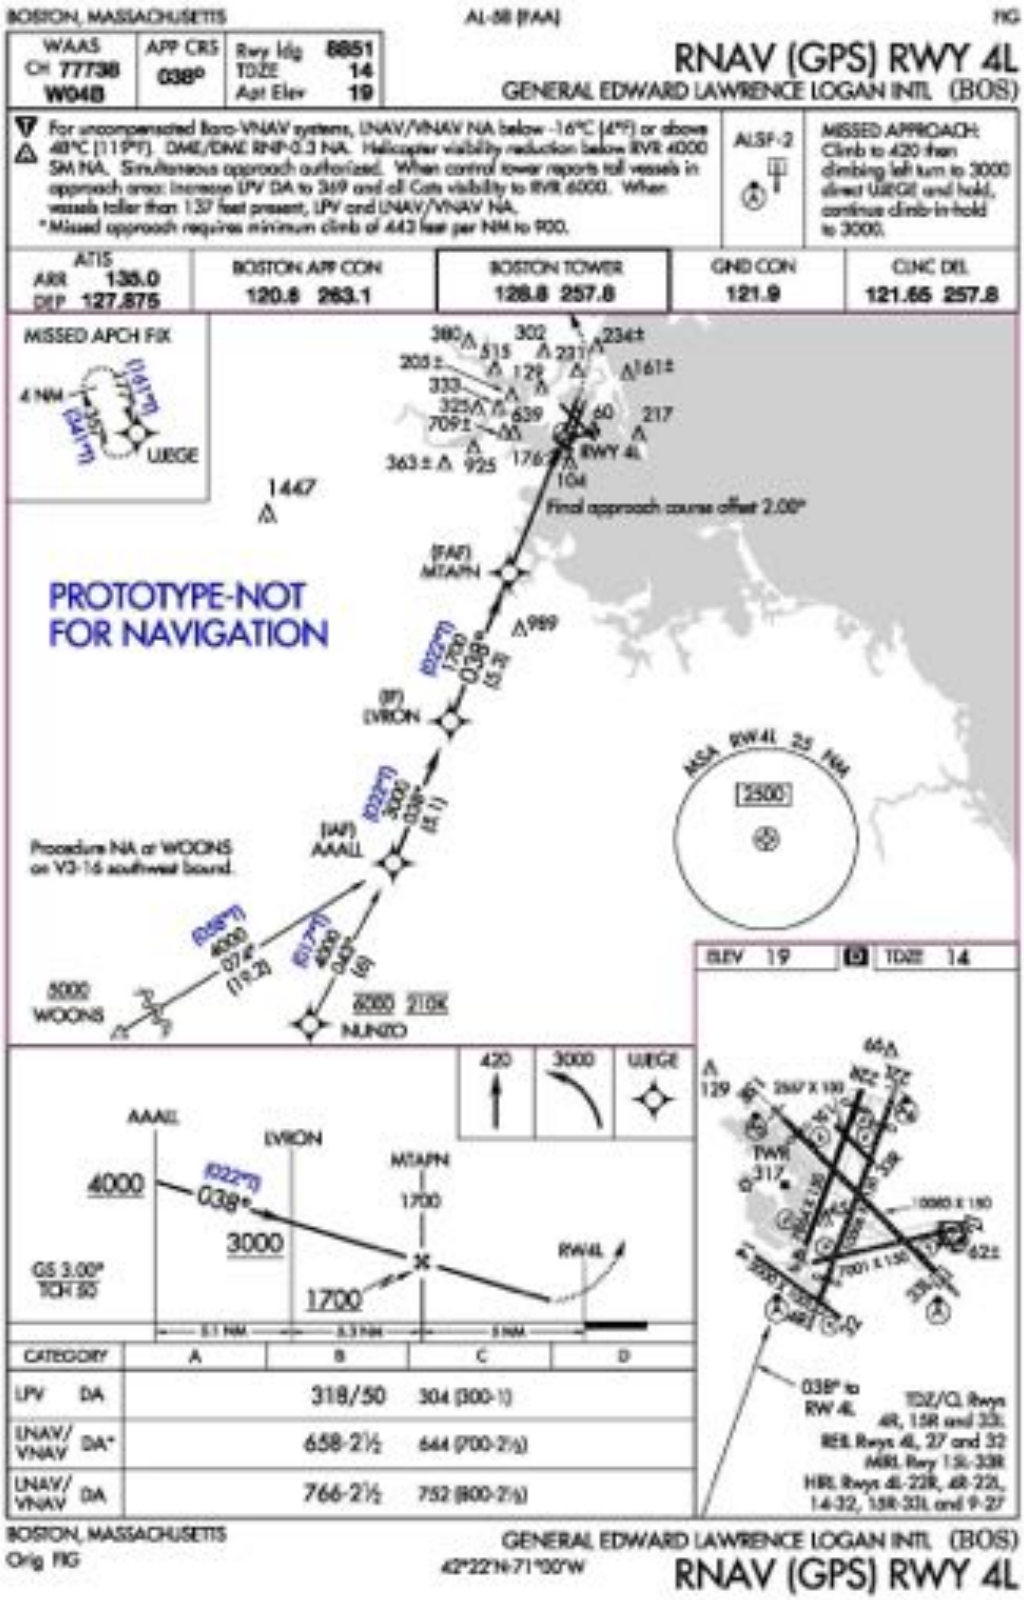

Figure 12 Prototype Approach Plate for Proposed RNAV (GPS) Instrument Arrival Procedure to Runway 4L

No Changes in Number or Type of Aircraft Using Runways 4L/4R — No changes are expected in the total number of arrivals (or departures) utilizing Runways 4L and 4R in combination as a result of the Proposed Action. Due to the standard operating procedure of the Boston TRACON — to favor arrivals to Runway 4R over Runway 4L — the number of aircraft landing Runway 4L will not change during VMC. An estimated 435 aircraft would use the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP annually under VMC, beginning at the Initial Approach Fix AAALL. The use of the IAP would largely be as an alternative the current practice of using guidance from the Runway 4R ILS and executing a sidestep to land on Runway 4L. An estimated 2,500 aircraft would use the IAP during VMC on an advisory basis when between MTAPN and the runway. These aircraft would be cleared for the same controller-vector/pilot-visual procedure as today.

During IMC, the number of Runway 4L landing operations will increase slightly because of the availability of the proposed IAP. The number of aircraft landing on Runway 4R will decrease by the same amount. In 2013, there were 16,927 arrivals on Runway 4L and 41,952 arrivals on Runway 4R, for a combined total of 58,879 (Table 1, page 11). It is projected that, if the RNAV (GPS) IAP had been available, the number of aircraft arrivals to Runway 4L would have increased by 2,469 to 19,396 and the number of arrivals to Runway 4R would have decreased by 2,469 to 39,483. The combined total would not have changed. The annual number of arrival aircraft that would be shifted from Runway 4R to Runway 4L is comparable to the year-to-year fluctuations in the number of arrivals due to variations in the weather and other operational conditions.

The fleet of aircraft arriving on Runway shown in Table 2 (page 12) will not change as a result of implementing the proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP.

Ground Track Changes — When an aircraft is shifted from the ILS approach to Runway 4R to the RNAV approach to Runway 4L, the ground track would shift westward by an average of approximately one-half of a statute mile (Figure 10). The Runway 4L and 4R centerlines are separated by 1,500 feet, and the separation of the ground tracks for IMC arrivals to the two runways increases by approximately 200 feet per nautical mile distance from the airport. Thus at 15 nautical miles from the airport (approximately the location of the Initial Approach Fix, AAALL, near the Stoughton/Sharon border), the distance between the tracks will be approximately 4,500 feet.

Fewer Late-Night Arrivals — Shifting flights from Runway 4R to Runway 4L during IMC would enable these flights, as well as other flights "behind them in line" but not shifted to Runway 4L, to have reduced delays. Notably, for 2013, the arrival times of approximately 255 flights would have been shifted from after 10 p.m. to before 10 p.m. (A small number of flights would still arrive after 10 p.m.) The Day-Night sound Level (DNL) calculation in the Integrated Noise Model (INM) weights an operation after 10:00 p.m. as ten operations before 10:00 p.m. Thus, in the INM, shifting 255 operations to before 10:00 p.m. is equivalent to a reduction of 9 x 255 = 2,295 annual daytime operations.

DRAFT

1. Will there be actions affecting changes in aircraft flights between the hours of 10 p.m. – 7 a.m. local?

   ☒ Yes ☐ No

   The Proposed Action, in comparison to the No-Action Alternative, is expected to reduce the number of arrivals to the airport during the hours of 10 p.m. – 7 a.m. local time. The Proposed Action will enable approaches currently not permitted under low-visibility conditions to Runway 4L during IMC earlier in the day, when traffic is heavier. Because the total number of aircraft arriving is not anticipated to change, an increase in runway usage early in the day will lead to a decrease in runway usage during the evening.

   Figure 24 (page 52) illustrates this expected benefit of the Proposed Action for a day (June 27, 2013) when IMC prevailed. The blue curve shows the actual arrivals per hour for Runway 4R; Runway 4L was not in use due to the weather conditions. At 11:00 a.m. (11:00 hours), when Runway 4R was being used to capacity, a nationwide Ground Delay Program (GDP) was initiated to limit the number arriving aircraft to a rate that Logan Airport could handle without prolonged in-flight holding. The GDP remained in place until 11:00 p.m. (23:00 hours) in the evening (see Figure 24). During the day, significant delays built-up, with the result that reasonably heavy arrival traffic persisted to 1:00 a.m. the following day.

   The reddish-brown curve in Figure 24 depicts the hypothetical arrivals, for the same day, to Runways 4L and 4R combined, assuming that Runway 4L was used as a result of the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP procedure being implemented. If Runway 4L were available, the same number of aircraft could have landed by 10:00 p.m. (22:00 hours) using both runways as actually landed by 1:00 a.m. the following day using Runway 4R only. Arrival delays would be reduced substantially (see Section II.B.1, page 56).

2. Is a preferential runway use program presently in effect for the affected airport(s), formal or informal?

   ☐ Yes ☒ No

   A formal runway use (assignment) program is not in place. However, there are related restrictions, guidelines and testing. There is ongoing Runway Use Plan testing and analysis as part of the Boston Logan Airport Noise Study (BLANS) Phase 3. The first test was conducted during November 12, 2014 - May 10, 2015; it addressed the feasibility of using a different morning configuration than was used during the previous evening. The second test was conducted during May 11, 2015 - November 10, 2015; it addressed the feasibility of changing runway configurations after the morning departure push and again before the evening peak period. Test results are now being evaluated. More tests may be performed.

   When the airport is configured for a northeast flow, Boston TRACON has a requirement to favor Runway 4R over 4L at all times until the Runway 4R final arrival stream extends beyond 10 miles (which involves 3 or 4 airplanes). After 10 p.m., there is generally (i.e., except for days involving prolonged periods of IMC) not enough traffic to warrant having simultaneous streams of approaches to Runways 4R and 4L, so it is generally not done — but is not prohibited.

Additionally, Massport has published runway use guidance: Between midnight and 6 a.m. local time, Runway 33L is the preferential runway for arrival and Runway 15R is the preferential runway for departures (published in the FAA Airport/Facility Directory). Other Massport restrictions on runway use include no jet departures from Runway 4L and no jet arrivals to Runway 22R. Additionally, Runway 14/32 can only be accessed from the southeast end; landings from the northwest on Runway 14 are not permitted, nor are takeoffs from Runway 32 toward the northwest. Use of Runway 32 for arrivals and Runway 14 for departures must meet wind speed and direction criteria.

Will airport preferential runway configuration use change as a result of the proposed project?

☐ Yes ☒ No

3. Is the proposed project primarily designed for Visual Flight Rules (VFR), Instrument Flight Rules (IFR) operations, or both?

☐ VFR ☒ IFR ☐ Both

Proposed Action is an IAP.

If this specifically involves a charted visual approach (CVA) procedure, provide a detailed local map indicating the route of the CVA, along with a discussion of the rationale for how the route was chosen.

N/A

4. Will there be a change in takeoff power requirements?

☐ Yes ☒ No

Proposed Action is an IAP. Takeoffs are not involved.

If so, what types of aircraft are involved, i.e., general aviation propeller-driven versus large air carrier jets?

N/A

5. Will all changes occur above 3,000 feet above ground level (AGL)?

☐ Yes ☒ No

What is the lowest altitude change on newly proposed routes or on existing routes that will receive an increase in operations?

DRAFT

Proposed Action is an IAP to Runway 4L, and will involve route changes for aircraft between 5,000 feet MSL and field level (however, almost all above 1,500 feet). When Runways 4R and 4L are considered in combination, there will be no increase in the number of arrivals or types of aircraft that fly these approaches.

The proposed arrival procedure to Runway 4L (as defined on an approach plate similar to Figure 12) will begin at an altitude of approximately 5,000 feet (at 15 NM from the Runway 4L threshold) and end at the applicable decision altitude (from where visual guidance is employed). The preponderance of aircraft utilizing the proposed IAP will be aircraft (estimated to be 2,469 annually) that currently land on Runway 4R under IMC.

In Figure 12, the decision altitude (DA, when the runway must be visible to the pilot) for an RNAV LPV procedure type is 318 feet above Mean Sea Level (MSL); the DA for an LNAV/VNAV procedure type is 658 feet or 766 feet MSL, depending upon the aircraft climbing capabilities. Selection of the procedure type will depend upon aircraft equipage. Both procedure types will enable approach/landing operations to be conducted at lower cloud ceilings than the current visual procedure described in Section I.C (page 4).

It is projected that: (a) During VMC, the number of arrivals to Runway 4L will be unchanged; and (b) During IMC, approximately 2,469 flights annually that currently land on Runway 4R will instead land on Runway 4L earlier in an operational day. An estimated 255 flights per year whose arrival times current are after 10 p.m. will land before 10 p.m. For important measures of aircraft annoyance (including the INM) which "count" an operation after 10 p.m. as ten operations before 10 p.m., the Proposed Action will effectively eliminate 2,295 annual arrivals.

6. Will there be actions involving civil jet aircraft (heavier than 75,000 pounds gross weight) arrival procedures between 3,000-7,000 feet AGL or departures between 3,000-10,000 feet AGL? Attach a copy of the completed Air Traffic Noise Screening (ATNS) Model report.

Arrival procedures of civil jet aircraft heavier than 75,000 pounds gross weight will be affected between 3,000-7,000 feet AGL. The proposed procedure does not involve departures. Under the proposed procedure, it is estimated, using 2013 ASDE-X data, that:

- During IMC, 2,469 aircraft that would currently land on Runway 4R during less than operationally usable VMC will land on Runway 4L instead, earlier during an operational day. Of these, 1,481 aircraft will be non-jets (weight less than 10,000 pounds) and 988 will be civil jet aircraft.
- During VMC, 435 (of 16,927) aircraft will be cleared to use the proposed procedure. These will be aircraft arriving from the south that currently follow the Runway 4L ILS approach, but execute a sidestep maneuver when the airport is in sight.

DRAFT

The total count of arrivals to Runways 4R and 4L combined is not projected to change based on the Proposed Action. During VMC, over 97% of the arrivals to Runway 4L will not be cleared to use the proposed IAP.

A noise analysis was performed using the INM, and is addressed in Section I.D.7.

7. If noise analysis was already performed using the FAA's Integrated Noise Model (INM) or Noise Integrated Routing System (NIRS), provide a summary of the results.

Rationale — In terms of flight path changes, the FAA's Proposed Action involves: changes for less than 5% of the arrivals to closely-spaced parallel Runways 4L and 4R (shown below). No construction is involved; no areas are overflown that are not currently overflown; there will not be additional flight operations to the runways combined, nor to the airport; no new aircraft types will be introduced; and there will not be a change in airport configuration criteria.

In situations such as this, that are sure to result in small (and likely negligible) impacts, if a quantitative noise analysis is performed, the simpler Air Traffic Noise Screening Model (ATNS) is often used. However, in this circumstance, a more thorough analysis using the INM was performed for the following reasons:

- Changes in flight paths would take place below 3,000 feet MSL
- A request was received from JetBlue Airlines to approve an RVFP to the same runway, raising concern over cumulative impact
- Recent (2013) implementation of an RNAV Standard Instrument Departures (SID) involve overflights of areas that are close to those overflown by Runway 4L approaches, further raising the issue of cumulative impact
- There is a high degree of public interest
- Public officials requested that an environmental analysis be performed.

To address further the high degree of public interest, the level of disclosure in this IER is greater than usual.

INM Methodology — Noise analysis was performed using the INM version 7.0d, the analysis tool required by FAA Order 1050.1E for an Environmental Assessment (EA) or Environmental Impact Statement (EIS).[20,21,22]. This INM analysis built on noise [20] FAA Order 1050.1E, including Change 1: Environmental Impacts: Policies and Procedures; March 20, 2006, was in force when this project began in May 2012.

[21] FAA Order 1050.1F, Environmental Impact: Policies and Procedures, superseded Order 1050.1E effective July 16, 2015. Federal Register, Notice, July 24, 2015, Citation 80 FR 44207. Order 1050.1F's applicability and scope are defined in paragraph 1-9 of that Order.

[22] Order 1050.1F requires use of Aviation Environmental Design Tool (AEDT) Version 2b via the associated Desk Reference. However, "the use of AEDT 2b is not required for projects whose analysis began before the effective date of this policy". Federal Register, Policy Statement, May 15, 2015, Citation 80 FR 27853.

analysis performed for the Boston Logan Runway 33L RNAV SID[23]. However, an updated BLANS baseline was used. The updated baseline accounts for the Runway 33L SID and changes to Runway 27 departure routes.

The INM is compliant with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and implementing regulations issued by the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ).[24] The noise analysis followed FAA guidance. Coordination with the FAA Office of Environment & Energy (AEE) was undertaken regarding use of the INM.

As required by FAA Order 1050.1E and 1050.1F, the INM employs the average day-night sound level (DNL) as the primary metric for noise exposure. DNL is the time-average of all A-weighted aircraft-generated sound for a 24-hour period, with a 10 dB upward adjustment to the levels for operations during the 10 p.m. - 7 a.m. period. This accounts for increased human sensitivity to noise during that period, when ambient noise is generally reduced.

DNL was initially proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in 1974 as the best metric to describe the effects of noise on humans.[25] It was adopted by the FAA in 1981. Subsequently, in 1992 the Federal Interagency Committee on Noise (FICON) concluded that "there are no new descriptors or metrics of sufficient scientific standing to substitute for the present DNL cumulative noise exposure metric."[26] DNL has been adopted by other federal agencies to quantify human annoyance to environmental noise — including the EPA, the Federal Transit Administration and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Criteria for determining the impact of increases in aircraft noise due to a Proposed Action are shown in Table 4, together with the sources from which these criteria are derived. Exceedance of a threshold may trigger further investigation or mitigation.

BLANS 2015 Baseline vs. 2013 ASDE-X Data — The BLANS 2015 Baseline is a database of aircraft arrivals and departures to/from Logan Airport. It includes the number of arrivals and departures for a defined set of airport configurations (Table 5), aircraft types, ground tracks, altitude profiles and noise generated. It is distinct from the ASDE-X arrival data also used in this analysis (e.g., Table 1, page 11). However, the differences are small. For example, the BLANS Baseline specifies 16,922 arrivals to Runway 4L, whereas 16,927 arrivals are shown in Table 1. The mix of aircraft in the BLANS Baseline is similar, but not identical, to that shown in Table 2. These small discrepancies do not influence the conclusions drawn from this analysis.

Airport Configurations — The airport configurations employed in the INM analysis are shown in Table 5. These configurations, including their frequency of usage, were developed by Boston Logan Airport Noise Study (BLANS). The configurations are identical to, and their frequencies of usage are almost identical to, those used for the Environmental Assessment (EA) of the Logan Airport Runway 33L RNAV SID.[27] The four configurations with grey shading were not changed from the BLANS 2015 Baseline, while configurations C1 and C2 were changed for this study. The FAA Proposed Action (Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP to Runway 4L) involves changes to Configurations C1 and C2. The JetBlue Proposed Action (RVFP to Runway 4L) only involves changes to the Configuration C1.

Study Area — The study area is defined as the geographic area potentially impacted environmentally by a Proposed Action. According to FAA Order 1050.1F, the altitude ceiling for environmental consideration regarding airspace actions is 10,000 feet AGL. The Study Area encompasses roughly a 20 nautical mile (NM) radius around Logan Airport, generally corresponding to BOS Class B airspace and includes altitudes up to 14,000 feet above mean sea level (MSL). The 1,500 square mile Study Area and altitude ceiling are consistent with the study area used for the ongoing BLANS.

Analysis Cases — Four cases were analyzed, as described in Table 6.

Noise exposure predictions were made, for each Case described in Table 6, for 59,873 2010 census block centroids. (A census block is the smallest geographical unit that the United States Census uses to collect data. A small number of centroids are designated for locations of interest that do not have any residents — e.g., industrial areas and runway ends.) The population of the study area is 3,318,888; thus, the average census block has 55.4 persons.

The INM was also employed to predict noise exposure at 24,295 locations representing noise-sensitive facilities and historic resources. These include publicly owned parks, recreation areas, wildlife and waterfowl refuges, and public or private historic sites. These are commonly referred to as "Section 4(f) Sites" because the requirement originated in Section 4(f) of the Department of Transportation Act of 1966.

The traditional method of analysis of INM calculations is to compare the predicted DNL for each of the non-baseline cases to the DNL for the Baseline Case, at each of the 84,168 locations. DNL levels less than 45 dB are not considered further.

The focus of comparisons when DNL is at least 45 dB is the most adverse changes (largest DNL increases) in noise exposure. The most adverse changes are compared to the thresholds in Table 4 and judgments made on that basis. Although not required, the ranges of DNL changes for each community, and the associated population changes, are reported herein, as well.

Case #1 (Baseline) Definition — The No-Action Alternative (Case #1) is the BLANS 2015 Baseline. This baseline had been updated to incorporate all the RNAV arrival and departure procures now implemented, including the Runway 27 and Runway 33L RNAV SIDs. Results presented herein include the noise generated by all departure and arrival operations.

DRAFT

Case #2 (IMC Impact) Definition — For this INM analysis, Case #2 only involved operational changes involving use of the FAA-proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP to Runway 4L during IMC. As described in Section I.D, it was determined from analysis of 2013 ASDE-X data that, had it been available, the Proposed Action would be have been used during IMC by approximately 2,469 aircraft during the 319 hours[28] that Runway 4R was capacity stressed and IMC prevailed.

These operations were allocated to the three most-frequent arrival aircraft to Runway 4L: Cessna 402, 60% (1,481 aircraft); Embraer E190, 20% (494 aircraft); and Airbus A320, 20% (494 aircraft). The rationale is that, during IMC, controllers will, to the extent possible, assign propeller/piston-driven aircraft to Runway 4L (rather than Runway 4R) for reasons of efficiency. (Higher traffic efficiency is achieved when aircraft are segregated by size.) The Cessna 402 is the most frequent arrival aircraft to Runway 4L and also serves as a surrogate for other small aircraft shifted to Runway 4L. The Embraer E190 and Airbus A320 are the second and third most frequent arrival aircraft to Runway 4L, and serve as surrogates for large regional jets and full-sized jets, respectively, shifted to Runway 4L.

Case #3 (VMC Impact) Definition — In order for the INM analysis to reflect the impact of other possible actions involving Runway 4L, INM analysis for VMC (Case #3) included both the FAA's proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP and the RNAV Visual procedure proposed by JetBlue Airways — see Figure 11 (page 18). It was estimated by the Boston Consolidated TRACON that 10% to 20% of arrivals on Runway 4L during VMC would use the two RNAV procedures. Accordingly, tracks for 3,260 annual arrivals (approximately 20% of the total) were shifted from the current controller-vector/pilot-visual procedure to an RNAV procedure in accordance with Table 7. These are the largest/heaviest aircraft that land on Runway 4L, so the resulting DNL estimates are intended to over-bound the actual change in noise exposure.

Table 7 INM Case #3: Annual Number of Aircraft Cleared for RNAVs during VMC

Aircraft	Day	Night	Total
Embraer E190	670	38	708
Airbus A320	432	21	453
Airbus A319	564	69	633
Airbus A321	100	0	100
Boeing 737	663	111	774

Bombardier Dash 8	64	24	88
Bombardier CRJ900	112	0	112
TOTAL	2,941	319	3,260

[28] This figure is consistent with the delay management programs initiated by air traffic controllers at Logan Tower and Boston Consolidated TRACON. During 2013, controllers initiated GDPs for 249 hours and GSs for 45 hours, or a total of 294 program hours.

DRAFT

Aircraft were assumed to be cleared by controllers to Runway 4L RNAV procedures as follows:

- 282 arrivals cleared to the RVFP at WITTR
- 2,543 arrivals cleared to the RVFP at HOCCY
- 435 arrivals cleared to the RNAV GPS IAP at AAALL.

As stated in Section I.C (page 4), it is expected that 80% to 90% of arrivals during VMC will be cleared for the controller-vector/pilot-visual procedure that is currently used (rather than being cleared for either RNAV procedure). These aircraft will, however, have the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP and the Runway 4L RVFP available as advisory guidance after joining the final leg of the approach that is aligned with the runway (Figure 5, page 9). In fuel-consumption analysis addressed in Section II.B.2 (starting on page 62), it is assumed that 2,000 jet aircraft and 500 propeller aircraft cleared for a Visual approach use the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP annually in this way. Similarly, it is assumed that 4,000 jet aircraft and 1,000 propeller aircraft annually use the RVFP for advisory guidance after aligning with the runway centerline. However, although the aircraft will fly higher, smoother trajectories, no credit is taken for the noise reduction that will occur with advisory guidance.

Case #4 (Cumulative Impact) Definition — Case #4 assesses the cumulative impact of Case #2 and Case #3 when combined.

Aircraft RNAV Utilization Summary — Use of the two RNAV arrival procedures as a function of meteorological conditions is shown in Table 8.

* Ground track expected to be changed from current procedure

† Ground track not expected to be changed from current procedure

Because some aircraft are expected to be cleared for the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP during VMC, there is not a one-to-one correspondence between the two proposed RNAV procedures and the two weather conditions. However, for two reasons, the effect of the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP can be well approximated by Case #2 and the effect of the RVFP can be well approximated by Case #3.

First, use of the IAP during VMC will largely replace current use of the Runway 4R ILS for sidestep operations, involving a westward shift of approximately 2,500 feet in aircraft ground tracks. Except for this change (involving a small in number of aircraft and a small distance in track changes) Case #2 is equivalent to the IAP and Case #3 to the RVFP.

DRAFT

Second, based on percentages:

- The effect of the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP can be well approximated by Case #2, as Case #2 consists of 85.0% of the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP operations
- The effect of the RVFP can be well approximated by Case #3, as 86.7% of the Case #3 operations that are changed from the current controller-vector/pilot-visual procedure are aircraft cleared for the RVFP.

Anticipated Effects of Proposed Procedures — Because (a) less than 10% of the annual arrivals on Runway 4L and 4R combined will have their trajectories changed, and (b) the RNAV tracks do not overfly areas that are not currently overflown, the overall impact of the RNAVs is expected to be small and possibly negligible.

The INM standard assumption is that, when aircraft are flying an approach below 3,000 feet, they utilize ILS guidance. While true for the vast majority of air carrier approaches at major U.S. airports, it is not true for approaches to Logan Runway 4L. While a non-standard profile could have been developed and used, that was not done because reliable data for the associated noise emissions for each aircraft involved were not available.

The FAA's and JetBlue Proposed Actions both involve providing vertical guidance to aircraft on approach to Runway 4L during VMC, whereas Runway 4L approaches currently must be "hand flown" without the benefit instrument guidance. As a result, the INM analyses herein do not take into account reductions in noise that would be obtained by replacing "hand-flown" visual approaches with instrument-guided approaches when the flight director and autopilot are utilized.

Table 9 summarizes the anticipated effects of the operational changes associated with the two proposed RNAV procedures on the noise exposure of persons/places on the ground. Some operational changes will not change the noise exposure on the ground, but will move the time and/or location affected. Some operational changes will reduce the noise exposure at the same location. Some will do all three.

Level of Precision — Computed DNL output changes of less than a tenth of a decibel have little significance — e.g., they correspond to shifts in DNL contours that are less than the wingspan of many aircraft. Thus, as is often done, DNL values are reported herein to a tenth of a decibel. (Independently, a BLANS report determined that DNL changes of less than 0.1 dB should be regarded as "no change".[29]) For example, a calculated change of 0.049 dB is reported as 0.0 dB, but a calculated change of 0.050 dB is reported as 0.1 dB. This practice is consistent with the precision of the smallest threshold for changes shown in Table 4 (1.5 dB).

INM Case #1 — Figure 13 shows predicted Baseline (Case #1) DNL levels of 45 dB and greater in 5 dB increments for all Logan Airport arrivals/departures (Table 5). The figure does not depict portions of the study area where the DNL is less than 45 dB. DNL levels are depicted at population centroids; consequently, there are gaps where people do not reside — e.g., parks and bodies of water. Because the figure is population oriented, it does not convey the fact that well over 50% of the surface area exposed to DNL 45 dB or greater is the Atlantic Ocean.

As expected: (1) locations close to the airport are exposed to the highest noise levels; and (2) noise "fingers" project outward from the airport along the centerline extensions of each runway. Logan has well-used runways that point in several directions, as suggested by the multiple "noise fingers". Because the Boston area coastline is irregular and involves several peninsulas, the centerline projection of every runway (i.e., the charted arrival route, which must be used during IMC) passes over populated areas within 10 nautical miles of the airport. There are no purely over-water arrival routes to Logan Airport.

Table 10 shows the Greater Boston area population exposure to aircraft noise in 5 dB DNL ranges. Slightly more than two-thirds (67.5%) of the 3,318,888 persons residing within the Study Area are not exposed to DNL levels of 45 dB or greater. An estimated total of 2,974 persons (0.09%) are exposed to 65 dB DNL or greater; 65 dB is the FAA's threshold of significant exposure cited in Table 4.

INM Case #2 (IMC Impact) — Figure 14 presents the INM-predicted DNL changes for Case #2, the effect of the FAA's Proposed Action during IMC. Two types of information are shown on this graphic. The Baseline (Case #1) DNL values are depicted as contour lines without "filled in" coloring, using the same DNL values (for

The DNL changes within the DNL ≥ 45 dB contour are detailed in Table 11. As a percentage of the applicable threshold, the largest DNL increase is 3.3%, which occurs for 60 ≤ DNL < 65. Approximately 97 thousand persons would experience a DNL increase, and 520 thousand persons would experience a decrease (a 5.4-to-1 ratio). Considered in light of the threshold criteria of Table 4, the overall assessment is that, during IMC, the FAA's Proposed Action will have negligible impact on the noise experienced on the ground.

INM Case #3 (VMC Impact) — Figure 15 shows the INM predicted DNL changes for Case #3, the impact of both the FAA's and JetBlue's Proposed Actions during VMC. As for Case #2, two types of information are shown on the graphic. The Baseline (Case #1) DNL values are depicted as contour lines without "filled in" coloring, using the same DNL values (45 dB, 50 dB, etc.) and color scheme used in Figure 13.

DNL changes (Case #3 minus Case #1) are shown as filled in areas in Figure 15. Locations with DNL decreases are shown with green shading, and those with increases are shown with purple shading. Within the area having DNL values of 45 dB or greater, locations with DNL decreases (green shading) are more prevalent than those with increases (purple shading). However, all changes are considered to be negligible.

There are two population centroids for which the INM predicts a 0.3 dB DNL increase (see Table 12). One centroid has a population of 71 people, the other centroid has 0 people. These centroids are located in Mattapan, adjacent to and south of the small area having an increase of 0.2 dB, essentially on the 45 dB contour. These centroids are too small to show graphically in Figure 15.

A summary of the changes for Case #3 is shown in Table 12. Approximately 36 thousand persons would experience a DNL increase of up to 0.3 dB, and 193 thousand persons would experience a decrease of up to 0.5 dB. As a percentage of the applicable threshold, the largest DNL increase is 5.1%, which occurs for the 45 ≤ DNL < 60 range. When considered in light of the threshold criteria of Table 4, the overall assessment is that during VMC, both Proposed Actions will have negligible impact on the noise experienced on the ground.

INM Case #4 (Cumulative Impact) — Figure 16 shows the INM-predicted DNL changes for Case #4 relative to Case #1, for locations where the Baseline DNL is 45 dB or greater. Case #4 addresses the cumulative impact of both the FAA's proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP procedure and the JetBlue proposed RVFP when both are used during both IMC and VMC. As for Cases #2 and #3, two types of information are shown on the graphic. The Baseline (Case #1) DNL values are depicted as contour lines without "filled in" coloring, using the same DNL values (45 dB, 50 dB, etc.) and color scheme used in Figure 13.

increases and decreases are too small to show on the figure. All changes are negligible relative to the threshold in Table 4.

Table 13 is a summary of the changes in the population exposure for the three DNL ranges defined in Table 4. In terms of these ranges, the cumulative effect of the two Proposed Actions is to slightly reduce population exposure to noise.

Greater than or equal to 65	No Change	0
60 to less than 65	Decreased	272
45 to less than 60	Decreased	1,109
Less than 45	Increased	1,381

Table 14 is a summary of the changes in DNL and population exposure for centroids having DNL levels within the three ranges defined in Table 4. (Table 14 does not necessarily involve DNL change that result in transition between the ranges shown in Table 4, whereas Table 13 does.) As a percentage of the applicable threshold, the largest DNL increase is 6.0%, which occurs for the 45 ≤ DNL < 60 range. Approximately 48 thousand persons would experience a DNL increase, and approximately 637 thousand persons would experience a DNL decrease (a 13-to-1 ratio). Considered in light of the threshold criteria of Table 4, the assessment is that both actions combined will have a negligible but generally beneficial impact on the noise exposure on the ground.

*46,347 persons are exposed to DNL increases of 0.1 or 0.2 dB; 71 persons are exposed to a DNL increase of 0.3 dB.

As was true for Case #3, for Case #4 there are two population centroids that the INM computes as having a 0.3 dB DNL increase (see Table 14). One centroid has a population of 71 people, the other centroid has 0 people. These centroids are located in Mattapan, adjacent to and south of the small area having a DNL increase of 0.2 dB, essentially on the 45 dB contour. These centroids are too small to show graphically in Figure 16.

The changes in population exposure to cumulative increases and decreases in DNL shown in Table 14 are not the sums of the increases/decreases in Table 12 (page 36) and Table 13 (page 37). This occurs because the two proposed RNAV procedures impact common areas on the ground. (Only when two procedures do not affect common areas on the ground can the population exposure increases/decreases due to individual procedures be added.) The population experiencing a cumulative decrease, while not equal to the sum of populations experiencing decreases for the two weather conditions, is larger than that experiencing a decrease for either condition separately. However, the population experiencing a cumulative increase in noise exposure is numerically between that experiencing an increase for either weather condition separately. Some of the increases caused by the RNAV GPS IAP under IMC are cancelled by decreases due to using the RVFP under VMC.

As shown in Table 9 (page 32), the INM does not account for all of the benefits of the higher and smoother continuous descent vertical paths that the RNAV Visual procedure provides (also see Section II.A, beginning on page 41, especially Figure 20 and Table 18). Succinctly, INM calculations for Cases #3 and #4 may overstate predicted noise increases.

The table includes all ten communities having at least one population centroid that would experience a DNL change of 0.1 dB or greater (after rounding). Communities for which every population centroid would experience a calculated DNL change (increase or decrease) of less than 0.05 dB are not included.

communities would have equal maximum decreases and increases. No community would experience a greater maximum DNL increase than decrease.

Table 16 also includes projected changes in DNL values at 306 locations in the Blue Hills Reservation — a public recreation area of over 7,000 acres that includes portions of Milton, Quincy, Braintree, Canton, Randolph, and Dedham. These locations are not census block centroids; they are designated as Section 4(f) Sites[24] in the BLANS 2015 Baseline. Of these, 295 are designated as "State Reservation" and 11 are designated as "Local Resources – Open Space". Separately and cumulatively both proposed actions would result in a greater range of DNL decreases than increases in the Blue Hills Reservation.

Detectability of Noise Changes — DNL is a temporal average of the noise exposure to aircraft at a fixed location on the ground. In general, it is not valid to make categorical statements about individual events based on an average derived from those events. However, the DNL averages for the No-Actions Alternative and the FAA's and JetBlue's Proposed Actions all involve the same aircraft (number and model) flying almost the same courses, at almost the same altitudes. This enables some qualified statements to be made about individual noise events.

Various values are cited for the smallest change in loudness that humans can detect on a single-event basis. The most commonly cited value[30] is 3 dB. The largest DNL increase (at the most adversely affected locations) is 0.3 dB — i.e., 10% of the commonly used 3 dB minimum level of a detectable change, on a decibel basis. Based solely on the Proposed Action's impacts during IMC, the largest DNL increase is 0.1 dB. It is likely that most, if not all, of the noise changes attributable to the Proposed Actions, would not be detected by a human listener on the ground.

II. Purpose and Need

A. Describe the purpose and need for the proposed project. If detailed background information is available, summarize here and provide a copy as an attachment to this review.

The proposed project addresses several needs:

- Increase safety of aircraft arriving on Runway 4L
- Reduce arrival delays during IMC
- Reduce number of aircraft arrivals after 10 p.m.
- Conform to national policy to implement NextGen RNAV procedures.

Increase Safety — Logan Runway 4L does not have an instrument approach procedure. It is accepted throughout the aviation industry that providing both lateral and vertical guidance to a runway reduces the risk of an approach and landing accident. For example, FAA Order 8260.55[31] states:

> "Flight operations quality assurance (FOQA) and Aviation Safety Action Program (ASAP) reports indicate flight crews sometimes descend at excessive rates on approach, resulting in unstabilized approaches (Table 17). Many of these reports come from flight crews conducting visual approaches to runways not served by vertically guided approach procedures."

The Flight Safety Foundation (FSF)[32] has studied aircraft accidents extensively, and has issued reports that are considered authoritative. The FSF has a permanent task force devoted to Approach and Landing Accident Reduction (ALAR).[33] The task force conducts studies, holds training sessions and provides training materials.[34] A major objective of the ALAR task force is to foster the establishment of instrument approach procedures with lateral and vertical guidance on all runways having air carrier service.

Table 17 Stabilized Approach Criteria (Flight Safety Foundation)

Flights must be stabilized by 1,000 feet above airport elevation in IMC and 500 feet above airport elevation in VMC.

- The aircraft is on the correct flight path;
- Only small changes in heading/pitch are necessary to maintain the correct flight path;
- The airspeed is not more than VREF + 20 knots indicated speed and not less than VREF;
- The aircraft is in the correct landing configuration;
- Sink rate is no greater than 1000 feet/minute; if an approach requires a sink rate greater than 1000 feet/minute a special briefing should be conducted;
- Power setting is appropriate for the aircraft configuration and is not below the minimum power for the approach as defined by the operating manual;
- All briefings and checklists have been conducted;

An approach that becomes unstabilized below 1,000 feet above airport elevation in IMC or 500 feet above airport elevation in VMC requires an immediate go-around.

In a seminal study[35,36], the FSF analyzed 287 fatal Approach and Landing Accidents (ALAs) worldwide involving jet and turboprop aircraft that occurred between 1980 and 1996. The FSF found that "nonprecision approaches [which have only lateral guidance] are five times more hazardous than precision approaches [which have vertical as well as lateral guidance]". The FSF study did not address runways that do not have any landing guidance, which are not common.

Approximately 10 years later, the FSF repeated the survey, with similar findings.[37] Using data from the period 1995-2011, the FSF found that approximately 56 percent of commercial jet airplane accidents occur during the approach and landing phases of flight (Figure 17[38]), although the time involved (while traveling from the outer marker to touchdown) is 4% of a typical flight. These accidents account for 44 percent of all air carrier fatalities worldwide.

A study sponsored by the FAA determined that, based on analysis of Controlled Flight Into Terrain (CFIT) accidents in the U.S. involving air carriers, the accident rate for non-precision approaches is nine times higher than the accident rate for precision approaches.[39,40] (Like the FSF study, the FAA study did not address runways that do not have any landing guidance.) The FAA study supported the rationale for implementing the [40] The discrepancy between the FSF and FAA analysis of approach accident rates is partly due to use of different geographical regions and time frames, but is likely also due to the lower overall U.S. accident rate, which accentuates the role of ALAs.

Wide Area Augmentation System (WAAS) to the GPS. WAAS is necessary for LPV approaches, the RNAV (GPS) approach procedure that is comparable to ILS Category I.

A separate U.S. Government-industry study[41] recommended that the U.S. "Implement precision approach capability (glideslope guidance) for all runways without established precision approach procedures (e.g., ILS, DGPS, etc.)". Study participants included FAA, NASA, Boeing, Airbus, Air Line Pilots Association (ALPA) and Airlines for America (then known as Air Transport Association [ATA]).

Another example of the recognition of the safety benefits of approach guidance is ICAO Resolution A37-11, which recommends that all member states [countries] implement Performance Based Navigation (PBN) approach procedures with vertical guidance for all instrument runway ends.[42] The ICAO recommendation is stronger than those of the FAA and FSF, as it explicitly recommends implementing PBN approaches and includes those runways with an ILS already installed. This would virtually ensure that approach guidance is available even when the ILS is out of service.

To address the safety-oriented recommendation of many aviation organizations that lateral and vertical approach guidance should be available "almost always" to passenger air carriers, the vast majority runways in the U.S. that have air carrier arrivals currently have two systems that provide lateral/vertical approach guidance. For example, Table 3 on page 14 shows that, at Part 139 airports (generally, those with commercial air carrier service), 96.2% (1,327/1,380) of RNAV (GPS) LPV procedure types have been implemented on runways that have an ILS installed as well. The remaining 3.8% of RNAV (GPS) LPV procedure types have been installed on Part 139 airport runways that do not have an ILS. As mentioned in Section I.C (page 4), often those runways have real estate limitations that preclude installation of an ILS.

Figure 18 depicts the average annual number of jet aircraft arrivals, by runway end, at Logan during 2012-2014. Considering only jets and not including propeller aircraft, is done for convenience, as the data are published monthly by Massport.[43] However, it does not account for approximately half the landings on Runway 4L. For jets and propeller aircraft combined, Runway 4L receives approximately 10% of arrivals to Logan.

Logan has five runways that are long and wide enough to be used for jet arrivals. Two of the ten possible arrival runway ends (9 and 14) cannot be used for arrivals of any aircraft due to obstructions (buildings) "in front of" each end. A third runway end (22R) is restricted to propeller aircraft arrivals due to noise limitations. (It is occasionally used to land jets when safety considerations are involved.) The remaining seven runway ends are regularly used for jet arrivals. Of these, only Runway 4L lacks any form of an Instrument Approach Procedure (IAP). 18,000 aircraft arrivals (Table 1, page 11) and over 500,000 passenger arrivals — is one of the busiest arrival runways at a commercial U.S. airport without an IAP.

As contextual information, it's noted that — due to the highly variable nature of local winds — Logan Airport makes more extensive use of multiple runway configurations (including more frequently changing configurations) than most major U.S. airports.

An approach procedure with vertical guidance enhances safety on the ground as well as for aircraft crew and passengers. Figure 19, prepared by the FSF, depicts locations where aircraft struck the ground when a Controlled Flight Into Terrain (CFIT) accident occurred during approach/landing. In most instances, the aircraft was aligned laterally with the runway but descended prematurely, usually within 10 miles of the runway.

Where a runway lacks a publically-available approach procedure having vertical guidance, or where the public procedure is generally unavailable during VMC, individual airlines have developed special, non-public RNAV Visual approach procedures. In accordance with FAA Order 8260.55[31], JetBlue Airlines proposed an RNAV Visual procedure for Logan Runway 4L. In coordination with the FAA, that procedure was tested during the period March 1 to August 31, 2014.

RNAV Visual Flight Procedures (RVFPs) employ the same guidance as an RNAV (GPS) IAP; however operations are only permitted in VMC. Because the same guidance system was used, results from the JetBlue test can be used to predict flight characteristics for the proposed RNAV (GPS) instrument procedure.

Comparing the two sides of Figure 20 reveals that, for aircraft further than approximately 2.5 nautical miles from the runway, RVFP guidance yielded:

- Higher average altitudes
- Reduction in the dispersion of the vertical path (by more than one-half).

Table 18 quantifies these statements using comparable data sets for JetBlue flights during March-April 2013 (using visual guidance) March-April 2014 (using RVFP guidance). Subsequently, a second data set with RVFP guidance (July-August 2014) was examined to confirm the positive findings for the earlier set.

Table 18 Comparison of Vertical Flight Paths for Visual and RNAV Guidance

Guidance Method	Data Collection Period	Mean Altitude at 6 NM Distance	Altitude Dispersion (95%) at 6 NM	Mean Descent Angle	Deviations from Straight Line
Visual	Mar-Apr 2013	2,045 feet	±671 feet	3.2 deg	3%
RVFP	Mar-Apr 2014	2,143 feet	±313 feet	3.3 deg	1%
RVFP	Jul-Aug 2014	2,157 feet	±332 feet	3.3 deg	1%

Standard statistical linear regression analysis was employed for this analysis. Each data set was fit to a straight line. Then the guidance methods were characterized by: (a) the line parameters, and (b) the deviations of the measurements from that line. A location 6 nautical miles from Runway 4L was selected to illustrate differences between the guidance methods. At that point, which is over the northern part of the Town of Milton, a straight-in final approach course begins to form (Figure 5, page 9). As is often done, altitude deviations were assumed to follow a Gaussian distribution[44].

In Table 18: (a) the mean altitude at 6 nautical miles is the altitude of the regression line, (b) the dispersion is twice the sample standard deviation of the measured altitudes from regression line, and (c) the mean descent angle is the slope of the regression line. Altitudes that differ from the mean altitude by up to twice the standard deviation are stated as being within 95% of the mean (47.5% on either side), based on the assumed Gaussian distribution.[45] Thus aircraft are stated as being above the mean altitude minus the dispersion with 97.5% probability.

For aircraft 6 nautical miles from Runway 4L:

- The mean altitude for the March-April 2014 flights using RVFP guidance was 98 feet higher than the mean altitude for the March-April 2013 flights using visual guidance (2,143 minus 2,045);
- For the March-April 2013 flights using visual guidance, 97.5% of the flights would be higher than 1,374 feet (2,045 minus 671);

[44] The Gaussian (or Normal) statistical distribution is popularly known as the "bell curve". It is often used to characterize a large set of independently collected samples that can take on a continuum of values.
[45] The same methodology is used for specifying RNAV deviations from a desired track.

DRAFT

- For the March-April 2014 flights using the RVFP, 97.5% of the flights would be higher than 1,830 feet (2,143 minus 313).

Of the 98 feet higher mean altitude for RVFP guidance, approximately 60 feet can be accounted for by the larger 3.1 degree RVFP glide path angle versus the 3.0 degree glide path angle for visual guidance using the PAPI on the airport.

Overall, for these data, at 6 nautical miles from the runway, 97.5% of the aircraft would be 456 feet (1,830 minus 1,374) or 21.8% higher with instrument guidance. Increasing the altitude of aircraft that are well below the designed glide path results in decreased fuel consumption (see Section II.B.2, starting on page 62) and decreased noise (see Section I.D.7, starting on page 26). Perhaps less obvious is that decreasing the altitude of aircraft that are well above the designed glide path increases safety, as aircraft above the glide path must descend at a faster rate than otherwise in order to reach the runway.

To quantify the smoothness of approaches flown, the coefficient of determination (often termed R-squared, or R^2) was found for the three data sets. R^2 values lie between 0 and 1; values close to 1 indicate the data are well approximated by the straight-line model. For these data sets, all R^2 values were greater than 0.95. To exhibit differences in the degree of closeness to a straight line: (a) R^2 values were subtracted from unity (thus 0 would correspond to a perfect linearity), and (b) the square-root of the result was taken (to eliminate the over-emphasis on differences that squaring causes).

Results of these calculations are shown in the last column of Table 18, under the heading Deviations from Straight Line. Flights with RNAV vertical guidance had smaller deviations (approximately one-third those for visual guidance) from a straight-line path. A straighter flight path indicates that less noise and emissions were created, because the power was reduced as the aircraft is more smoothly descending by utilizing gravity more effectively. As mentioned in Section I.D.7 (starting on page 26), the INM in effect assumes ILS vertical guidance for all approaches and thus does not capture the noise reduction achieved by replacing visual guidance with instrument guidance.

Reduce Delays — When Boston Logan Airport is configured for a Northeast flow and operationally usable Visual Meteorological Conditions (VMC) prevail (cloud ceiling at 3,000 to 4,000 feet or greater and visibility at least 5 statute miles), the arrival capacity of Runways 4L and 4R combined is 61 aircraft per hour — 32 per hour for Runway 4R and 29 per hour for Runway 4L. However, when either of these meteorological thresholds is not met, instrument conditions prevail. The arrival capacity of Runways 4L and 4R combined is then approximately 32 aircraft per hour, because Runway 4L cannot be used except for circling approaches by small aircraft.[46] Arrival delays then occur.

The need for approach guidance on Logan Runway 4L to reduce arrival delays has been a concern for decades. For example, it was cited in a joint NASA-FAA funded report published in 1998 — see Figure 21.[47] Many aspects of Logan's operations have changed since this report was released. However, the conclusion stated in the figure remains true today: Poor weather significantly reduces arrival capacity.

[46] During IMC, a few maneuverable, propeller-driven aircraft approaching from the northwest follow the ILS guidance for Runway 15R. When below the cloud ceiling, they execute a circling approach to Runway 4L.

DRAFT

If an IAP were available for Runway 4L, some (well less than half) of the VMC capacity could be recovered. The two runways are too closely spaced to allow VMC-like operations under IMC, so arrivals must be staggered. This requires increased longitudinal separation between aircraft approaching the same runway. Figure 22 illustrates the current traffic flow to Runways 4L and 4R under VMC and IMC as well as the projected flow under IMC with the proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP in place. The proposed procedure is projected to restore approximately 14% of the VMC capacity that is now lost during IMC. (The depiction of 33% more IMC arrivals in Figure 22 is not quantitatively accurate, as controllers do not expect to pair every arrival to Runway 4R with an arrival to Runway 4L.)

The consequence of the current lack of arrival capacity during IMC is that delays build up during prolonged periods of low ceilings/visibility. Ultimately, these delays extend the time when the airport is operating near capacity — e.g., from approximately 8 p.m. (20:00 in 24-hour time notation) under VMC to between 10 p.m. and 1 a.m. under IMC (22:00 to 01:00). By restoring some of the arrival capacity that is now lost during IMC, the proposed procedure will reduce delays during IMC — enabling passengers to arrive earlier and flight operations to be reduced during the late evening/early morning.

A Ground Delay Program (GDP) is often instituted when the demand for arrival "slots" exceeds the airport's (Logan's) arrival capacity. During a GDP, departing aircraft, generally from airports within a specified distance (e.g., 1,200 nautical miles or nation-wide), are held on the ground until cleared for departure at a rate consistent with Logan's available capacity. Typically, GDPs have durations of several hours.

In addition to GDPs, Ground Stops (GSs) are instituted to enable airports to adjust to an unexpected situation and implement a longer-term solution. During a GS, the affected airport's (Logan's) acceptance rate is reduced significantly. GSs generally last approximately an hour, and are often followed by a GDP.

GDPs and GSs are key indicators of the frequency and extent of weather-induced delays. They set an approximate lower bound on the usage of Runway 4L during IMC. During 2013, Boston Logan had: (a) 44 GSs on 34 days, averaging 1 hour, 9 minutes; and (b) 37 days with GDPs (Figure 23) with total duration of 249 hours and average duration of 6.7 hours. Twenty GDPs exceeded 6 hours, and eleven exceeded 8 hours.[48]

A relatively small increase in IMC arrival capacity (considerably less than that of an additional runway) would result in a significant reduction in delays when Boston Logan is configured for a northeast flow. For example, a National GDP (impacting all ARTCCs) was instituted on June 27, 2014, at approximately noon (12:00 in 24-hour time notation), and remained in force until midnight (24:00). The blue line in Figure 24 shows the arrivals to Runway 4R while the GDP was in place. There were significant delays that day, evidenced by 47 arrivals occurring during the three hours between 10 p.m. (22:00) and 1 a.m. (01:00) the following day. The brown line in Figure 24 depicts the effect that an RNAV procedure could have had. By increasing the arrival rate during the afternoon and early evening, late night arrivals could have been prevented. (The total number of arrivals is the same for both curves.)

Although this is a hypothetical example and involves assumptions, the assumptions are reasonable. Most importantly, RNAV-capable aircraft would be available to take advantage of the additional landing slots available earlier in the day. The most frequent arrival aircraft on 4L (Cessna 402, Embraer E190 and Airbus A320) are all equipped for RNAV (GPS) approaches.

A quantitative estimate of the annual delay reduction the proposed RNAV (GPS) will provide, and the associated cost reductions, is provided in Section II.B.1 beginning on page 56.

Reduce number of arrivals after 10 p.m. — Figure 25 shows the percentage of arrivals on Runway 4R by hour-of-day during 2013. The VMC (blue) distribution is representative of the unconstrained demand for arrival slots. During VMC, there is sufficient capacity to meet the demand, allowing the arrival traffic level to build steadily to a peak between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m., and then steadily decline.

However, the pattern is very different during IMC. During the morning, as traffic builds, the airport is able to keep up with growing demand. Then, in the early afternoon, demand begins to exceed capacity and delays start to occur. As the demand is increased further, delays become longer. During days that have several hours of IMC, flight delays extend the time when the airport is capacity constrained — typically, from 8 p.m. during VMC to between 10 p.m. and 1 a.m. during IMC.

Figure 26 presents an example of the arrival traffic to Runway 4R after 10:00 p.m. on a Sunday when the cloud ceiling is low. There are nine aircraft in queue over southeastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Two other aircraft are seeking to join the queue.

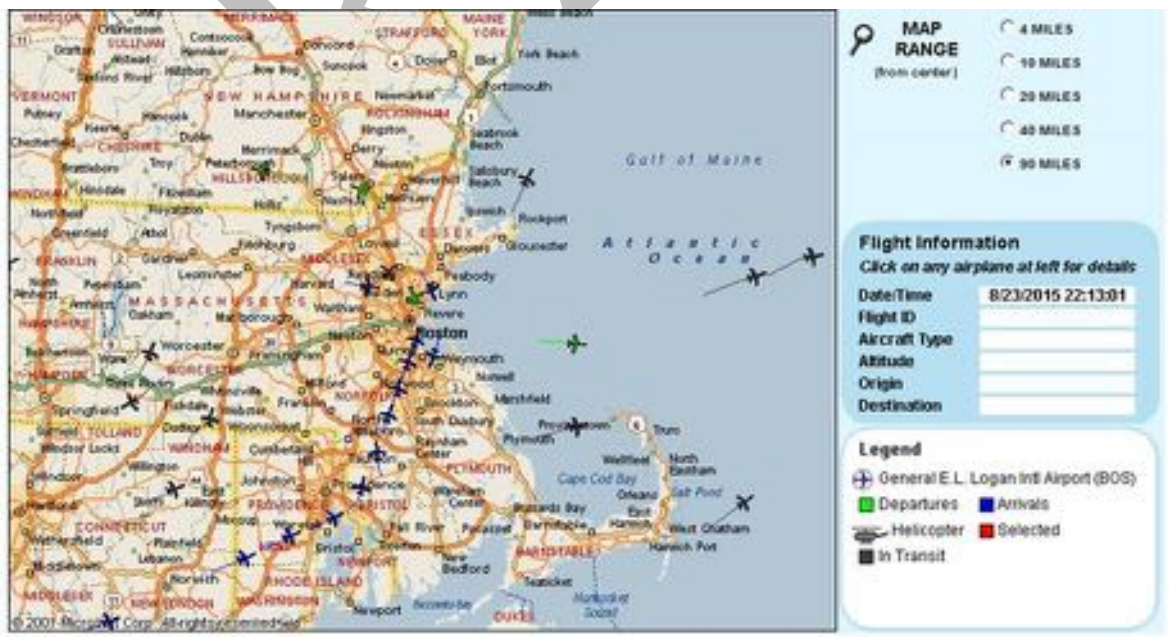

Figure 26 Runway 4R IMC Arrival Queue: Sun. Aug. 23, 2015, 10:13 p.m. ET

Over a typical year, a few days per month have multiple hours of IMC when Runway 4R is in use and Runway 4L is unavailable. For example, in 2013, there were 45 days with instrument conditions for at least 3 hours, and 22 days with instrument conditions for at least 6 hours. Partly as a consequence of such situations, Boston Logan Airport has consistently had a higher than average percentage of delayed and diverted arrivals in comparison to other Core 30 airports.

The Integrated Noise Model (INM) "counts" aircraft operations between 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. as ten daytime operations. This reflects the presumption that, as the ambient noise of normal activity decreases during the time when most people sleep, noise from aircraft is more annoying. Having Runway 4L available for arrivals during "INM day" under IMC will allow some aircraft that are currently delayed to past 10 p.m. instead to land before 10 p.m. It's estimated that 255 arrivals per year would be shifted from "INM night" to "INM day".

Conformance with National Policy — Over a decade ago, Congress recognized the magnitude of the challenge posed by modernizing the nation's air traffic system, and addressed it in Vision 100 - Century of Aviation Reauthorization Act (Public Law 108-176, December 2003). Vision 100 established the Joint Planning and Development Office (JPDO), composed of representatives from the Departments of Transportation (DOT), Defense (DOD), Commerce (DOC) and Homeland Security (DHS) together with the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). Ultimately, the modernized system became known as the Next Generation Air Transportation System (NextGen). When the vision was sufficiently formulated and the JPDO's work was completed, the responsibility for implementing NextGen was assigned to the FAA, the agency which operates the National Airspace System (NAS).

A major element of NextGen is implementation of satellite-based navigation and surveillance. The FAA has responded by developing and implementing Performance-Based Navigation (PBN) operations, including RNAV approaches and departures at many airports. The process is on-going, and additional RNAV (GPS) approach and departure procedures are needed. Boston Logan Runway 4L is an example of a runway that would benefit from having RNAV (GPS) approach procedures.

Congress emphasized the need for additional PBN operations in the FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012 (Public Law 112–95). Section 213 (Acceleration of NextGen Technologies, Attachment 4) of the Act directs the FAA to implement RNAV and RNP procedures "to maximize the fuel efficiency and airspace capacity of NextGen commercial operations at each of the 35 operational evolution partnership airports identified by the Administration". Boston Logan is one such airport. Implementation of an RNAV (GPS) approach procedure on Runway 4L is consistent with the intent of the FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012.

DRAFT

Section 213 provides for two new types of Categorical Exclusions (CATEXs) in the environmental review process. Subsequently, the FAA issued information on each new type of CATEX.[49,50]

In early 2014, the House of Representatives Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, Subcommittee on Aviation, requested that the FAA develop a plan to implement a number of high-priority NextGen capabilities. The FAA, in collaboration with the NextGen Advisory Committee (NAC), determined what the FAA is able to accomplish over the next one to three years and what industry commitments are necessary for those activities to be successful. FAA committed to specific site implementation plans in order to take full advantage of NextGen benefits. These agreements were documented in the NextGen Priorities Joint Implementation Plan (Attachment 5) and are available on the FAA's website.[51]

One focus of the plan is Multiple Runway Operations (MRO) — enabling more frequent simultaneous use of runways for which access is currently restricted for various reasons, including wake turbulence mitigation, during IMC. New methods for wake mitigation have been developed over the past decade, and the plan seeks to implement those methods. Figure 27 depicts the current schedule (partial) for MRO projects at major airports, including the RNAV (GPS) IAP at Logan Runway 4L. [52]

B. What operational/economic/environmental benefits will result if this project is implemented?

Increased Safety — While the accident rate for U.S. commercial aviation is extremely low, for approach/landing operations it is nine times lower when a vertical guidance system is used (Section II.A, beginning on page 41). Thus, many large U.S. airports have, during the past few years, installed RNAV (GPS) IAPs on runways used for arrivals that, for physical or economic reasons, did not have an ILS installed. Logan Runway 4L is similar to many situations where an RNAV (GPS) has been implemented.[53]

Reduced Noise and Emissions — Aircraft will fly at higher altitudes (due to both following a steeper glide path angle and having less vertical dispersion) and fly smoother continuous descent trajectories requiring lower power settings. As a result, noise and emissions will be reduced. The INM does not capture some of these benefits.

Delay Reduction during IMC — Because it currently does not have an instrument approach procedure, Runway 4L cannot be used during periods of low ceilings or visibilities. While low ceilings/visibilities occur only approximately 15% of the time, Logan is configured for a Northeast flow approximately 60% of time when these conditions occur. Such conditions account for a large fraction of the flight delays at Boston Logan.

By adding approach guidance capability during IMC, delays will be decreased. This will result in passenger time saved, improved integrity of airline flight schedules, fewer missed connections, jet fuel conserved, reduced emissions and reduced noise between 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. — see Sections II.A (page 41) and II.B.1 (page 56).

Shortened Periods of Peak Traffic Under IMC — By enabling Runway 4L to be utilized during IMC, an RNAV (GPS) IAP will reduce the duration of busy traffic periods under IMC, lessening the impact of flight operations on neighboring communities.

Little Cost to the Public — A RNAV (GPS) procedure can be designed and implemented at little if any cost to the public or Boston Logan/Massport, since no ground infrastructure or runway improvements are required.

1. If a delay reduction is anticipated, can the reduction be quantified?

☒ Yes ☐ No ☐ N/A

Background on Logan Delays — Delay reduction is anticipated and can be quantified. Historical Logan delay statistics were obtained for the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) Bureau of Transportation Statistics (BTS), which tracks airport arrival and departure delays for major domestic passenger carriers at 29 large airports

[53] The safety benefit of vertically guided approaches are so significant that many general aviation airports that could not qualify for an ILS installation (due to its cost) have implemented RNAV (GPS) IAPs. Examples in Eastern/Central Massachusetts include: Beverly Municipal Airport, Norwood Memorial Airport, Fitchburg Municipal Airport, Mansfield Municipal Airport and Minute Man Air Field (Stow).

(Table 19[54]). BTS defines delays as a departure or arrival that occurs 15 minutes or more past the scheduled time.

*Twelve-month period ending April 30, 2015

For the twelve-month period ending April 30, 2015, Logan's on-time departure percentage ranked 11th among the largest airports (better than most), and its on-time arrival percentage ranked 23rd (worse than most). The rate of flight cancellations was also higher than that of most of the largest airports. Logan has historically had higher than average arrival delays.

While fluctuations have occurred, the percentages and average times of arrival delays have been relatively stable over five-years. Approximately 22% of (25 thousand) domestic major passenger carrier arrivals at Boston Logan are delayed annually. The average arrival delay is approximately 57 minutes. The total annual arrival delay time thus is approximately 25 thousand hours.

A significant fraction of Logan's arrival delays occur during IMC when the airport is configured for a northeast flow. A major factor in these delays is lack of arrival runway capacity, as Runway 4L can only be used sparingly during IMC (e.g., using circling approaches) due to the lack of an approach guidance system.

Analysis Methodology — An analysis was conducted that focused on delays that occur during prolonged periods of IMC when the airport was configured for a northeast flow. The analysis had four elements:

1) Using 2013 traffic and meteorological data, the days having prolonged periods of IMC when the airport was configured for a northeast flow were found;
2) A mathematical model was used to estimate the delay reduction that an Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP could provide on one such day;
3) Results for the data analysis and mathematical model were combined to estimate delay reduction benefits that a Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP would provide on an annual basis. A rough estimate of the reduction of arrival cancellations is also made.

4) The costs savings associated with delay reduction was estimated.

Prolonged IMC Characterization — Most of the information used for Step 1 is presented in Section II.A, starting on page 41. During 2013, Logan was in a northeast flow during IMC for approximately 1,332 hours. Of those, approximately 319 hours had more than 20 arrivals per hour on Runway 4R — i.e., Runway 4R was under capacity pressure and Runway 4L was unavailable. During 294 of these 319 hours, a GDP (Figure 23) or GS was in effect. Average duration of a GDP was 6.7 hours. On 14 days during 2013, Runway 4R was under IMC arrival pressure for at least 8 hours.

Single Day Delay Reduction — Figure 28 depicts the mathematical model used in step 2 of the analysis.[55] Scheduled arrivals — i.e., the demand for arrival slots — are modeled based on the VMC arrival statistics shown in Figure 25. Beginning at 6:00 a.m., the rate of scheduled arrivals increases at essentially a constant rate until the 4:00 to 5:00 p.m. hour. The scheduled arrival rate then decreases at essentially a constant (faster) rate until the midnight to 1:00 a.m. hour. The total number of arrivals modeled for the 19-hour period (6:00 a.m. to 1:00 a.m.) is 523, which is consistent with the number of scheduled arrivals at Logan on a weekday.

The increase in IMC arrival capacity that an IAP on Runway 4L will provide must be estimated, as there is no experience on which to make a definitive statement. (Material in Section I.D, "Expected Usage of Proposed Action under IMC" is relevant here.) Controllers at the Boston Consolidated TRACON estimated that four additional [55] A deterministic delay model was used to represent the average demand (aircraft arrival rate) and average supply (capacity of a runway). This model under-estimates delays, but provides a reasonable lower bound — i.e., actual delays will be at least as large as the model predicts.

arrivals per hour could be achieved under IMC using the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP. This figure is consistent with the IMC arrival rate gained at San Francisco International Airport (SFO) for SFO's closely-spaced parallel Runways 28L and 28R.

To understand the relationship between increases in IMC capacity and reduction in delays, three Airport Arrival Rates (AARs) were considered:

- 32 arrivals per hour, the current Runway 4R IMC AAR
- 36 (32+4) arrivals per hour, the expected IMC AAR for Runways 4R and 4L combined shortly after introduction of the proposed RNAV instrument procedure
- 61 (32+29) arrivals per hour, the current VMC AAR for Runways 4R and 4L combined.

Referring to Figure 28, the VMC AAR for Runways 4R and 4L combined exceeds demand throughout the day and arrival delays do not occur. However, when only Runway 4R is available under IMC, demand exceeds the 32 per hour AAR for the 8-hour period from noon to 8:00 p.m. Consequently, arrival delays occur.

Figure 29 depicts the predicted delays corresponding to the arrival rate and AARs shown in Figure 28. When only Runway 4R is available in IMC, delays begin as soon as demand exceeds the 32 per hour AAR — at noon for this model. This is consistent with data for the initiation of GDP and GS programs, which often begin in late morning. The model predicts that without use of Runway 4L, the delays will not be worked out until 1:00 a.m. of the following day. This is consistent with the IMC arrival statistics shown in Figure 25, which depicts an elevated arrival rate during the midnight to 1:00 a.m. hour. (The model did not include flight cancellations, which generally occur during periods of significant delays.)

Figure 29 also depicts the delays predicted when the RNAV (GPS) IAP is implemented and Runway 4L is available. It is evident that an IMC AAR increase of only four arrivals per hour can have a significant delay reduction benefit, as it is estimated to (Table 20):

a) Defer the onset of delays by 1 hour, 10 minutes, 50 seconds
b) Return airport arrivals to "not delayed" status earlier by 1 hour, 38 minutes, 33 seconds
c) Reduce the duration of "delay status" by 2 hours, 49 minutes, 23 seconds (24.1%)
d) Reduce the average aircraft delay by 48 minutes, 27 seconds (44.3%)
e) Reduce the maximum aircraft delay by 1 hour, 7 minutes, 30 seconds (39.1%)
f) Reduce the number of aircraft scheduled to arrive before 10 p.m. that actually arrive on or after 10 p.m. by 39 (52.0%).
g) Eliminate a total of 288.3 hours of delays (44.3%)

*Only delays of 15 min or greater are included

Annual Delay Reduction — For Step 3, the annual amount of aircraft delay reduction is estimated to be 3,500 hours (which would eliminate approximately 14% of the annual arrival delays at Logan). This estimate for the total delay reduction is based on (a) a 48.4 minute average per aircraft delay reduction, as shown in Table 20; (b) a total of 4,938 aircraft experiencing a delay reduction; and (c) a conservative reduction of their product to take account of unanticipated circumstances. Based on ASDE-X data for 2013 (Section I.D), delay reductions would accrue to the 2,469 aircraft shifted from Runway 4R to 4L, and to all aircraft that would arrive on Runway 4R earlier as a result of other aircraft being shifted to Runway 4L (conservatively estimated to be one additional aircraft).

As a validity check, a total delay reduction of 3,500 hours is consistent with 288 hours of delay reduction for one IMC day and 12 days of prolonged IMC. (In 2013, there were 14 days that Logan had 8 hours or more of IMC). This analysis does not quantify the delay reduction that would be achieved during shorter periods of IMC, so it understates the amount of delay reduction likely to be achieved.

DRAFT

As a second check on the delay predictions, the mathematical model for delays used herein (e.g., Figure 28) predicts that, during one IMC day, 178 arrivals would be shifted to Runway 4L (half of the 357 aircraft predicted to be delayed, as shown in Table 20). For 12 IMC days, the model thus predicts that a total of 2,136 aircraft would be shifted from Runway 4R to Runway 4L during IMC. This inconsistency with the ASDE-X data analysis (which predicts 2,469 aircraft shifted to Runway 4L during IMC) is comparable to yearly traffic and weather fluctuations and is ignored in the following analysis.

The largest inconsistency between the mathematical model and detailed analysis of 2013 ASDE-X data lies in the number of flights scheduled to arrive before 10 p.m. which would actually arrive at or after 10 p.m. (In the INM, flights arriving at or after 10 p.m. "count" as ten flights.) The mathematical model predicts that, for one IMC day, 39 fewer flights would be delayed past 10 p.m. For 12 IMC days in a year, this results in an estimated 468 fewer arrivals after 10 p.m. However, analysis of 2013 Logan arrivals indicates that there would have been 255 fewer arrivals at/after 10 p.m. if the RNAV (GPS) IAP were available. Given the reasonably close agreement between the model and data shown earlier, it is likely the largest source of this difference is that the model does not account for flight cancellations. Thus, implementation of the RNAV (GPS) IAP would likely result in 100 to 200 fewer cancelled arrivals to Logan annually. No delay reduction or cost savings benefit is taken for reduced cancellations.

Cost Savings — Airlines for America recommends a value of $81.18 per minute for airlines direct operating cost (DOC)[56] during delays. This value was used for jets; 25% of that number was used for smaller aircraft. Thus (Table 21), eliminating 3,500 hours of delays would result in airlines saving approximately $13 million in DOCs annually.

Table 21 Estimated Annual Airline DOC Savings Due to Delay Reduction

Runway & AC Type	# Aircraft	Hours Saved	Dollar Savings
Rwy 4L, Small	1,481	1,049.7	$ 1,278,220
Rwy 4L, Large Jet	988	700.3	$ 3,411,021
Rwy 4R, Large Jet	2,469	1,750.0	$ 8,523,900
Total	4,938	3,500	$ 13,213,141

The average number of passengers per flight to/from Logan is 82.[57] (This average includes cargo flights and other flights without passengers, and thus is "on the low side".) This figure was used for the 2,450 hours of large jet aircraft delays reduced in Table 21. Approximately 200,900 hours per year of passenger time could be saved by implementing an RNAV instrument approach to Runway 4L.

Using U.S. DOT guidelines for estimating the valuation of passenger travel time,[58] a total of approximately $8.5 million would be saved (Table 22). This figure is also considered to be "on the low side" because it is based on the nationwide cost of living in 2009 dollars (i.e., during the economic recession). It does not account for the recovery of the economy during the past six years and the relatively high cost of living in the Boston area.

Table 22 Estimated Annual Value of Passenger Time Saved

Travel Purpose	Fraction of Passengers	Passenger Hours	Hourly Rate	Annual Value of Time Saved
Business	40.4%	81,164	$ 57.20	$ 4,642,581
Personal	59.6%	119,736	$ 31.90	$ 3,819,578
Totals	100.0%	200,900	—	$ 8,462,159

Overall, the cost savings provided by implementing a RNAV instrument approach on Runway 4L is conservatively estimated to be $21.7 million annually. In addition to the "low side" assumptions identified above, the estimate considers only direct cost to airlines and passenger time. Indirect costs or "ripple effects" such as subsequent delayed and cancelled flights (costs to airlines) or post-flight passenger visits to restaurants and entertainment venues that are foregone (revenue lost by Boston area businesses) were not taken into account.

2. Can reduced fuel costs/natural energy consumption be quantified?

☒ Yes ☐ No ☐ N/A

If not quantifiable, describe the approximate anticipated benefits in lay terms.

Implementing an RNAV (GPS) IAP for Runway 4L will reduce fuel consumption for two reasons:

- Reduced delays during IMC (Section II.B.1, page 56)
- More efficient continuous descent approaches.

Fuel savings estimates have been addressed in several studies.[59,60,61]

Reduced IMC Delays — Aircraft delays involve increased fuel/energy consumption, both on the airport surface (gate holds and waits on the tarmac) and in-flight (holding patterns). Ryerson[60] estimates that a Boeing 737 consumes 0.34 gallons per minute while delayed on the ground (airborne delays are not considered herein).

The B737 is employed as a surrogate for all jet aircraft whose delays would be reduced by a Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP — i.e., both those shifted to Runway 4L during IMC and those which "move up in line" for landing on Runway 4R. The B737 well represents aircraft of comparable size (e.g., A320 and A319). The B737 model over-states the fuel consumption of regional jets such as the E190 and E170, many of which would be shifted to Runway 4L. However, the B737 model under-states the fuel consumption of larger aircraft such as the B757, B767, B747 and A330, many of which would "move up in line" on Runway 4R. Also, this analysis neglects reductions in delays for piston-engine aircraft that would land on Runway 4L.

Using data from Table 21, the proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP would reduce an estimated 2,450 hours of jet aircraft annual delays. The resulting predicted savings in fuel consumption and CO_2 carbon emissions are detailed in Table 23.

Table 23 Annual Jet Fuel and CO_2 Emissions Savings by IMC Delay Reductions

Procedure	Delay Reduction (hours)	Delay Saving (Minutes)	Fuel Savings (gallons)	CO_2 Savings* (pounds)
RNAV GPS IAP	2,450	147,000	49,794	1,050,653

* One gallon of jet fuel, when burned, creates approximately 21.1 pounds of CO_2.

Continuous Descent Approaches during VMC — The second factor involves a smoother flight path during VMC for approaches flown with the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP rather than without vertical guidance. Without vertical guidance (the situation for Runway 4L today), a pilot guides the aircraft based on visual information and generally makes a series of adjustments to the power setting, control surfaces and descent angle which consume fuel (as well as increasing pilot workload) – see Figure 30[62]. With vertical guidance the pilot can couple the guidance signal to the autopilot and perform a monitoring role. Evidence of the smoother flight path associated with use of vertical guidance is presented in Table 18 (page 47).

There are two ways in which the RNAV (GPS) IAP may be used during VMC:

- Aircraft is cleared by ATC to use the IAP — It is estimated (Section I.D.7, beginning on page 26) that 435 annual arrivals (all jets) will utilize the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP beginning at AAALL. The time to fly the full length of the IAP is estimated to be 6 minutes
- Aircraft is cleared by ATC for a Visual approach and utilizes IAP on an advisory basis — It is estimated that 2,500 annual arrivals (2,000 jets) will utilize the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP after being aligned with the runway beginning at or near MTAPN. The average time to fly the final leg of the approach is estimated to be 2 minutes.

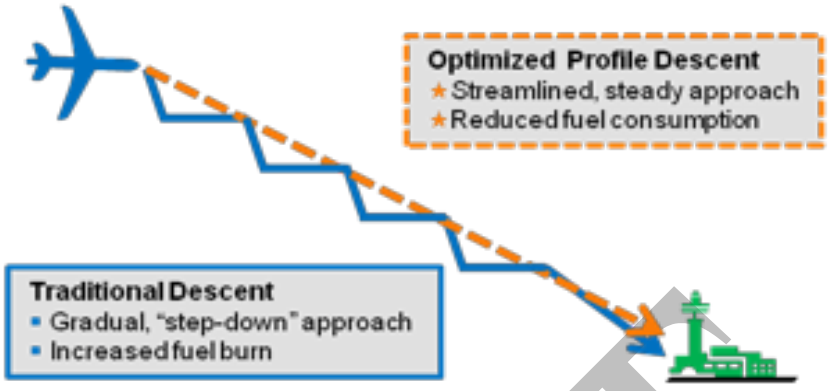

Figure 30 Comparison of "Step-Down" and Continuous Descent Approaches

Concerning the second item, when aircraft utilize the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP on an advisory basis, there are noise reductions and fuel savings/emissions reductions. However, due to limitations of the INM (Table 9, page 32), credit is not taken for the noise reduction. A fuel savings of 20% (relative to that for a stepped down approach) was found by Clarke[59]. Here, a savings of 10% is used, because there tend to be fewer "steps" at lower altitudes — see Figure 9 (page 16). The nominal fuel consumption rate during approach is taken as 5.9 pounds/ minute (0.87 gallons/minute), a representative figure for a B737. The predicted savings in fuel and CO_2 emissions are detailed in Table 24.

Table 24 Annual Jet Fuel/Emissions Savings for VMC Continuous Descent Approaches

Clearance	Number of Arrivals	Time on IAP (Minutes)	Fuel Savings (gallons)	CO_2 Savings (pounds)
RNAV GPS IAP	435	2,610	2,268	47,855
Visual	2,000	4,000	3,476	73,344
Both	2,435	6,610	5,744	121,199

Combined/Cumulative Effects — Upon combining the two operational benefits, the proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP estimated annual savings are 55,538 gallons of jet fuel and 1,171,851 pounds of CO_2. The RVFP proposed by JetBlue also provides fuel savings and emissions reductions. The cumulative impact of the two Proposed Actions is addressed in Section VIII (page 85).

C. Is the proposed project the result of a user or community request or regulatory mandate?

Community Request ☐ Yes ☒ No

Regulatory Mandate ☒ Yes ☐ No

FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012, Section 213 (Attachment 4).

DRAFT

If not, what necessitates this action?

In addition to the regulatory mandates cited immediately above, the Proposed Action is prompted by the need to realize several benefits:

a) The safety benefits provided by vertically guided approaches — in the U.S., accident rate is reduced by a factor of nine.

b) The environmental benefits provided by vertically guided approaches — reduced noise and emissions

c) Need to reduce delays and cancellations that occur at Boston Logan under IMC when Runway 4L is unavailable due to the lack of a vertically-guided approach

d) The fact that satellite navigation — the Global Positioning System (GPS) and the Wide Area Augmentation System (WAAS) — have made vertically guided approaches available at no equipment or land costs.

While the safety of vertically-guided approaches is well established (Section II.A, page 41), when ILS was the only available system that could provide this capability, installations were limited by the cost of the equipment and the cost/availability of the land required. Thus, while the need for vertically-guided capabilities grew in proportion to traffic levels, the ability to provide the capability was constricted. The results were delays during IMC that could have been mitigated by installation of additional ILSs.

The advent of GPS and WAAS satellite navigation has changed this situation. RNAV (GPS) approach procedures that are similar in capability to ILS procedures can now be implemented — with attendant increases in safety and reduction in delays — at very low cost and no land-taking. National policy recognizes the benefit of RNAV (GPS) IAPs.

RNAV (GPS) instrument approach procedures have been implemented at over 2,700 U.S. airports — major, regional and smaller — as well as in Europe and Asia. Notable in this context is that several major U.S. airports with secondary runways that did not qualify for an ILS due to infrequent occurrence of IMC have received RNAV (GPS) IAPs for their safety benefits. Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport (PHX) runway 25R and McCarran International Airport (LAS) runways 19R, 19L and 1R are examples.

III. Describe the Affected Environment

A. Provide a description of the existing land use in the vicinity of the proposed project.

Land use in the vicinity of the proposed project is a mixture of residential, commercial and open space. It is the same use as exists for arrivals regularly conducted to Runway 4L and Runway 4R today. Flight paths for the Proposed Action will not overfly new areas.

B. Will the proposed project introduce air traffic over noise sensitive areas not now affected?

☐ Yes ☒ No

DRAFT

The flight trajectories for the Proposed Action (FAA Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP) will be primarily be similar to those that are currently used on a regular basis. The number and types of aircraft will be similar to those which now fly those trajectories. Flight paths for the Proposed Action will not overfly new areas. To the extent there are changes in noise exposure, they will be generally beneficial.

Will they be affected to a ☐ Greater or ☒ Lesser extent?

Note: An area is noise sensitive if aircraft noise may interfere with the normal activities associated with the use of the land. See Order 1050.1F for full definition of noise sensitive areas.

Ground locations are expected to be affected to a lesser extent by the Proposed Action (FAA Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP) than they are currently by the No-Action Alternative. Referring to Table 8 (page 31), under VMC, an estimated 435 aircraft will utilize the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP in lieu of the Runway 4R ILS followed by a sidestep maneuver. Since both provide lateral and vertical guidance but aircraft will generally fly higher in altitude using the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP's 3.1 degree glide slope, noise exposure on the ground will be reduced. Also under VMC, an estimated 2,500 aircraft will use the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP for advisory guidance. It will enable use of continuous descent trajectories and a higher glide slope than the PAPI, also reducing noise on the ground. Under IMC, the Proposed Action will enable approximately 255 flights annually that now land after 10 p.m. (the onset of "night" defined by the INM) to land before 10 p.m. In calculations performed by the INM, this effectively eliminates 9 x 255 = 2,295 overflights annually.

The RVFP will have similar types of noise reduction during VMC. An estimated 2,825 aircraft would be cleared to use the procedure from HOCCY or FAMRR. Moreover, an estimated 5,000 would utilize the procedure as advisory guidance after being cleared for a Visual approach. In both cases, it will enable use of continuous descent trajectories and a higher glide slope than the PAPI, reducing noise on the ground.

C. Are wildlife refuge/management areas within the affected area of the proposed project?

☐ Yes ☒ No

Based on the Section 4(f) Sites listed in the BLANS 2015 Baseline, there are no wildlife refuge/management areas in the affected area.

If so, has there been any communication with the appropriate wildlife management regulatory (federal or state) agencies to determine if endangered or protected species inhabit the area?

☐ Yes ☒ No

DRAFT

1. At what altitude would aircraft overfly these habitats? N/A

2. During what times of the day would operations be more/less frequent? N/A

D. Are there cultural or scenic resources, of national, state, or local significance, such as national parks, outdoor amphitheaters, or stadiums in the affected area?

☒ Yes ☐ No

If so, during what time(s) of the day would operations occur that may impact these areas?

The Proposed Action (Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP) overflies the Blue Hills Reservation, a 6,000-acre Massachusetts state park. The same number of flights will occur as occur today. Annually, under instrument conditions, the proposed RNAV instrument procedure will shift the paths of approximately 2,469 arrivals to the west by less than a mile.

E. Has there been communication with air quality regulatory agencies to determine if the affected area is a non-attainment area (an area which exceeds the National Ambient Air Quality Standards for ozone, carbon monoxide, lead, particulate matter, sulfur dioxide, or nitrogen dioxide) or maintenance area (an area which was in non-attainment but subsequently upgraded to an attainment area) concerning air quality?

☐ Yes ☒ No

The same number of flights over the Blue Hills Reservation, a 6,000-acre Massachusetts state park, will occur as occur today. Annually, under instrument conditions, the proposed RNAV instrument procedure will shift the paths of approximately 2,469 arrivals to the west by less than a mile.

If yes, please explain:

F. Are there reservoirs or other public water supply systems in the affected area?

☒ Yes ☐ No

The Area of Potential Effects (APE) for the Proposed Action is a band extending ±0.3 nautical miles (1,823 feet) on either side of the procedure flight path. Aircraft qualified to perform the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP procedure must demonstrate the ability to remain within this band at least 95% of the time. Most exceed this standard by a wide margin.

The Massachusetts State Department of Geographical Information Systems (GIS) provided a map of the locations of facilities for public water supply systems in the region overflown. The APEs for both proposed RNAV approach procedures were overlaid on the Mass. GIS map (Attachment 13).

DRAFT

There are five "Community Groundwater Sources" in the APE. All have the subcategory "Community Groundwater Well", and all are within the Town of Stoughton. Aircraft following the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP will be at altitudes between 3,600 feet and 4,000 feet while overflying these wells.

Aircraft regularly overfly this area now, as the Proposed Action does not involve significant changes to flight routes.

IV. Community Involvement

Formal community involvement or public meetings/hearings may be required for the proposed project. Make a determination if the proposed project has the potential to become highly controversial. The effects of an action are considered highly controversial when reasonable disagreement exists over the project's risks of causing environmental harm. Opposition on environmental grounds by a Federal, State or local government agency or by a Tribe, or by a substantial number of the person affected by the action should be considered in determining whether reasonable disagreement regarding the effects of a proposed action exists (see FAA Order 1050.1F, Paragraph 11-5.b.(10)).

A. Have persons/officials who might have some need to know about the proposed project due to their location or by their function in the community been notified, consulted, or otherwise informed of this project?

☒ Yes ☐ No

1. Are local citizens and community leaders aware of the proposed project?

☒ Yes ☐ No

The FAA conducted a meeting with local, state and federal Government Officials on May 18, 2015 at the Massachusetts State Transportation Building (STB), The meeting purpose was to discuss two proposed Runway 4L RNAV approach procedures, and was held in response to requests from officials that the FAA conduct meaningful involvement prior to implementing the two procedures:

- FAA proposed RNAV Instrument Approach Procedure (IAP) to increase safety and reduce delays during Instrument Meteorological Conditions (IMC)
- JetBlue proposed RNAV Visual Flight Procedure (RVFP) to increase the safety of arrivals during Visual Meteorological Conditions (VMC).

Presentations were made to elected/appointed officials in person and the general public via a webinar link. Although presented together, the FAA's Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP and JetBlue's RVFP are separate projects, with different designs and are not dependent on each other for implementation.

See Attachment 6 for meeting notes and meeting participants. The presentation materials may be found at:

Attendees at the STB included representatives from the offices of a U.S. Senator; representatives from the offices of three Congresspersons; members of the State Legislature from Milton, Randolph/Canton, Hyde Park, Belmont and Plymouth; two City of Boston Councilors; representatives of the Boston Environmental Department; Administrator of the Town of Milton; Health Commissioner of Randolph; and numerous members of the Logan Airport Community Advisory Committee (CAC). The STB room, which seats approximately 100 people, was nearly full. Nine members of the general public logged onto the webinar.

The presentations were followed by a question-and-answer session.

At the meeting, the FAA provided an email address for interested parties to submit comments. The initial deadline for commenting was set at June 5; it was subsequently extended through June 30 at the request of several Government Officials. During that period, the FAA received and responded to questions from Government Officials and members of the Logan Airport CAC.

Subsequently, the FAA received responses from: a U.S. Congressmen; state and municipal office holders from East Boston, Randolph, Canton and Milton; members of the Logan Airport CAC; an Internet petition signed by 626 persons; and individual responses from 108 members (and families) of the public. All have been considered thoroughly.

Comments and FAA responses are attached:

Congressman Michael Capuano — Balanced

DRAFT

Cong. Capuano recognized the benefits of the proposed RNAV approach procedures, but requested that an Environmental Assessment be performed and that RNAV flight trajectories be "fanned".

Town of Milton, Massachusetts, Officials — Opposed Administrator: Annemarie Fagan
Selectmen: J. Thomas Hurley, David T. Burnes, Kathleen M. Conlon
Board of Health
Some residents (108 comments received)

Town of Randolph, Massachusetts, Board of Health — Opposed

a) If they are opposed, what is the basis of their opposition?

The FAA solicited public comment on the Proposed Action from May 18, 2015, through June 30, 2015, on both proposed RNAV procedures. Comments were sent to a dedicated email address. As stated above, FAA received emailed comments from nine elected/appointed officials and 108 members of the general public. Also, the FAA received an internet petition signed by 626 persons. The proposed RNAV procedures would overfly a combined total of 12 communities (including 3 by both) — nine[63] by the FAA IAP and six[64] by the JetBlue RVFP. However, apparently all of the 108 public commenters were residents of Milton. Almost all self-identified as Milton residents; no commenter self-identified as residing in a community other than Milton. Of the 626 signers of the internet petition (which required completing an information form): 531 persons (85%) were from Milton, 11 persons were from Quincy, 11 were from Hull and 10 were from Hyde Park. Of the remaining signers: 34 were from 17 other Massachusetts communities, 28 signers were from 9 states other than Massachusetts and 1 signer was from Europe.

Comments from the public (Attachment 10) generally state that Milton residents are opposed to the new RNAV procedures because Milton already is heavily burdened by overflights. Primarily, comments concerned arrivals to Runway 4R and 4L. Milton lies on the straight-line extensions of the centerlines for Runway 4R and 4L, between 5 and 9 nautical miles from the airport. Arrivals to Runway 4R/4L overflying Milton are descending from approximately 2,700 feet to approximately 1,700 feet. These flight paths have been in use for over 50 years. The annual number of arrivals flying these paths today is approximately 60% of the peak levels in the late 1990s.

The comments contained in email messages (some of which were identical) were categorized into 30 specific concerns, including:

- Milton currently receives an unfair number of overflights; flights should be equitably re-distributed among other communities
- Overflight activity has increased in the past few years
- Flights are too low and/or lower than in the past
- Aircraft are too loud; they interfere with human activities
- Flights should be routed over the ocean
- There are too many late night operations; they interrupt sleep

DRAFT

- Overflights are a health risk due to the air pollution they generate
- Overflights reduce real estate values
- Overflights could be a source of an accident
- The FAA should meet with the residents of Milton and address their concerns
- FAA and/or airlines should compensate Milton monetarily.

Some Commenters were explicitly opposed to the proposed RNAV procedures on the grounds that they will increase the number of flights and/or flight paths over Milton. The internet petition (Attachment 11) contains the same concerns. Responses were prepared for each concern (Attachment 12).

Public officials' comments reflect similar concerns as expressed by members of the public, but are more extensive/detailed. Two differences are that: (a) several officials requested that an Environmental Assessment (EA) or Environmental Impact Statements (EIS) be prepared (while no member of the public did); and (b) the possible health effects of overflights received greater emphasis. Public officials' comments and FAA responses are contained in Attachment 9.

b) Has the FAA received one or more comments objecting to the proposed project on environmental grounds from local citizens or elected officials?

☒ Yes ☐ No

If so, state the nature of the comment and how the FAA was notified (e.g. resolution, Congressional, Public meeting/workshop, etc.).

Directly Relevant — Comments objecting to the proposed project on environmental grounds are contained in the officials' comments (Attachment 9) and public comments (Attachment 10) received via email following an outreach meeting on May 18, 2015 — see Section IV.A.1.a.

Milton officials' and residents' concerns with aircraft overflights pre-dates the Proposed Action. A group of residents of Milton have maintained the website BOS Fair Skies since 2013.[65] That group also maintains a Facebook page with the same title and theme.[66] The Milton town government includes an Airplane Noise Advisory Committee that was formed in July, 2014[67,68], and the town government's website encourages filing noise complaints with Massport[69].

Ten residents of Milton and the adjacent Hyde Park section of Boston petitioned pro se the U.S. First Circuit Court to review the Record of Decision (ROD) issued in 2013 concerning a new RNAV Standard Instrument Departure (SID) procedure for Logan Runway 33L.[70] The Court issued a decision on December 19, 2014, that upheld the FAA's actions and dismissed all related complaints.

At the May 18, 2015, Outreach meeting, four officials spoke on behalf of Milton and its concern with the level of air traffic over the town.

State Senator Brian Joyce
State Representative Walter Timilty
Town Administrator: Annemarie Fagan
Logan Community Advisory Committee Representative Cindy Christensen.

Congressman Michael Capuano, representing Mass. 7th District, which includes part of Milton, had a representative at the Outreach meeting. He subsequently wrote a letter to Administrator Huerta, dated June 2, 2015, which was also submitted to the FAA's email address for comments concerning the Proposed Action (Attachment 7). He stated, in part:

> "I do detect that the FAA is making an attempt to marry its primary mission - safety and efficiency – with what I see as just as integral, namely, promoting a healthy environment. It is my understanding that the FAA believes its proposed Runway 4L guidance will not significantly increase overflight noise and rather will marginally decrease noise for some Massachusetts residents. As well, by instituting approach guidance that allow for landings in instrument meteorological conditions, the FAA feels that delays will be reduced – meaning that there will also be less fuel used, less time in the air in holding patterns, and a reduction in late night flights necessary for catching up with weather related delays."

Cong. Capuano requested that an Environmental Assessment (EA) be performed to bolster public confidence. He also encouraged the FAA to implement 'fanning' (multiple flight paths to/from runways at Logan Airport).

Related Information — On June 3, 2015, Congressman Stephen Lynch, representing the Mass. 8th District, which includes part of Milton, proposed an amendment to an appropriations bill that included FAA funding, H.R. 2577.[71] Cong. Lynch stated the amendment would reduce the FAA outreach budget by $25 million because the FAA had refused to meet with Milton officials and residents. The amendment was withdrawn when a compromise was reached.

Subsequently, a well-publicized public meeting on the topic of annoyance due to Logan-related aircraft operations was conducted at Milton High School on December 3, 2015.[66,72,73 74,75,76,77,78,79] The meeting was hosted by Congressman Lynch and attended by Congressman Michael Capuano and Congresswoman Katherine Clark (representing the Mass. 5th District, which includes cities/towns north of Boston). Representatives for Senator Elizabeth Warren, Senator Edward Markey and Congressman Seth Moulton (representing the Mass. 6th District) were present. Several state and local public officials attended, as well as approximately 500[80] members of the public from numerous greater Boston communities (including Milton, Hull, Belmont, Arlington, Cambridge, Revere, Weymouth, Holbrook, Boston/ Roxbury, Boston/South Boston, Boston/South End, Boston/Hyde Park, Boston/Roslindale and Boston/West Roxbury). Four representatives from Massport/Logan Airport were present, as were several members of the Logan Airport Community Advisory Committee (CAC), including its President. Eleven persons from the FAA attended.

DRAFT

The meeting included a 3 hour segment during which members of the public had the opportunity to make comments and ask questions. [81,82] Virtually all questions/ comments addressed airport operations that affect the commenter's community — specifically, departures from Runways 15R, 33L, 22R and 27; and arrivals to Runway 33L and 4R/4L. Most commenters had prepared remarks and/or questions.

Fourteen commenters, approximately half of the total, were Milton residents. All addressed concerns involving (only) arrivals to Runways 4R and 4L. In addition to many of the issues raised in the written comments following the May 18, 2015, meeting (see bulleted list in Section IV.A.1.a), commenters also addressed:

- Arrivals should use a glide slope angle that is greater than 3 degrees
- Arrival to Runway 4R should fly a path is over water before it becomes aligned with the runway centerline over John Paul Park in Boston
- The FAA should mandate that the Airbus A320 series aircraft be retrofitted with a device that mitigate a high pitched tone heard as aircraft descend
- Runways 4L and 4R are 'overused'.

2. Are the airport proprietor and users providing general support for the proposed project?

☒ Yes ☐ No

The Massachusetts Port Authority (Massport) and several airlines that serve Boston Logan Airport have been briefed about the proposed project. Airlines which have expressed support include: JetBlue, Cape Air, United, Delta and FedEx. Massport has been supportive and provided feedback on plans, but requested that the community impact be analyzed in detail and that an outreach process be conducted that explains the findings. These requests are consistent with FAA policy.

3. Is the proposed project consistent with local plans and development efforts?

☐ Yes ☐ No ☒ Not Applicable.

The FAA's Proposed Action does not impact local plans and development efforts The proposed project would provide GPS guidance to aircraft that already land on Logan Airport Runway 4L. In terms of flight paths, the Proposed Action involves: (a) during IMC, shifting approximately 2,469 annual arrivals to Runway 4R to nearby parallel Runway 4L at the same airport and forming part of the same traffic flow; and (b) during VMC, shifting approximately 435 annual arrivals to Runway 4L from use of the Runway 4R ILS to a direct route to Runway 4L.

No construction is involved; no new areas are overflown; there will not be any additional flight operations to the runways involved, nor to the airport; no new aircraft types will be introduced; and there will not be a change in airport configuration criteria. There will be reductions in population noise exposure and in aircraft emissions.

4. Has there been any previous aircraft-related environmental or noise analysis, including

- FAR Part 150 Studies, conducted at this location?

  ☒ Yes ☐ No

- If so, was the study reviewed as a part of this initial review?

  ☒ Yes ☐ No ☐ N/A

  The BLANS is a collaborative effort between the FAA, Massport and the Logan Airport Community Advisory Committee (CAC) per a mitigation requirement in the 2002 Record of Decision for the Boston Airside Improvement Project Environmental Impact Statement. The BLANS is currently in Phase 3, which is evaluating the potential for a runway use program at BOS. The 2015 INM baseline being used in the BLANS is the same baseline used to determine what, if any, noise impacts may result from implementation of the Runway 4L RNAV approach procedures (IAP and RVFP) individually and cumulatively.

V. Extraordinary Circumstances

The determination of whether a proposed action may have a significant environmental effect is made by considering any requirements applicable to the specific resource (see Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2).

A. Will implementation of the proposed project result in any of the following? As stated in Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2, extraordinary circumstances exist when a proposed action involves any of the following circumstances AND may have a significant effect (40 CFR 1508.4).

1. An adverse effect on cultural resources protected under the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, as amended (see Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2.b.(1)).

   ☐ Yes ☒ No ☐ Possibly

   Comment:

   FAA submitted a project notification form w/attachments to the Massachusetts State Historic Preservation Officer (MA SHPO) on November 18, 2015, stating a proposed finding of no adverse effect on historic properties. On December 31, 2015, the MA SHPO confirmed that consultation was complete. As a result, no further action is necessary.

2. An impact on properties protected under section 4(f) of the Department of Transportation Act (see Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2.b.(2)).

   ☐ Yes ☒ No ☐ Possibly

   Comment:

   The Proposed Action (Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP) does not involve any land-based impacts as there is no physical disturbance or land acquisition. Therefore, the proposed action does not result in a direct use of any Section 4(f) property. Proposed Action related noise increases, where they exist, combined with the noise impacts from implementation of the JetBlue Runway 4L RVFP procedure, will be no greater than 0.3 dB. Such noise impacts are negligible and could not lead to a constructive use of a 4(f) property, even where a quiet setting is an attribute of a 4(f) resource.

   The MA SHPO The MCH concurred confirmed that consultation was complete, which would include any historic properties with FAA's determination that the Proposed Action would not adversely affect any historic properties, including those that could be used for Section 4(f) purposes. As a result, a determination under Section 4(f) of the U.S. Department of Transportation Act is unnecessary.

DRAFT

3. An impact on natural, ecological (e.g., invasive species) or scenic resources of Federal, Tribal, State, or local significance (for example, Federally listed or proposed endangered, threatened, or candidate species or proposed or designated critical habitat under the Endangered Species Act); resources protected by the Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act; wetlands; floodplains; prime, unique, State, or locally important farmlands; energy supply and natural resources; wild and scenic rivers, including study or eligible river segments; and solid waste management. (See Order 1050.1F, paragraphs 5-2.b.(3) and 5-2.b.(4).)

Comment:

The Proposed Action (Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP) does not include any land-based impacts as there is no physical disturbance or land acquisition. Aircraft regularly conduct approaches to Logan Runway 4L under VMC today. The proposed action does not increase the number of operations or introduce aircraft into new areas where they did not exist before. The Proposed Action will result in an increase in concentration of aircraft over certain locations and less concentration over other locations. This is calculated in the INM. Due to the increased altitude and the availability of vertical guidance, the Proposed Action is expected to result in a reduction of the emissions impact to locations on the ground relative to the No Action Alternative (Section II.B.2, page 62).

4. A division or disruption of an established community; a disruption of orderly, planned development; or an inconsistency with plans or goals that have been adopted by the community in which the project is located (see Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2.b.(5)).

Comment:

See response to item V.A.3 immediately above.

5. An increase in congestion from surface transportation, by causing a decrease in the Level of Service below the acceptable level determined by the appropriate transportation agency (i.e., a highway agency). (See Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2.b.(6).)

☐ Yes ☒ No ☐ Possibly

Comment:

6. An impact on noise levels of noise-sensitive areas (see Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2.b.(7)).

☒ Yes ☐ No ☐ Possibly

DRAFT

Comment:

A detailed noise analysis using the Integrated Noise Model (INM) was conducted. The findings are presented in Section I.D.7, beginning on page 26. In addition to the Proposed Action, the analysis considered the cumulative impact of the Proposed Action in combination with the proposed JetBlue Runway 4L RVFP.

The INM cumulative analysis findings (for both proposed procedures) are summarized in Table 14. People exposed to less noise outnumber those exposed to more noise by a 13:1 ratio. Within the Baseline 45 dB DNL contour: the maximum DNL increase is 0.3 dB. All DNL increases are negligible in comparison to the applicable thresholds shown in Table 4.

7. An impact on air quality or a violation of local, State, Tribal, or Federal air quality standards under the Clean Air Act amendments of 1990 (see Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2.b.(8)).

☐ Yes ☒ No ☐ Possibly

Comment:

Aircraft regularly conduct approaches to Logan Runway 4L under VMC today. The No-Action Alternative is for this practice to continue. The Proposed Action (Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP) will not result in an increase in the number, nor a change in the type, of aircraft arriving on Runway 4L. Tracks for approaches guided by the proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP would be within the footprint of the current arrival tracks, but at higher altitudes and along smoother descent paths.

The Proposed Action is expected to improve air quality relative to the No-Action Alternative. Predicted reductions in fuel consumption and CO_2 emissions for the Proposed Action, presented in Section II.B.2 (page 62), are 55,538 gallons of jet fuel and 1,171,851 pounds of CO_2. Cumulative reductions for the Proposed Action and the proposed JetBlue Runway 4L RVFP combined are larger — see Section VIII (page 85).

Given that the Proposed Action will result in air quality improvements, it is "presumed to conform" with local, State, Tribal and Federal standards under the Clean Air Act. Therefore further analysis of the project's air quality impacts is unwarranted. See 72 FR 41565, July 30, 2007 – Federal Presumed to Conform Actions.

8. An impact on water quality, sole source aquifers, a public water supply system, or State or Tribal water quality standards established under the Clean Water Act and the Safe Drinking Water Act (see Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2.b.(9)).

Comment:

DRAFT

The Proposed Action (Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP) does not include any land-based impacts as there is no physical disturbance or land acquisition. In addition, as stated in Section V.A.7, the Proposed Action does not result in an impact or violation of local, State, Tribal or Federal air quality standards under the Clean Air Act, and will actually result in a decrease in CO_2 emissions. Attachment 13 is a map showing locations of reservoirs and water supply systems for the Proposed Action and the proposed JetBlue Runway 4L RVFP.

9. Effects on the quality of the human environment that are likely to be highly controversial on environmental grounds (see Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2.b.(10)).

☐ Yes ☒ No ☐ Possibly

Comment:

As evidenced by comments received by the FAA following an outreach meeting on May 18, 2015 there is opposition from some residents of Milton, MA, (approximately 108 comments received) and their elected officials regarding implementation of the Proposed Action (Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP). Two members of the Logan Airport CAC from other communities and the Board of Health for the Town of Randolph also expressed opposition.

As stated in FAA Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2, opposition alone is not sufficient for a Proposed Action or its impacts to be considered highly controversial on environmental grounds. There must be a reasonable disagreement regarding the impacts of the Proposed Action. Comments received indicate that the majority of the opposition is based on noise and air quality associated with current flights over Milton.

To provide detailed information on noise impacts, FAA has done a full INM analysis for the FAA's Proposed Action, which includes analysis of the proposed JetBlue Runway 4L RVFP for cumulative impact purposes. Typically, a noise screen is conducted for these types of situation — adding instrument guidance an existing visual operation, without changing the type of aircraft, nor increasing the number of flights involved, or changing the area on the ground that is overflown.

The INM cumulative analysis findings (for both proposed procedures) are summarized in Table 14 (page 39). People exposed to less noise outnumber those exposed to more noise by a 13:1 ratio. Within the Baseline 45 dB DNL contour, the maximum DNL increase is 0.3 dB. All DNL increases are negligible in comparison to the applicable thresholds shown in Table 4. For the FAA's Proposed Action individually, the maximum DNL increase is 0.1 dB and the population exposed to a decrease in DNL exceeds those exposed to an increase by a ratio of 5-to-1 (Table 11, page 36).

In addition, the implementation the FAA's Proposed Action would result in reduced fuel consumption and CO_2 emissions. Based on the findings of these detailed analyses, there is no "reasonable" disagreement regarding the impacts of the proposed procedure.

DRAFT

10. Likelihood of an inconsistency with any Federal, State, Tribal, or local law relating to the environmental aspects of the proposed action (see Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2.b.(11)).

☐ Yes ☒ No ☐ Possibly

Comment:

Aircraft regularly conduct approaches to Logan Runway 4L under VMC today. The tracks for approaches guided by the proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP would be within the footprint of the current arrival tracks, but at higher altitudes. There would be no increase in the number or changes in the types of aircraft arriving on Runway 4L today. Due to the increased altitude and the availability of vertical guidance, the Proposed Action (Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP) is expected to result in less impact to locations on the ground than the No Action Alternative.

11. Likelihood of directly, indirectly, or cumulatively, creating a significant impact on the human environment (see Order 1050.1F, paragraph 5-2.b.(12)).

☐ Yes ☒ No ☐ Possibly

Comment:

As stated in Section I.C (page 4), in addition to the FAA's Proposed Action (Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP), JetBlue has proposed a Runway 4L RVFP to be used only during VMC. Although the projects are being proposed by two different entities, they both have the potential to impact communities underlying arrivals to Runway 4L. Consequently, the FAA conducted a cumulative analysis that considered the impacts of both proposed RNAV approaches together.

Cumulative noise impacts (Section I.D.7, page 26) are substantially below reportable or significant FAA thresholds — see the following tables:

- Table 16: Ranges of DNL changes at census block centroids by community (page 40)
- Table 4: Criteria for determining the impact of increases in aircraft noise (page 27)
- Table 14: DNL exposure changes to population (page 39).

There are cumulative reductions in fuel consumption and emissions. These are presented in Section VII (page 85).

Because: (1) aircraft currently conduct arrival operations in VMC to Runway 4L that overfly the same area that the Proposed Action would overfly and (2) the Proposed Action will not increase the number nor alter the type of aircraft approaching Runway 4L, there is no likelihood that the Proposed Action will create a significant impact on the human environment. Instead, the impact will be small but generally beneficial.

VI. Alternatives

A. Are there alternatives to the proposed project?

☐ Yes ☒ No

If yes, describe any alternatives to the proposed action.

Until the NextGen program and the availability of RNAV (GPS) IAPs, the preferred option for providing approach guidance to a runway was installation of an Instrument Landing System (ILS). For Logan Runway 4L, that would have been an option over the past decade or more. However, there are significant geography, real estate and local community issues involved.

An ILS provides lateral (also termed azimuth) guidance by its localizer subsystem. The localizer antenna must be placed along the extended runway centerline, nominally 1,000 feet past the far or "stop" end of the runway, as seen by a pilot flying the approach. To properly form a beam, the localizer antenna must be surrounded by a clear area: "The greatest detriment to the formation of the desirable [beam] patterns is the presence of reflecting objects such as uneven terrain, power lines, buildings, dense vegetation, ground vehicles, water, snow and ice conditions, and moving aircraft in the vicinity of the [antenna] sites".[83]

Depending upon their capabilities, localizer antennas are between 100 feet and 150 feet wide (i.e., ±50 feet or ±75 feet about the runway centerline extension. The clear area is, at a minimum, a semi-circle of radius 250 feet extending to the sides and in front of the antenna (i.e., toward the runway). Referring to Figure 2 (page 6), at Logan, an inlet from the Atlantic Ocean lies immediately beyond (to the northeast of) the stop ends of Runways 4L and 4R. The localizer antennas for these runways must be installed on the opposite side of the inlet, set back from the water's edge by approximately 250 feet.

Figure 31 shows the location of the Runway 4R localizer antenna and the area where a localizer antenna for Runway 4L would have to be placed. Installation of such an antenna would involve (a) the purchase (likely involving eminent domain) of 25 to 30 residential houses and associated lots, and (b) closing a portion of Bayswater Street. (Bayswater Street does not pass by the area containing the Runway 4R localizer.)

Based on property value estimates, the cost of acquiring the property is estimated to be 18 million dollars. Clearing and preparing the land would entail additional costs not quantified. The total cost of acquiring and preparing the land is considered to be prohibitive.

Moreover, even if the funds were available to acquire and prepare the needed land, based on previous Logan Airport construction projects (e.g., centerfield taxiway on airport property, which was contested in court), local opposition to taking residential housing would, in all likelihood be intense. In the past, when the possibility of installing an ILS on Runway 4L was broached, Massport was not willing to consider it.

In situations involving a potential new approach guidance system, the cost of purchasing and installing the ILS and ancillary equipment was often the primary concern. The FAA has a contract with Thales Air Traffic Management (TATM) Corporation for ILS localizer and glide slope equipment and their installation. FAA also has a contract with TATM for Low Power DME (Distance Measuring Equipment). Current practice is that a Low Power DME is installed near a localizer, in lieu of installing one or more marker beacons off the airport property.

For Runway 4L, the combined ILS and DME installed cost is estimated to be between $2.0 million and $2.2 million. Runway 4L already has two Runway Visual Range (RVR) sensors installed, so those costs would be saved. (Installation of one or more RVRs is often done in conjunction with installing an ILS.) The proposed RNAV approaches do not have any ground equipment costs.

In summary, there is no realistically available alternative system that satisfies the need to provide approach guidance to Runway 4L in order to increase safety and reduce delays. Moreover, GPS guidance enables offset angle approach courses to be flown under VMC while descending (see Figure 11 on page 18). This enables aircraft approaching Runways 4L and 4R to be readily separated, enhancing safety. ILS does not have this capability.

B. Please provide a summary description of alternatives eliminated and why.

The basic purpose of this project is implement an RNAV (GPS) Instrument Approach Procedure (IAP) on Boston Logan Runway 4L to improve safety, reduce delays and conform to national policy (Section II.A, page 41). The methodology for RNAV (GPS) IAPs are well developed and codified in FAA Order 8260.58[84]. Thus the alternatives considered were: (a) the feasibility of implementing an Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP and designs of the procedure within the parameters permitted by Order 8260.58; and (b) because Runway 4R and 4L are separated by less than 2,500 feet (specifically 1,500 feet), ensuring that possible wake encounters are mitigated pursuant to FAA Order 7110.308A[85]. Mitigation of wake encounters is necessary to use both Runway 4L and 4R under IMC.

The first area for consideration involved issues associated with any new instrument approach procedure (item (a)):

- Surveying the approach course obstacle environment, and assessing the feasibility of implementing an IAP — Attachment 2 addressed this issue. Also a survey was contracted by Massport, validated by the National Geodetic Survey and accepted by the FAA
- Ensuring that the runway has proper markings for an IAP — FAA ANE Airports Division confirmed that this is the case, and Massport has agreed to modify the Airport Layout Plan accordingly
- Selection of an approach course based upon the location of nearby Runway 4R — see paragraphs immediately below
- Selection of a glide path angle, decision altitude and minimum visibility for each procedure type — see paragraphs immediately below and Attachment 3.
- Coordination with Boston Consolidated Tracon and Logan Tower ATC staffs, management and union — see paragraphs immediately below.

An early decision was that no equipment is to be installed on the airport. RNAV (GPS) IAPs do not require guidance equipment on or near the airport. Since Runway 4L is a secondary runway, it was decided not to install an approach lighting system or additional Runway Visual Range (RVR) sensors. An approach lighting system enables aircraft to land under lower visibility conditions than is possible without a lighting system. It was the judgment of the FAA and Massachusetts Port Authority that the cost of an approach lighting system was not justified by the incremental benefits they would provide. Logan Runway 4L currently has RVR sensors at the touchdown and rollout locations.

Concerning item (b) above — mitigating wake encounters involving Runway 4R — the first method is inherent in FAA Order 7110.308A. Arrival aircraft are grouped in leader-trailer pairs on opposite runways (i.e., operations are dependent), with the lead aircraft approaching Runway 4R and the trail aircraft approaching Runway 4L — see Figure 32. By limiting the size/weight of the lead aircraft with a pair, the magnitude of the wake the trailing aircraft might encounter is bounded.

However, analysis demonstrated that further mitigation is required by either/or:

(a) Ensuring that the glide path for trailing aircraft approaching Runway 4L is higher than that for the leading aircraft approaching Runway 4R

(b) Ensuring that the ground track for the trailing aircraft approaching Runway 4L is sufficiently separated from that for the leading aircraft approaching Runway 4R.

"Ensuring" here requires taking into consideration normal navigation and flight technical errors as well as expected variations in wind, temperature and atmospheric turbulence.

At San Francisco International Airport (SFO), where FAA Order 7110.308A is implemented, wake mitigation was achieved by lowering the glide path angle for the lead aircraft's runway. Thus, lowering the glide path angle of Logan Runway 4R was briefly considered, but was rejected. Approach procedures for Runway 4R must take account of ships in the adjacent channel. This has led to Runway 4R having a displaced threshold, which reduced the landing distance available. Reducing the glide path angle for Runway 4R would likely further reduce the landing distance available, thus is not a realistic option.

DRAFT

Instead, the Runway 4L glide slope was set at 3.1 degrees (the maximum value permitted by Order 8260.58 unless a waiver is obtained). The Wake Turbulence Research Office then calculated the probability of wake encounters. It was found that:

(i) For an LPV procedure type, fewer wake encounters would be experienced by aircraft approaching Runway 4L than would be experienced by aircraft approaching Runway 4R using standard in-trail separation;

(ii) For an LNAV/VNAV procedure type, depending upon the temperature, the wake encounters experienced by the trailing aircraft approaching Runway 4L could be either more or less than those experienced by trailing aircraft approaching Runway 4R using standard in-trail separation.

When temperatures are colder than the international standard value of 59º Fahrenheit, due to the physics of the atmosphere and barometric altimeters, aircraft actually fly a slightly lower glide path angle than is indicated by the altimeter, and thus (when in a trailing position) experience an increased frequency of wake encounters. Conversely, when temperatures are warmer than 59º F, aircraft actually fly a higher glide path angle than is indicated, and experience a decreased frequency of wake encounters.

To address the LNAV/VNAV procedure's sensitivity to temperature, several alternatives were considered:

- Limit the Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP to the LPV procedure type — Several airlines that serve Boston Logan objected. Their aircraft are equipped for LNAV/VNAV but not LPV procedure types, and they would like to take advantage of an RNAV (GPS) IAP to Runway 4L.
- Increase the Runway 4L glide path angle to a value larger than 3.1 degrees that would reduce the wake encounter probability to an acceptable level at lower temperatures — Some pilots objected to such a steep glide path angle during warm temperatures as being less safe (due to the associated increase in descent rate).
- Publish multiple glide path angles (GPAs), based on the temperature (e.g., 3.4 degree GPA for 0º F to 35º F; 3.2 degree GPA for 36º F to 72º F; and 3.0 degree GPA for 73º F to 105º F) — Controllers objected to this alternative as being complicated, thus more error-prone and a potential safety risk.

The fourth alternative explored — the combination of a 3.1 degree glide path angle and a 2.0 degree westward offset of the approach course, and retaining LNAV/VNAV approaches as an option — was selected after investigating alternative offset angles. It provides the required wake mitigation, is compliant with Order 8260.58 and was acceptable to controllers, pilots and airlines.

During the Public Comment period (May 18 – June 30, 2015), recommendations for alternatives were submitted by government elected/appointed officials and the general public. These were considered but judged to be infeasible; none were consistent with FAA Order 8260.58. These are documented in the FAA's Response to Officials (Attachment 9) and the Public (Attachment 12) are summarized in Table 25.

DRAFT

Table 25 Alternatives Recommended by Officials and the Public

Commenter's Recommended Alternative	Reason for Rejection
Utilize a curved approach from Boston Harbor to Runway 4L, to reduce overflight of homes	Not feasible for safety reasons; requires that Runway 4L arrival traffic cross through the paths of aircraft approaching Runway 4R along its extended centerline while using ILS guidance.
Utilize a 4.0 degree glide path angle	Not permitted by Order 8260.58 governing design of RNAV approach procedures
Utilize "fanning"; aircraft approach the runway at different azimuth angles to reduce concentration of flight paths	There are no RNAV "fanning" approach procedures in the National Airspace System (NAS)

VII. Mitigation

Are there measures, which can be implemented that might mitigate any of the potential impacts, i.e., GPS/FMS plans, navaids, etc.?

☐ Yes ☒ No ☐ N/A

There are no impacts that require mitigation per FAA environmental requirements.

VIII. Cumulative Impacts

What other projects (FAA, non-FAA, or non-aviation) are known to be planned, have been previously implemented, or are ongoing in the affected area that would contribute to the proposed project's environmental impact?

Cumulative DNL Changes by Community — See Section V.A.11 of this IER for a summary of cumulative impacts when combining the FAA's proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP and the JetBlue Runway 4L RVFP.

For this evaluation the INM modeled the operating characteristics at Logan (in terms of aircraft types, number of approach and departure operations, runway utilization, flight procedures, terrain characteristics, etc.) in addition to accounting for all previous changes to the airport operations, including the Runway 27 and Runway 33L RNAV departures. The INM modelled the following cases: 1) No Action Alternative, the current operations at Logan; 2) current Logan operating characteristics plus use of the FAA's proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP, 3) current Logan operating characteristics plus the use of the proposed JetBlue Runway 4L RVFP; and 4) current Logan operating characteristics plus use of both the FAA's proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP and the JetBlue Runway 4L RVFP.

The INM utilizes an average annual day of operations, which includes the number of operations, runway use, flight track use, and other model inputs. The DNL noise values reported in this IER reflect all operations on all runways with and without the Proposed Action. The changes in noise levels (DNL) are compared to thresholds published in FAA Order 1050.1F, for over 59,000 census tract centroids and over 24,000 noise-sensitive facilities and historic resources.

DRAFT

For all cases considered, the DNL increases at the most adversely impacted (worst case) location was a small fraction of the threshold and is considered to be negligible. The net change in noise, averaged over all centroids exposed to 45 dB DNL or greater was in fact a decrease in noise exposure.

Cumulative Emissions Impact —The cumulative impact of the reductions in jet fuel consumption and CO_2 emissions for the FAA Proposed Action (see Section II.B.2, page 62) and JetBlue Proposed Action are given in Table 26.

Table 26 Cumulative Annual Fuel and Emissions Reductions

Procedure	Operational Benefit	Fuel Savings (gallons)	CO_2 Savings (pounds)
RNAV GPS IAP	IMC Delay Reduction	49,794	1,050,653
RNAV GPS IAP	VMC Continuous Descent	5,744	121,198
RVFP	VMC Continuous Descent	18,964	400,140
Cumulative	Both Proposed Actions	74,502	1,571,991

Potential Future Runway Use Program — In the future, Massport may request that FAA implement a runway use program at Logan as a result of Phase 3 of the BLANS. However, at this time, it is not reasonably foreseeable what that would entail and therefore it can't be evaluated in terms of cumulative impacts.

XI. Facility/Service Area Conclusions

Compliance with FAA Order 1050.1F paragraph 5-6.5.g — Based upon FAA Order 1050.1F paragraph 5-6.5.g, the Proposed RNAV (GPS) IAP is qualified for the categorical exclusion of paragraph 5-6.5.g, to wit "Establishment of Global Positioning System (GPS), Flight Management System (FMS), Area Navigation/Required Navigation Performance (RNAV/RNP), or essentially similar systems that use overlay of existing flight tracks." Attachment 14 depicts representative current arrivals to Runway 4L and both the FAA's proposed Runway 4L RNAV GPS IAP and JetBlue's proposed RVFP.

- Although not required, a noise analysis of the Proposed Action was performed using the FAA-approved Integrated Noise Model (INM). It was determined that (a) the impact at the most adversely affected location is negligible, and (b) substantially more people experience a noise decrease than experience an increase — see Section I.D.7 (starting on page 26)
- The INM analysis includes effects involving an RVFP concurrently proposed by JetBlue Airlines; the cumulative effects are also negligible — see Section I.D.7 (page 26)
- The Proposed Action provides beneficial reductions in fuel consumption and CO_2 emissions — see Section II.B.2 (page 62)
- An outreach meeting on the topic of the two proposed approach procedures for Runway 4L was held on May 18, 2015 at the Mass. State Transportation Building. Due to the limited room capacity (approximately 100 people), invitations were only extended to public officials, including the Logan Airport CAC; the general public was provided access by telephone and internet (webinar) links. Comments were solicited from all persons, and replies were prepared for each comment — see Attachment 6 and Attachments 9 – 12
- Opposition to the proposed RNAV procedures was expressed by residents of the Town of Milton, Mass. That opposition is almost entirely based on annoyance caused by the current arrivals to Runways 4R and 4L. Opponents' position is that mitigating the effects of those operations should take priority over implementing new procedures.
- An outreach meeting, open to all, on the topic of aircraft overflights in the Greater Boston area, was held on December 3, 2015, at Milton High School (Section IV.A.1). Attendees included: three Members Congress, representatives of both U.S. Senators representing Massachusetts and a fourth Member of Congress, state and municipal elected officials, members of the CAC, three representatives from Massport, 10 representatives of the FAA, and approximately 500 members of the public from at least 14 communities. Every member of the public was provided the opportunity to make comments and/or ask questions. During the three-hour public comment period, 14 Milton residents made comments and/or asked questions. No questions/comments addressed either of the two proposed Runway 4L RNAV approach procedures; all concerned current arrivals to Runways 4R and 4L.
- Extraordinary Circumstances, as defined by Order 1050.1F, Paragraph 5-2, do not exist — see Section V (page 75)

- There is no reasonable controversy over the Proposed Action's environmental impact.

This IER, including its attachments, documents the above statements.

This initial review and analysis indicates that extraordinary circumstances or other reasons ☐ exist ☐ do not exist that would cause the responsible federal official to believe that the proposed project might have the potential for causing significant environmental impacts.

☐ The undersigned have determined that the proposed project qualifies as a categorically excluded action in accordance with Order 1050.1F, and on this basis, recommend that no further environmental review be conducted before the proposed project is implemented.

☐ The undersigned have determined that the proposed project does not qualify as a categorically excluded action in accordance with Order 1050.1F, and on this basis, recommend that further environmental review be conducted before the proposed project is implemented. Therefore the undersigned recommend that the proposed project be submitted for environmental funding for preparation of an ☐ EA ☐ EIS ☐ Not sure- more analysis needed.

APPENDIX B
Noise Modeling Technical Report

Appendix B describes the noise modeling input parameters of the No-Action Alternative as well as the Proposed Action Alternative. Section B.1 reviews the methodology used to conduct the noise analysis, Section B.2 describes the development of input data and the sources for the No-Action Alternative, and Section B.3 describes input data development for the Proposed Action Alternative. Section B.4 describes the sensitivity analysis that was performed to determine if additional operations being added to the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Instrument Approach Procedure (IAP) could cause a significant impact at Boston Logan International Airport (the Airport).

All departure and approach procedures at the Airport as they were flown during the baseline timeframe (November 1, 2018 – October 31, 2019) of the Environmental Assessment (EA) were retained in the No Action Alternative. Under the No Action Alternative, input track data from the baseline timeframe was analyzed to create 275 backbones representing each individual traffic flow (including helicopters) to and from all runways at the Airport.

The Proposed Action Alternative model reflects Airport operations during the baseline timeframe inclusive of the implementation of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Instrument Approach Procedure (IAP). Implementation of the IAP has airport efficiency benefits in certain weather conditions, the effects of which are included in the noise model and the details of which are included in Section B.3. With the exception of traffic that is moved to the proposed RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP and offsetting departure traffic, the Proposed Action Alternative maintains the same runway usage as the No Action Alternative. This method provides a means to evaluate the Proposed Alternative as the sole cause of any modeled impacts.

B.1 Methodology

The methodology used in the noise analysis of the proposed RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP for the Airport follows established Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) guidelines in both the construction of a representative data model and the evaluation of noise impacts. Model construction and execution relied heavily on guidance provided in the FAA document titled "Guidance on Using the Aviation Environmental Design Tool (AEDT) to Conduct Environmental Modeling for FAA Actions Subject to NEPA" updated 10/27/2017.[1] AEDT is the FAA's approved model for assessing noise and emissions at civilian airports. AEDT has been used for environmental review of aviation noise and emissions impacts since 2012 and is used for 14 CFR Part 150 studies, National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) EAs and Environmental Impact Statements (EISs). For this EA, AEDT was used as an integrated model to estimate the total noise impact of all modeled aircraft flights.

AEDT model settings such as weather, terrain, and atmospheric absorption were chosen based on the guidance provided in this document. In particular, the average annual weather at the Airport during the baseline timeframe was used, as was National Elevation Dataset (NED) GridFloat terrain, and the SAE-ARP-5534 setting for atmospheric absorption.

As per the guidance, model input data suitable for AEDT modeling was collected and aggregated into an operationally representative form known as an Annual Average Day (AAD) indicating the expected mix of aircraft operations over the course of a representative "average" day. The model inputs, which consist of flight tracks and specific aircraft operations utilizing these tracks, were imported into the AEDT model and evaluated for noise exposure by using AEDT settings required by FAA guidance as described above. Key attributes of an aircraft operation relevant to noise modeling are the aircraft type, the operation type (arrival or departure), the runway used, the ground track used, the time of day (day or night), and the stage length. Stage length is an indication of aircraft weight and is typically inferred by knowing the aircraft type and the trip distance. For the purposes of noise modeling, multiple aircraft operations possessing identical values for these key attributes were aggregated.

In the noise analysis AEDT version 3b was used to calculate No Action and Proposed Action noise exposure levels at population centroids within the General Study Area (GSA). In addition, noise exposure under both alternatives was calculated at the Section 4(f) and Historic locations identified within the GSA.

B.2 No Action Alternative Noise Model Input

The No Action Alternative represents the annualized traffic flown at the Airport during the baseline timeframe. It is treated as the baseline against which noise exposure changes associated with the Proposed Action Alternative are measured. The baseline timeframe was chosen as it is representative of a typical recent year at the Airport, free of major traffic disruptions and is reflective of the brisk traffic growth that the Airport has experienced since 2009. This section details the noise model design for the No Action Alternative.

B.2.1 No Action Alternative Aircraft Operations and Runway Use

Performance Data Analysis and Reporting System (PDARS) radar data for the baseline timeframe was obtained to develop operations data for noise modeling. The FAA OpsNet database identifies a count of 432,328 Instrument Flight Rules (IFR) itinerant (non-local) operations during the baseline timeframe, 413,174 of which are identified as tracks in the PDARS radar data. Each of the operations on the radar tracks were placed onto representative backbones that were built based on individual traffic flows to and from each runway. The number of operations on each backbone was scaled appropriately (by runway) to bring the total number of operations to the OpsNet count of 432,328. Helicopter operations are not identified in the OpsNet count, but 339 operations that were identified as helicopters in the PDARS data were included in the model, bringing the total number of modeled fixed wing and helicopter operations to 432,667. The total number of annual operations at the Airport was divided by the number of days in the year to determine the AAD, which was then used as input to AEDT. Operations without both an origin and destination airport (such as VFR, circuit, and local operations) were not included.

The Airport operates in several unique configurations primarily based on prevailing surface wind direction. When wind is from the north and east, traffic at the Airport primarily uses the Northeast configuration, where aircraft usually depart Runway 9 and arrive Runway 4R. When in the Northeast configuration, the Airport uses Runway 4L as the secondary runway for arrivals, while both Runway 4L and Runway 4R can be used for additional departures in the event of high departure demand. While in the Northeast configuration operations in Visual Meteorological Conditions (VMC), Runway 4L is usually only used for arrivals when the queue for Runway 4R exceeds 10 nautical miles (NM), corresponding to an arrival line of approximately 3-4 aircraft). Currently, Runway 4L arrivals are limited by both the proximity of Runway 4L to Runway 4R, (which limits the utility of parallel arrival operations to both runways) as well as the lack of an IAP of any kind. There is a preferred runway use program between midnight and 6:00 AM where aircraft usually arrive Runway 33L and depart Runway 15R if operationally feasible. Generally, Runway 4L is not currently used for night arrivals when the Airport is in the Northeast configuration, regardless of meteorological conditions.

B.2.2 No Action Alternative Flight Tracks, Profiles, and Flight Track Use

For the purposes of noise modeling, representative flight tracks were modeled as backbone tracks with expanded sub-tracks accounting for the dispersion of operations across a corridor. These backbones and sub-tracks were developed by isolating distinct flows by runway and operation type (arrivals or departures). Some flows were further isolated by day operations and night operations where the determination of day and night operations conforms to the FAA's Day-Night Average Sound Level (DNL) time periods. All the flight operations from each flow were distributed onto the representative backbone and its sub-tracks by using the default AEDT binomial weight distribution scheme.

AEDT includes a series of "standard" arrival and departure profiles with variability in the altitude over the initial portion of departure trajectories determined by trip length or stage length. Depending on the aircraft type, AEDT's "standard" departure profiles are provided for different stage lengths ranging from one to nine – with higher numbers indicating heavier takeoff weights. The chosen "standard" profile effectively serves as a surrogate for aircraft weight and models heavier aircraft of a given aircraft type at a lower altitude on departures. As mentioned in Section B.1 the stage length can be determined by the trip distance. For both the No Action and Proposed Action scenarios the stage length for each modeled operation was determined by computing the trip distance between the origin and destination airports and translating the trip distance into a stage length and choosing the appropriate standard profile for that stage length. In addition, flights were modeled as day and night operations as per the distribution shown below in Table B.4 below.

B.3 FAA Proposed Action Noise Model Input

The input to AEDT represents estimated operations after the implementation of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP. When compared with the No Action Alternative, the Proposed Action Alternative incorporates two major changes. First, a net total of 255 annual operations will be added to traffic at the Airport to represent additional operations that would currently be canceled under the No Action Alternative. This will occur because the additional gain in efficiency attributable to the Proposed Action increases the Airport's hourly Average Arrival Rate (AAR) and allows additional arrival operations. These operations comprise:

- An additional 359 annual arrivals to Runway 4L, representing flights that are no longer canceled or delayed due to additional runway throughput available with the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP.
- A reduction of 104 annual arrivals to Runway 4R, representing flights that can now use Runway 4L earlier in the day due to increased throughput and no longer need to wait to use Runway 4R.

Note that the net increase of 255 annual departures is assigned to use Runway 9, as this is the primary departure runway when the Airport is in the Northeast configuration. The detailed methodology on the determination of the number of annual flights and associated runway usage in the Proposed Action Alternative is described in Section B.3.1.

The second major change is associated with aircraft that are currently flying the ILS 15R approach in marginal VFR conditions, and then transitioning to a visual landing on Runway 4L once the aircraft has visual contact with the runway. Due to operational restrictions associated with flying this procedure, these aircraft are always small, maneuverable aircraft. In the Proposed Action Alternative, the ILS RWY 15R visual transition to Runway 4L approach will still be available, but based on consultation with Boston Consolidated TRACON (A90) personnel, it is not expected that it will continue to be used. Instead, Air Traffic Control (ATC) plans to assign the aircraft previously flying the ILS RWY 15R visual transition to Runway 4L approach to fly the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L in the Proposed Action Alternative. This action will not result in any change in the number of operations to any runway but is implemented in the AEDT noise model as four new backbones representing unique transitions to Runway 4L used by only those small, maneuverable aircraft that previously flew the ILS RWY 15R visual transition to Runway 4L approach. A total of 594 operations have been modeled to fly these new backbones in the Proposed Action Alternative.

B.3.1 Proposed Action Alternative Aircraft Operations and Runway Use

The Proposed Action represents an additional IAP to the Airport that ATC plans to use when the Airport is in the Northeast configuration during periods of Instrument Meteorological Conditions (IMC). As this has clear implications to the current operations at the Airport, it was critical to identify what those implications were and how they could affect runway use at the Airport under the Proposed Action. Additionally, a model had to be developed that could accurately represent the number of arrivals at the Airport under the Proposed Action as well as the distribution of those arrivals by runway. The approach that was chosen to develop this model is detailed in Section B.3.1.1 and Section B.3.1.4 that follow.

B.3.1.1 Arrival Capacity Balancing Model Background

Early in the EA process, FAA identified an efficiency gain that would be associated with the implementation of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L approach at the Airport. When in the Northeast configuration during IMC, the AAR is 32 in the No Action Alternative. FAA estimated that with the new IAP available, the AAR under these conditions would increase by four operations per hour for a new AAR of 36.

Currently, brief periods of IMC over the course of any day generally do not cause major impacts because the Airport is well below capacity during periods of VMC. Unless a day has significant continuous periods of IMC during times of high arrival demand, flights are not usually canceled at the Airport. However, long periods of IMC at the Airport cause delays and cascading cancellations in any configuration, with the magnitude of those flight impacts directly tied to the length of time when the Airport is in IMC. In order to determine the number of flight cancellations that would be eliminated under the Proposed Action, it was necessary to estimate the amount of time that the Airport was both in IMC and in the Northeast configuration over the course of a year, as well as the number of cancellations and delays attributable to an acute lack of capacity during those times.

C.3.1.2 Determination of Bad-weather Days and Control Days

The first step in determining the amount of time during the baseline timeframe where significant weather-related cancellations have taken place was to retrieve operational data for the Airport from the FAA’s Operations and Performance Data system. Once the operational data were retrieved, the days of the year containing cancellations due to weather or air traffic congestion were isolated. The runway use for these days was analyzed to determine when the Airport was in the Northeast configuration. Any dates where the Airport was shown to be in another configuration during the times where cancellations took place were discarded at this stage.

Weather Underground data for the remaining dates was analyzed to determine significant periods of IMC, which, for the purposes of this analysis, were identified as hourly time blocks where the visibility is less than or equal to five miles. For the purposes of this EA, any hourly time block where visibility is lower than five miles was considered IMC in terms of airport capacity because Runway 4L arrival operations currently require at least five miles of visibility for both the standard visual approach as well as the ILS RWY 15R visual transition to Runway 4L approach. Below five miles of visibility, only Runway 4R can be used for arrivals when the Airport is in the Northeast configuration.

A day was considered a bad weather day (and hence eligible for inclusion in the analysis) if it met both of the following criteria:

1. The Airport was in IMC for either six consecutive daytime hours, or eight of any ten daytime hours, and
2. The Airport was in the Northeast configuration for at least 80% of the hours when it was in IMC.

Over the baseline timeframe, seven days were identified that met the above criteria. These days are listed below:

- January 5, 2019
- January 20, 2019
- February 18, 2019
- March 2, 2019
- April 22, 2019
- June 1, 2019
- October 11, 2019

Next, seven additional dates were selected to represent days that were scheduled similarly to the above bad weather dates, but had good weather and minimal cancellations. These days were treated as control days and were selected to provide a delta between operations on a good weather/VMC day and operations on a day with cancellations and delays due to weather. Control days were selected on the same day of the week during the same season as their corresponding bad weather days in order to minimize the effect of seasonality and day of the week on the number and makeup of the flight schedule. The selected control days are listed below:

- December 8, 2018
- January 13, 2019
- February 11, 2019
- March 9, 2019
- April 8, 2019
- May 18, 2019
- October 4, 2019

B.3.1.3 Calculation of Additional Throughput Attributable to Proposed Action

Arrivals were categorized by day operations and night operations for the runway from the schedule data for the bad weather days. Average arrival throughput was then calculated for both day (07:00:00 AM to 9:59:59 PM) and night (10:00:00 PM to 6:59:59 AM) hours, and four arrivals per hour were added to represent the additional throughput available under the Proposed Action Alternative. As a simplifying assumption, new maximum daily throughput available due to implementing the new IAP was assumed to be 96 arrivals (60 day/36 night) representing the additional four operations over the 24-hour period for all of the bad weather days. The additional throughput was applied hourly over the course of the bad weather day to obtain an estimated maximum Airport capacity value for the bad weather day under the Proposed Action Alternative. This was the upper bound of additional flights that could potentially be added for each of the seven identified bad weather days.

B.3.1.4 Determination of Arrival Runway Usage in the Proposed Action

The next step was a determination of how flights could be shifted between runways due to the presence of additional arrival throughput at the Airport under IMC in the Northeast configuration. An estimate of scheduled arrival demand (for both day and night operations) on the bad weather days was determined by adding the number of arrival cancellations to the number of observed arrivals on those dates. That value was compared with the calculated maximum runway capacity value for each bad weather day under the Proposed Action Alternative. If either day or night demand exceeded the calculated day or night maximum runway capacity then the number of flights were limited to that maximum runway capacity and further flights were considered to be canceled.

Additional schedule data was evaluated to determine the average split of day and night traffic during normal operations for each bad weather day. This was done by analyzing the arrival operations from additional dates on the same day of the week and from the same season as the seven bad weather days to determine the day/night split over time. This split was very consistent over the analyzed dates, with approximately 18% of traffic at the Airport landing during night hours.

Then, flights were reallocated to Runway 4R and Runway 4L based on the estimated split of day and night flights and the new runway capacity value in the Proposed Action Alternative. All flights utilizing the additional new capacity available were assigned to Runway 4L. Runway 4R was assumed to serve the existing flights as in the No Action Alternative. For some days, this resulted in a reduction in the number of night flights on Runway 4R as those flights were shifted forward into the day to take advantage of newly available capacity on Runway 4L. For other days with more cancellations, the number of night flights increased as flights that were previously canceled took advantage of additional night capacity on Runway 4L. It should be noted that after midnight local time, Runway 33L is the preferred arrival runway for noise abatement and would be used unless there are significant operational constraints, such as incompatible wind conditions, requiring the Northeast configuration to be used at that time. In practice, Runway 4L will only be used for a very limited number of annualized night operations under the Proposed Action Alternative.

Through this process, the estimated arrival runway use by day and night operations was deduced for each bad weather day. This updated number of arrival operations by runway was compared to the number of arrival operations by runway present in the No Action Alternative. The difference between the two values represents the number of additional or reduced operations associated with that runway. These values were averaged across the seven bad weather days to yield a single value representing the mean increase, or reduction, in arrivals to each runway. This value was multiplied by the number of days, giving an estimate of the difference in annualized arrivals per runway.

The analysis showed that Runway 4L arrivals, during both day and night, increase due to the availability of the new IAP, while Runway 4R arrivals at night decrease due to those operations (some of which are delays from earlier in the day) now being able to use Runway 4L during the day. The number of daytime operations to Runway 4R are not expected to change because this runway is already operating under maximum capacity conditions during the bad weather days, so the operations associated with that runway are identical between both scenarios.

B.3.2 Proposed Action Flight Tracks, Profiles, and Use

The model for the Proposed Action utilizes the same methodology as the No Action Alternative for constructing representative backbones, sub-tracks, and operation loading. With the exception of operations that have changed due to the presence of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP arrival operations, the Proposed Action Alternative reuses the model data that was built to model the No Action Alternative. As described earlier, in the Proposed Action Alternative, eight new backbones were developed to model the changes associated with implementing the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP. Four of these backbones model traffic flying the new IAP via four different transitions, as follows and as summarized in Table B.5:

- NUNZO transition – flights begin the new IAP via the NUNZO fix to the southwest of the Airport and proceed along the charted procedure to Runway 4L. Operations on this backbone comprise 50% of all new arrivals to Runway 4L in the Proposed Action (179 annualized operations) and consist of jets only.
- Left downwind transition – flights begin the new IAP flying a left downwind approach from north of the Airport, similar to operations today, before transitioning into the final leg of the procedure between LVRON and MTAPN. This backbone contains 108 operations, evenly divided between jets and pistons/turboprops.
- Cape-area transition – flights begin the new IAP over the Plymouth area southeast of the Airport, and transition into the final leg of the procedure over LVRON. This backbone contains 54 piston and turboprop operations.

- WOONS transition – flights begin the new IAP via the WOONS fix located southwest of the Airport and proceed along the charted procedure to Runway 4L. This backbone contains 18 piston and turboprop operations.

The other four backbones model the paths of the 594 flights that previously flew the ILS RWY15R visual transition to Runway 4L approach and will now fly the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP. These flights enter the GSA in an identical fashion as today, but diverge before beginning the ILS 15R leg and transition into the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP. As these aircraft would generally be getting vectored to the new procedure, the arrival backbones were designed in consultation with A90 personnel to ensure that the design is reasonable relative to operational expectations.

With two specific differences, all other backbones (including those associated with helicopters) from the No Action Alternative otherwise retain the same number of operations and the time of day of those operations in the Proposed Action Alternative. The differences include the previously specified reduction of 104 Runway 4R arrivals and the increase of 255 Runway 9 departures as required to offset additional arrivals in this configuration.

The RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP specifies minimum altitude restrictions at coded waypoints. These altitude restrictions were implemented on the representative backbones as AEDT "at-or-above" control codes which instruct AEDT to model standard profile arrivals as long as the control code restrictions are met. All other backbones in the Proposed Action Alternative were modeled using standard profiles.

B.4 Sensitivity Analysis

While the estimate of the number of operations that will use the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP is based on actual weather conditions observed during the baseline timeframe, it is recognized that the number of hours where the Airport experiences IMC while in the Northeast configuration could exceed the estimate, primarily due to the variability of winter weather in the Boston area. Therefore, the FAA chose to carry out a sensitivity analysis to determine if a reasonable number of additional operations using the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP could potentially result in significant impacts.

This analysis was carried out by adding arrival operations to Runway 4L to the representative backbones for the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP. Each transition was weighted proportionally to its weighting in the Proposed Action, with the only change being the number of operations placed on each backbone. All other flights operate as they do in the Proposed Action. Table B.6 shows the number of operations modeled for each representative backbone comprising the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP in the Proposed Action and the Sensitivity Analysis.

Total Runway 4L arrivals	14,265	14,265
Source: Prepared by RoVolus, 2020.

The results of the Sensitivity Analysis showed that shifting traffic that currently flies visual approaches to Runway 4L to the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP does not result in significant impacts when compared to the No Action Alternative. Note that the scenario used in the Sensitivity Analysis reflects a very high usage of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP that is not anticipated to be reached in actual operations, even in the case of high advisory usage by flight crews flying visual approaches.

Table B.7 shows the maximum noise exposure change at any population centroid in the GSA associated with the Proposed Action and the Sensitivity Analysis. As shown in the table, the additional concentration of flight tracks onto the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP results in both larger DNL increases and decreases within the GSA. However, even with a very large allocation of flights using the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP, the maximum DNL increase seen at any population centroid is still less than the 3 dB increase required (at or above DNL 65 dB) to indicate a significant noise impact.

NUMBER OF MODELED OPERATIONS FOR EACH TRANSITION ON RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP

Scenario	Maximum DNL Increase (dB)	Maximum DNL Decrease (dB)
Proposed Action	+0.2	-0.1
Sensitivity Analysis	+2.2	-2.8
Source: Prepared by RoVolus, 2020.

The results of this Sensitivity Analysis confirm that implementation of the RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L IAP is unlikely to result in any significant impacts without regards to the number of days the Airport is both in IMC and using the Northeast configuration.

Reference: Section 106 Consultation Initiation for the Proposed RNAV (GPS) RWL 4L Approach Procedure at Boston Logan International Airport

Dear Mr. Galvin,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA). Therefore, the purpose of this letter is to initiate consultation under Section 106 and the ACHP's implementing regulations.[1] The FAA intends to satisfy Section 106's public involvement requirements in conjunction with the NEPA process.

1. Background Information.

Boston Logan International Airport (the Airport) is a large commercial service airport in Massachusetts, with approximately 340,000 takeoffs and landings in 2019. It is the primary passenger airport for southern New England as well as the region's busiest passenger service airport. Of the twelve runways available at the Airport, Runway 4L is the only runway that typically handles airline arrivals but does not have an Instrument Approach Procedure (IAP) available to assist landings. An IAP is a series of predetermined maneuvers for the orderly transfer of an aircraft under Instrument Flight Rules (IFR) from the beginning of the initial approach to a landing or to a point from which a landing may be made visually. IFR are rules and regulations established by the Federal Aviation Administration to govern flight under conditions in which flight by outside visual reference is not safe. When such conditions are present, these are known as Instrument Meteorological Conditions (IMC). IFR flight depends upon flying by reference to instruments in the flight deck, and navigation is accomplished by reference to electronic signals.

Currently, while operating in Visual Meteorological Conditions (VMC), aircraft approaching Runway 4L to land are expected to maintain visual separation from other traffic at all times. As these aircraft presently lack vertical and lateral guidance to the runway, pilots must "hand-fly" the aircraft when arriving to Runway 4L, leading to additional cockpit workload during a critical phase of flight. Additionally, the runway is not available during periods of IMC, so operational flexibility is significantly limited during these times. During periods of significant delay, flights can often land much later than originally scheduled, potentially impacting neighbors during late-night hours. Cancellation of flights during periods of significant delay is not uncommon.

The FAA is proposing the implementation of a publicly available (published) RNAV IAP to Runway 4L. The proposed RNAV procedure will provide lateral and vertical guidance, enabling continuous descent to the runway and offering a more predictable, consistent, and stabilized approach path, thus improving safety. The proposed procedure will be used during IMC conditions and during VMC conditions when advised by local air traffic control.

The proposed RNAV (GPS) procedure will provide a stabilized approach with vertical and lateral guidance. This will reduce cockpit workload and allow aircraft to land at RWY 4L in IMC, which will in turn reduce delays at the Airport and upstream through the NAS. The procedure will also allow for greater controller flexibility during VMC conditions. The proposed procedure is designated as an RNAV (GPS) IAP, which requires that an aircraft flying the procedure remain within one nautical mile of the procedure centerline 95% of the total flight time.

The General Study Area (GSA) for the FAA's NEPA review is delineated for purposes of identifying potential environmental impacts. The GSA, as depicted in Attachment A, encompasses an area of approximately 1,173 square miles around BOS across Middlesex, Norfolk, Plymouth, and Suffolk counties. The GSA was constructed to encompass the geographic area where an aircraft flight path could be affected as a result of the proposed procedure.

2. FAA's Proposed Approach to Defining the Area of Potential Effects

As part of the consultation process required under Section 106, the FAA seeks your input on its proposed approach to identifying the Area of Potential Effects (APE) for the undertaking.

The Section 106 regulations define the APE as "the geographical area or areas within which an undertaking may directly or indirectly cause alterations in the character or use of historic properties if any such properties exist. The Area of Potential Effects is influenced by the scale and nature of an undertaking and may be different for different kinds of effects caused by the undertaking."[2]

The Proposed Action will not cause any physical effects. However, pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(a)(2)(v), the FAA will also consider the potential for the undertaking to introduce visual, atmospheric, or audible elements that could diminish the integrity of a historic property's significant historic features. The FAA will make this assessment by comparing the expected flight tracks of aircraft flying the BOS 4L RNAV procedure to radar tracks of current arrivals at BOS. Based on this comparison, the FAA will determine whether there will new areas overflown by the Proposed Action, and specifically whether the undertaking has the potential to introduce new visual, atmospheric or audible elements. Any areas that will be introduced to new visual, atmospheric, or audible elements will be considered part of the APE.

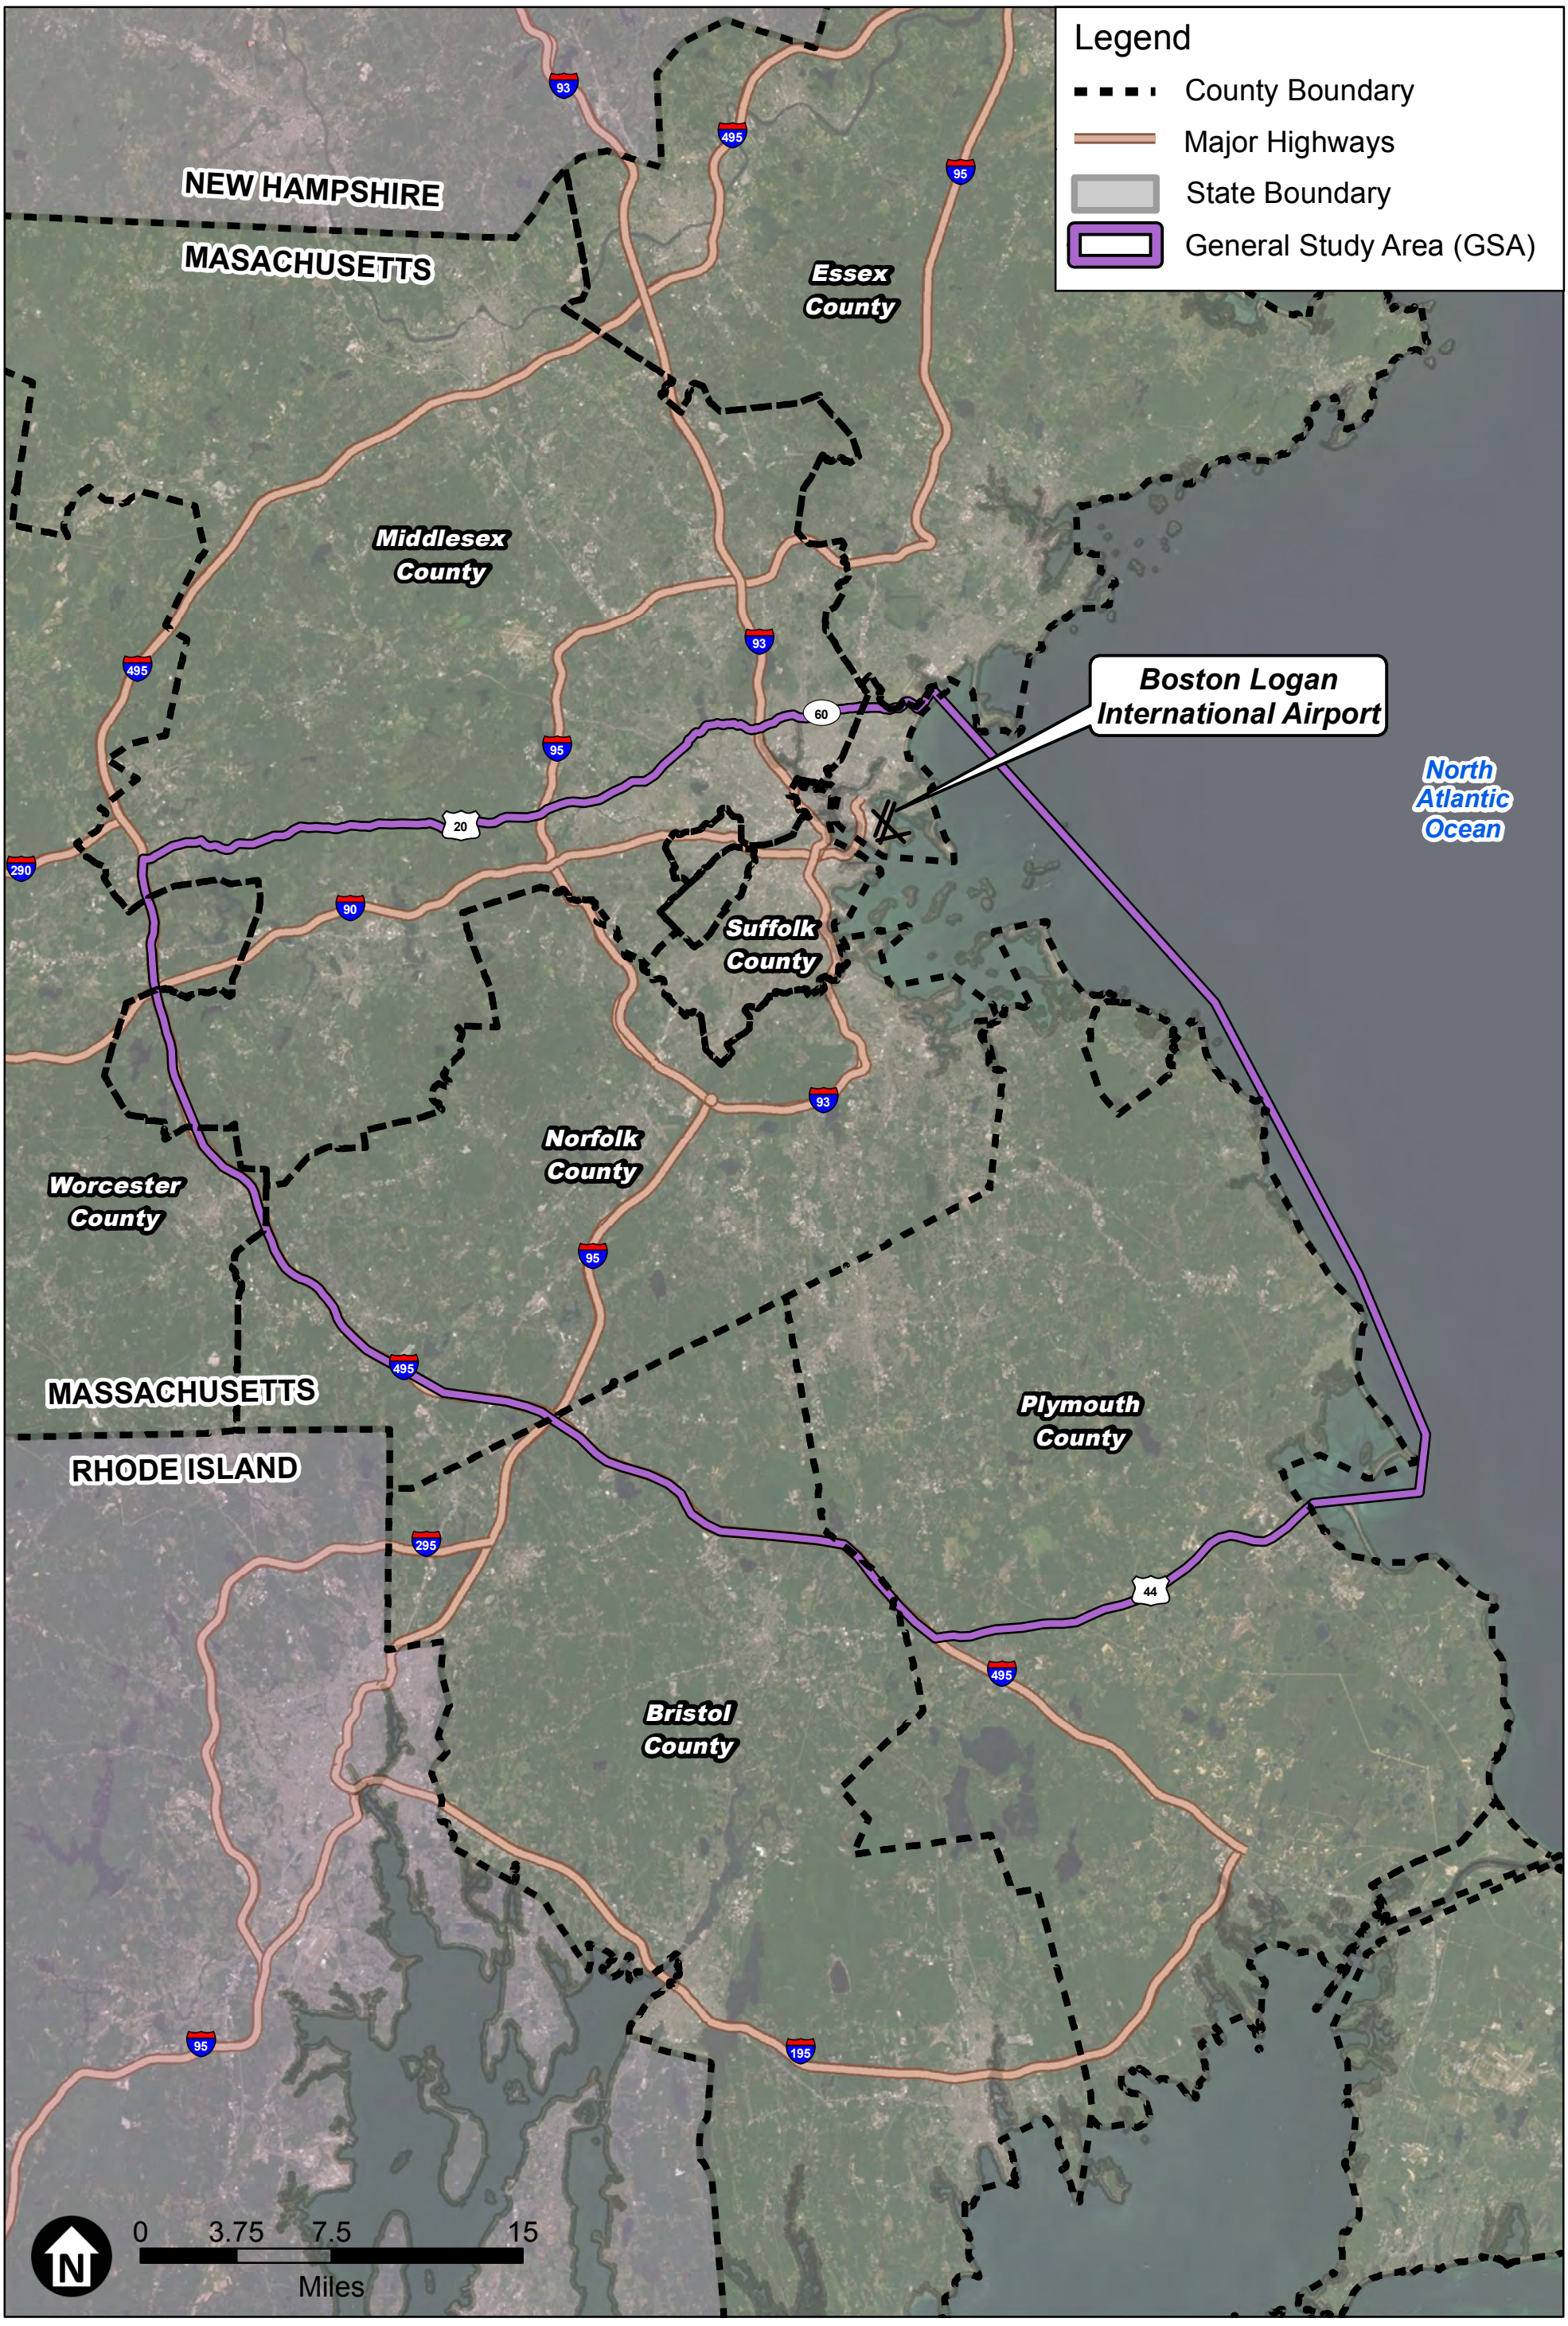
The FAA will also consider the potential for the undertaking to have noise effects that could alter the character or use of historic properties. The FAA is in the process of conducting a noise analysis to determine how this undertaking would affect current aircraft noise exposure levels. If the noise analysis indicates there will be any areas that will be subject to a reportable or significant noise increase, as defined in FAA Order 1050.1F, those areas will be considered part of the APE. The FAA invites the SHPO to provide feedback on this approach to determining the APE and assessing impact on historical properties.

3. Identification of Interested Parties



Once the FAA delineates the APE and identifies the resources within that APE, the FAA will invite local governments with jurisdiction over those resources to participate in consultation. Consistent with this effort and to ensure that all interested parties are reached during the outbreak of COVID-19, the FAA requests your assistance to identify other interested parties that should be invited to participate in consultation. An invitation of consultation does not mean that any resources will be necessarily identified as affected or impacted by the proposed procedure.

We look forward to hearing back from you and consulting with you on our approach to comply with Section 106 of the NHPA and in the identification of interested parties. If you have any initial comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact Veronda Johnson at (404)-305-5598, or at veronda.johnson@faa.gov.

RE: Logan Airport RNAV (GPS) RWL 4L Approach Procedures, Boston, MA; MHC# RC.68314

Dear Ms. Johnson:

Staff of the Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) have reviewed the information you submitted, received at this office on June 24, 2020, for the project referenced above and have the following comments.

The MHC understands that the Federal Aviation Administration is requesting comments on FAA's proposed approach for defining the area of potential effects (APE) of the RNAV RWL 4L Approach Procedures to Logan Airport (BOS). The FAA proposes to compare the expected flight tracks of the aircraft flying the BOS 4L RNAV procedure to radar tracks of current arrivals at BOS. Based on the comparison, the FAA will determine whether there will be new areas overflown by the Proposed Action, and specifically whether the undertaking has the potential to introduce new visual, atmospheric, or audible elements. Any areas that will be introduced to new visual, atmospheric, or audible (noise levels) elements will be considered part of the APE by FAA.

The MHC does not agree with the proposed approach to defining the area of potential effects (APE). The MHC notes that some areas currently impacted by current arrivals at BOS vary because pilots must "hand-fly" the aircraft when arriving at 4L. Once BOS 4L RNAV procedures are in place, the flight path will not vary as it currently does. The MHC requests that once the FAA has compared the expected flight tracks of the aircraft flying the BOS 4L RNAV procedure to radar tracks of the current arrivals, any areas that will be introduced to new levels of visual, atmospheric, or audible elements should be considered part of the APE by the FAA.

Please submit a map and description of the proposed APE, when available, to the MHC for review and comment (800.4 and 800.16(d)).

The MHC understands that the FAA is also requesting assistance in identifying interested parties. Please see below a list of potential interested parties:

All Local Historical Commissions of the cities and towns in the APE
All Regional Planning Commissions in the APE
AIR INC.	airportimpactreliefinc.org
Eagle Hill Civic Association	eaglehillcivic@gmail.com eaglehillcivic.org

Please note, this is not an all-inclusive list. Additional interested parties may be identified after the APE is determined.

These comments are offered to assist in compliance with Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 (36 CFR 800). Please do not hesitate to contact Elizabeth Sherva of my staff if you have any questions.

FAA to Host Virtual Public Workshops on Draft Environmental Assessment for a Proposed New Approach Procedure to Runway 4-Left at Boston Logan International Airport

Workshop participants will learn about the Draft Environmental Assessment and the proposed procedure and can ask questions of FAA air traffic control and environmental experts.

Residents may view the Draft Environmental Assessment and register to participate in the workshops at FAABostonWorkshops.com beginning Sept. 21, 2020. You do not have to register to participate. The FAA also will livestream the sessions on YouTube and Facebook. Residents who are not online can participate by calling 877-853-5247 or 888-788-0099 as the workshops begin.

Workshop Schedule

October 23, 2020 – 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.
October 28, 2020 – 6 to 7:30 p.m.

Residents who are not online can view electronic or paper copies of the Draft Environmental Assessment at certain public libraries in the study area including Dorchester, Mattapan, Roxbury, South Boston, South End, Brookline, Milton and Quincy. Please contact your library to access the document.

The FAA opened a 60-day public comment period on the Draft Environmental Assessment which runs from Sept. 21 to Nov.20, 2020. Residents may comment through the website, by email at FAABostonWorkshops@esassoc.com or through U.S. Mail at: Environmental Science Associates c\o Boston Logan RNAV (GPS) Approach EA, 4200 West Cypress St., Suite 450, Tampa, FL 33607

Reference: Section 106 Consultation Initiation for the Proposed RNAV (GPS) RWL 4L Approach Procedure at Boston Logan International Airport

Dear Mr. Galvin,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA). Therefore, the purpose of this letter is to initiate consultation under Section 106 and the ACHP's implementing regulations.[1] The FAA intends to satisfy Section 106's public involvement requirements in conjunction with the NEPA process.

1. Background Information.

Boston Logan International Airport (the Airport) is a large commercial service airport in Massachusetts, with approximately 340,000 takeoffs and landings in 2019. It is the primary passenger airport for southern New England as well as the region's busiest passenger service airport. Of the twelve runways available at the Airport, Runway 4L is the only runway that typically handles airline arrivals but does not have an Instrument Approach Procedure (IAP) available to assist landings. An IAP is a series of predetermined maneuvers for the orderly transfer of an aircraft under Instrument Flight Rules (IFR) from the beginning of the initial approach to a landing or to a point from which a landing may be made visually. IFR are rules and regulations established by the Federal Aviation Administration to govern flight under conditions in which flight by outside visual reference is not safe. When such conditions are present, these are known as Instrument Meteorological Conditions (IMC). IFR flight depends upon flying by reference to instruments in the flight deck, and navigation is accomplished by reference to electronic signals.

Currently, while operating in Visual Meteorological Conditions (VMC), aircraft approaching Runway 4L to land are expected to maintain visual separation from other traffic at all times. As these aircraft presently lack vertical and lateral guidance to the runway, pilots must "hand-fly" the aircraft when arriving to Runway 4L, leading to additional cockpit workload during a critical phase of flight. Additionally, the runway is not available during periods of IMC, so operational flexibility is significantly limited during these times. During periods of significant delay, flights can often land much later than originally scheduled, potentially impacting neighbors during late-night hours. Cancellation of flights during periods of significant delay is not uncommon.

The FAA is proposing the implementation of a publicly available (published) RNAV IAP to Runway 4L. The proposed RNAV procedure will provide lateral and vertical guidance, enabling continuous descent to the runway and offering a more predictable, consistent, and stabilized approach path, thus improving safety. The proposed procedure will be used during IMC conditions and during VMC conditions when advised by local air traffic control.

The proposed RNAV (GPS) procedure will provide a stabilized approach with vertical and lateral guidance. This will reduce cockpit workload and allow aircraft to land at RWY 4L in IMC, which will in turn reduce delays at the Airport and upstream through the NAS. The procedure will also allow for greater controller flexibility during VMC conditions. The proposed procedure is designated as an RNAV (GPS) IAP, which requires that an aircraft flying the procedure remain within one nautical mile of the procedure centerline 95% of the total flight time.

The General Study Area (GSA) for the FAA's NEPA review is delineated for purposes of identifying potential environmental impacts. The GSA, as depicted in Attachment A, encompasses an area of approximately 1,173 square miles around BOS across Middlesex, Norfolk, Plymouth, and Suffolk counties. The GSA was constructed to encompass the geographic area where an aircraft flight path could be affected as a result of the proposed procedure.

2. FAA's Proposed Approach to Defining the Area of Potential Effects

As part of the consultation process required under Section 106, the FAA seeks your input on its proposed approach to identifying the Area of Potential Effects (APE) for the undertaking.

The Section 106 regulations define the APE as "the geographical area or areas within which an undertaking may directly or indirectly cause alterations in the character or use of historic properties if any such properties exist. The Area of Potential Effects is influenced by the scale and nature of an undertaking and may be different for different kinds of effects caused by the undertaking."[2]

The Proposed Action will not cause any physical effects. However, pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(a)(2)(v), the FAA will also consider the potential for the undertaking to introduce visual, atmospheric, or audible elements that could diminish the integrity of a historic property's significant historic features. The FAA will make this assessment by comparing the expected flight tracks of aircraft flying the BOS 4L RNAV procedure to radar tracks of current arrivals at BOS. Based on this comparison, the FAA will determine whether there will new areas overflown by the Proposed Action, and specifically whether the undertaking has the potential to introduce new visual, atmospheric or audible elements. Any areas that will be introduced to new visual, atmospheric, or audible elements will be considered part of the APE.

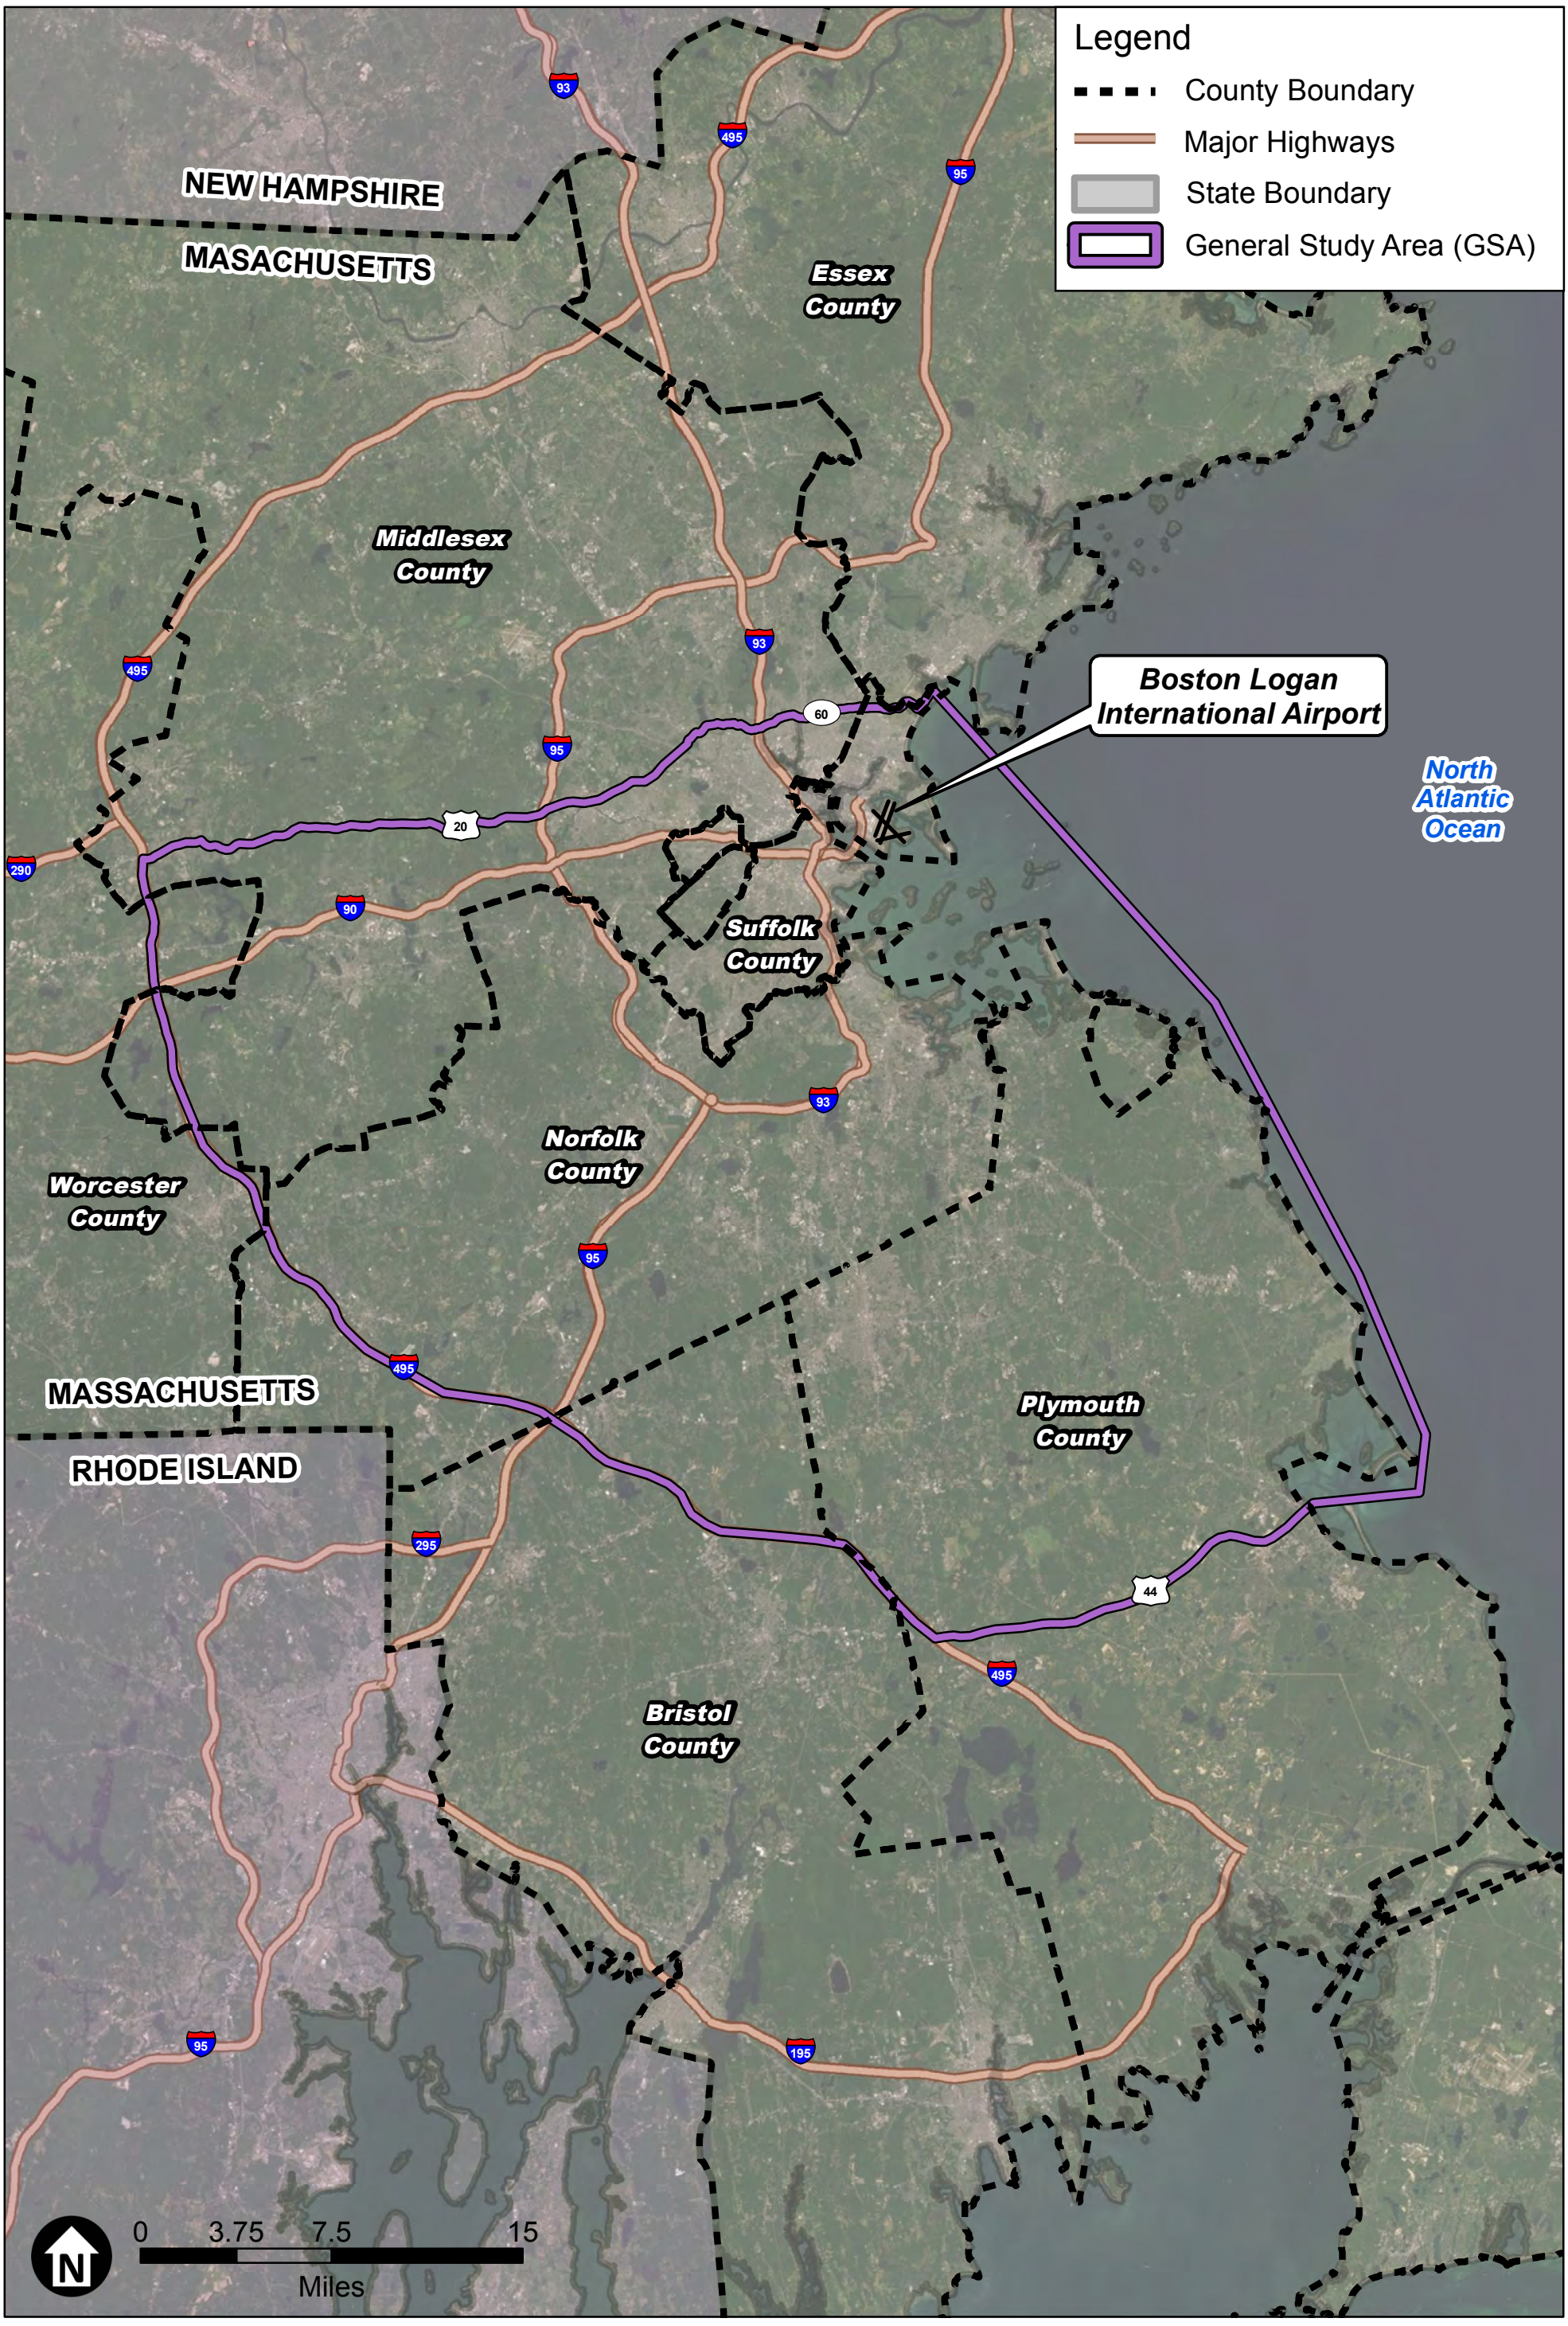
The FAA will also consider the potential for the undertaking to have noise effects that could alter the character or use of historic properties. The FAA is in the process of conducting a noise analysis to determine how this undertaking would affect current aircraft noise exposure levels. If the noise analysis indicates there will be any areas that will be subject to a reportable or significant noise increase, as defined in FAA Order 1050.1F, those areas will be considered part of the APE. The FAA invites the SHPO to provide feedback on this approach to determining the APE and assessing impact on historical properties.

3. Identification of Interested Parties



Once the FAA delineates the APE and identifies the resources within that APE, the FAA will invite local governments with jurisdiction over those resources to participate in consultation. Consistent with this effort and to ensure that all interested parties are reached during the outbreak of COVID-19, the FAA requests your assistance to identify other interested parties that should be invited to participate in consultation. An invitation of consultation does not mean that any resources will be necessarily identified as affected or impacted by the proposed procedure.

We look forward to hearing back from you and consulting with you on our approach to comply with Section 106 of the NHPA and in the identification of interested parties. If you have any initial comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact Veronda Johnson at (404)-305-5598, or at veronda.johnson@faa.gov.

RE: Logan Airport RNAV (GPS) RWL 4L Approach Procedures, Boston, MA; MHC# RC.68314

Dear Ms. Johnson:

Staff of the Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) have reviewed the information you submitted, received at this office on June 24, 2020, for the project referenced above and have the following comments.

The MHC understands that the Federal Aviation Administration is requesting comments on FAA's proposed approach for defining the area of potential effects (APE) of the RNAV RWL 4L Approach Procedures to Logan Airport (BOS). The FAA proposes to compare the expected flight tracks of the aircraft flying the BOS 4L RNAV procedure to radar tracks of current arrivals at BOS. Based on the comparison, the FAA will determine whether there will be new areas overflown by the Proposed Action, and specifically whether the undertaking has the potential to introduce new visual, atmospheric, or audible elements. Any areas that will be introduced to new visual, atmospheric, or audible (noise levels) elements will be considered part of the APE by FAA.

The MHC does not agree with the proposed approach to defining the area of potential effects (APE). The MHC notes that some areas currently impacted by current arrivals at BOS vary because pilots must "hand-fly" the aircraft when arriving at 4L. Once BOS 4L RNAV procedures are in place, the flight path will not vary as it currently does. The MHC requests that once the FAA has compared the expected flight tracks of the aircraft flying the BOS 4L RNAV procedure to radar tracks of the current arrivals, any areas that will be introduced to new levels of visual, atmospheric, or audible elements should be considered part of the APE by the FAA.

Please submit a map and description of the proposed APE, when available, to the MHC for review and comment (800.4 and 800.16(d)).

The MHC understands that the FAA is also requesting assistance in identifying interested parties. Please see below a list of potential interested parties:

All Local Historical Commissions of the cities and towns in the APE
All Regional Planning Commissions in the APE
AIR INC.	airportimpactreliefinc.org
Eagle Hill Civic Association	eaglehillcivic@gmail.com eaglehillcivic.org
Fair Skies Nation	info@fairskiesnation.com fairskiesnation.com

Please note, this is not an all-inclusive list. Additional interested parties may be identified after the APE is determined.

These comments are offered to assist in compliance with Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 (36 CFR 800). Please do not hesitate to contact Elizabeth Sherva of my staff if you have any questions.

Reference: Section 106 Consultation for the Proposed RNAV (GPS) RWL 4L Approach Procedure at Boston Logan International Airport

Dear Ms. Simon

Thank you for your July 24, 2020 comments on our initial June 24, 2020 consultation letter concerning the proposed approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport. In response to your comments, we have modified our approach with respect to the review of historic resources in the General Study Area and in our delineation of an Area of Potential Effects (APE). We request your review of the modified approach for defining the APE proposed below. Background information about the undertaking is repeated in this letter to make your review of the updated approach easier.

1. Background Information.

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Boston Logan International Airport (the Airport) is a large commercial service airport in Massachusetts, with approximately 427,000 takeoffs and landings in 2019, which includes domestic, international, and general aviation activity. It is the primary passenger airport for southern New England as well as the region's busiest passenger service airport. Of the twelve runways available at the Airport, Runway 4L is the only runway that typically handles airline arrivals but does not have an Instrument Approach Procedure (IAP) available to assist landings. An IAP is a series of predetermined maneuvers for the orderly transfer of an aircraft under Instrument Flight Rules (IFR) from the beginning of the initial approach to a landing or to a point from which a landing may be made visually. IFR are rules and regulations established by the Federal Aviation Administration to govern flight under conditions in which flight by outside visual reference is not safe. When such conditions are present, these are known as Instrument Meteorological Conditions (IMC). IFR flight depends upon flying by reference to instruments in the flight deck, and navigation is accomplished by reference to electronic signals.

Currently, while operating in Visual Meteorological Conditions (VMC), aircraft approaching Runway 4L to land are expected to maintain visual separation from other traffic at all times. As these aircraft presently lack vertical and lateral guidance to the runway, pilots must "hand-fly" the aircraft when arriving to Runway 4L, leading to additional cockpit workload during a critical phase of flight. Additionally, the runway is not available during periods of IMC, so operational flexibility is significantly limited during these times. During periods of significant delay, flights can often land much later than originally scheduled, potentially impacting neighbors during late-night hours. Cancellation of flights during periods of significant delay is not uncommon.

The FAA is proposing the implementation of a publicly available (published) RNAV IAP to Runway 4L. The proposed RNAV procedure will provide lateral and vertical guidance, enabling continuous descent to the runway and offering a more predictable, consistent, and stabilized approach path, thus improving safety. The proposed procedure will be used during IMC conditions and during VMC conditions when advised by local air traffic control.

The proposed RNAV (GPS) procedure will provide a stabilized approach with vertical and lateral guidance. This will reduce cockpit workload and allow aircraft to land at RWY 4L in IMC, which will in turn reduce delays at the Airport and upstream through the NAS. The procedure will also allow for greater controller flexibility during VMC conditions. The proposed procedure is designated as an RNAV (GPS) IAP, which requires that an aircraft flying the procedure remain within one nautical mile of the procedure centerline 95% of the total flight time. As explained in the noise analysis prepared for the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment, the FAA only expects the new procedure to be used by approximately 359 operations per year. The Draft Environmental Assessment, which includes the FAA's noise analysis, is available on the following website: https://faabostonworkshops.com/. The FAA is currently accepting comments on the Draft Environmental Assessment through November 20, 2020.

The General Study Area (GSA) for the FAA's NEPA review is delineated for purposes of identifying potential environmental impacts. The GSA, as depicted in Attachment A, encompasses an area of approximately 1,173 square miles around BOS across Middlesex, Norfolk, Plymouth, and Suffolk counties. The GSA was conservatively constructed to encompass the geographic area where an aircraft flight path could be affected as a result of the proposed procedure.

2. FAA's Proposed Area of Potential Effects

As part of the consultation process required under Section 106, the FAA seeks your input on the proposed APE identified in this document for the undertaking. The Section 106 regulations define the APE as "the geographical area or areas within which an undertaking may directly or indirectly cause alterations in the character or use of historic properties if any such properties exist. The Area of Potential Effects is influenced by the scale and nature of an undertaking and may be different for different kinds of effects caused by the undertaking."[1]

The Proposed Action will not cause any physical effects to historic properties. Therefore, the FAA is developing a proposed APE based on consideration of where noise and visual impacts from the undertaking are expected to occur.[2] Specifically, the FAA considered the potential for noise or visual impacts that could alter the character or use of historic properties and the introduction of visual, atmospheric or audible elements that could diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features.

An analysis was first conducted to identify areas where any historic property that might be present could be affected by the introduction of visual or audible elements from aircraft overflights. Notably, the FAA has determined the Proposed Action will not cause the introduction of new overflights, as aircraft flying the Proposed Action will all fly over areas that are currently overflown by arrivals to BOS.

Next, the FAA considered the projected increase in the number or concentration of overflights over particular areas to assess the potential for an incremental change in noise levels and visual impacts to alter the character or use of historic properties. The Proposed Action was used to generate two dimensional blocks covering all areas of potential change in overflights separated by the waypoints of the Proposed Action. These blocks are shown in reference to the Proposed Action in Attachment B. These blocks were then compared to an entire year of overflight data within the GSA as well as estimated usage of the Proposed Action and used to generate overflight data for each block for the No Action and Proposed Alternatives. Attachment C shows the year of overflight data in reference to the Proposed Action and these blocks. The radar data shows that the airspace around the Airport is already extremely dense with overflights, with over 427,000 annual operations in 2019.

Table 2.1 of the Draft Environmental Assessment summarizes the number of overflights for each block in the No Action and Proposed Action Alternatives. Based primarily on the overall increase in overflights and filtered by the percent increase in overflights and minimum aircraft altitude, the FAA is proposing to select the APE based on the following blocks: BLOCK3, NUNZO2, BLOCK2, BLOCK1, and NUNZO1. In each of these blocks, the percentage increase in overflights was greater than 0.4% and adding more than 100 overflights annually at a minimum altitude of 4,000 feet or less for the Proposed Action within each block.

[2] As part of its review under the National Environmental Policy Act, the FAA conducted a noise modeling analysis to determine how this proposed action would affect current aircraft noise exposure levels in the General Study Area. This analysis indicated that the action would not result in any noise increase that would be "significant" under FAA policy, which defines the threshold of significance as an increase in the Day-Night Average Sound Level (DNL) of 1.5 dB or more for a noise sensitive area that is exposed to noise at or above the DNL 65 dB noise exposure level, or that will be exposed at or above the DNL 65 dB level due to a DNL 1.5 dB or greater increase. However, FAA policy recognizes that this threshold of significance may not be relevant to certain historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute. FAA Order 1050.1F, Environmental Impacts: Policies and Procedures, Exhibit 4-1.

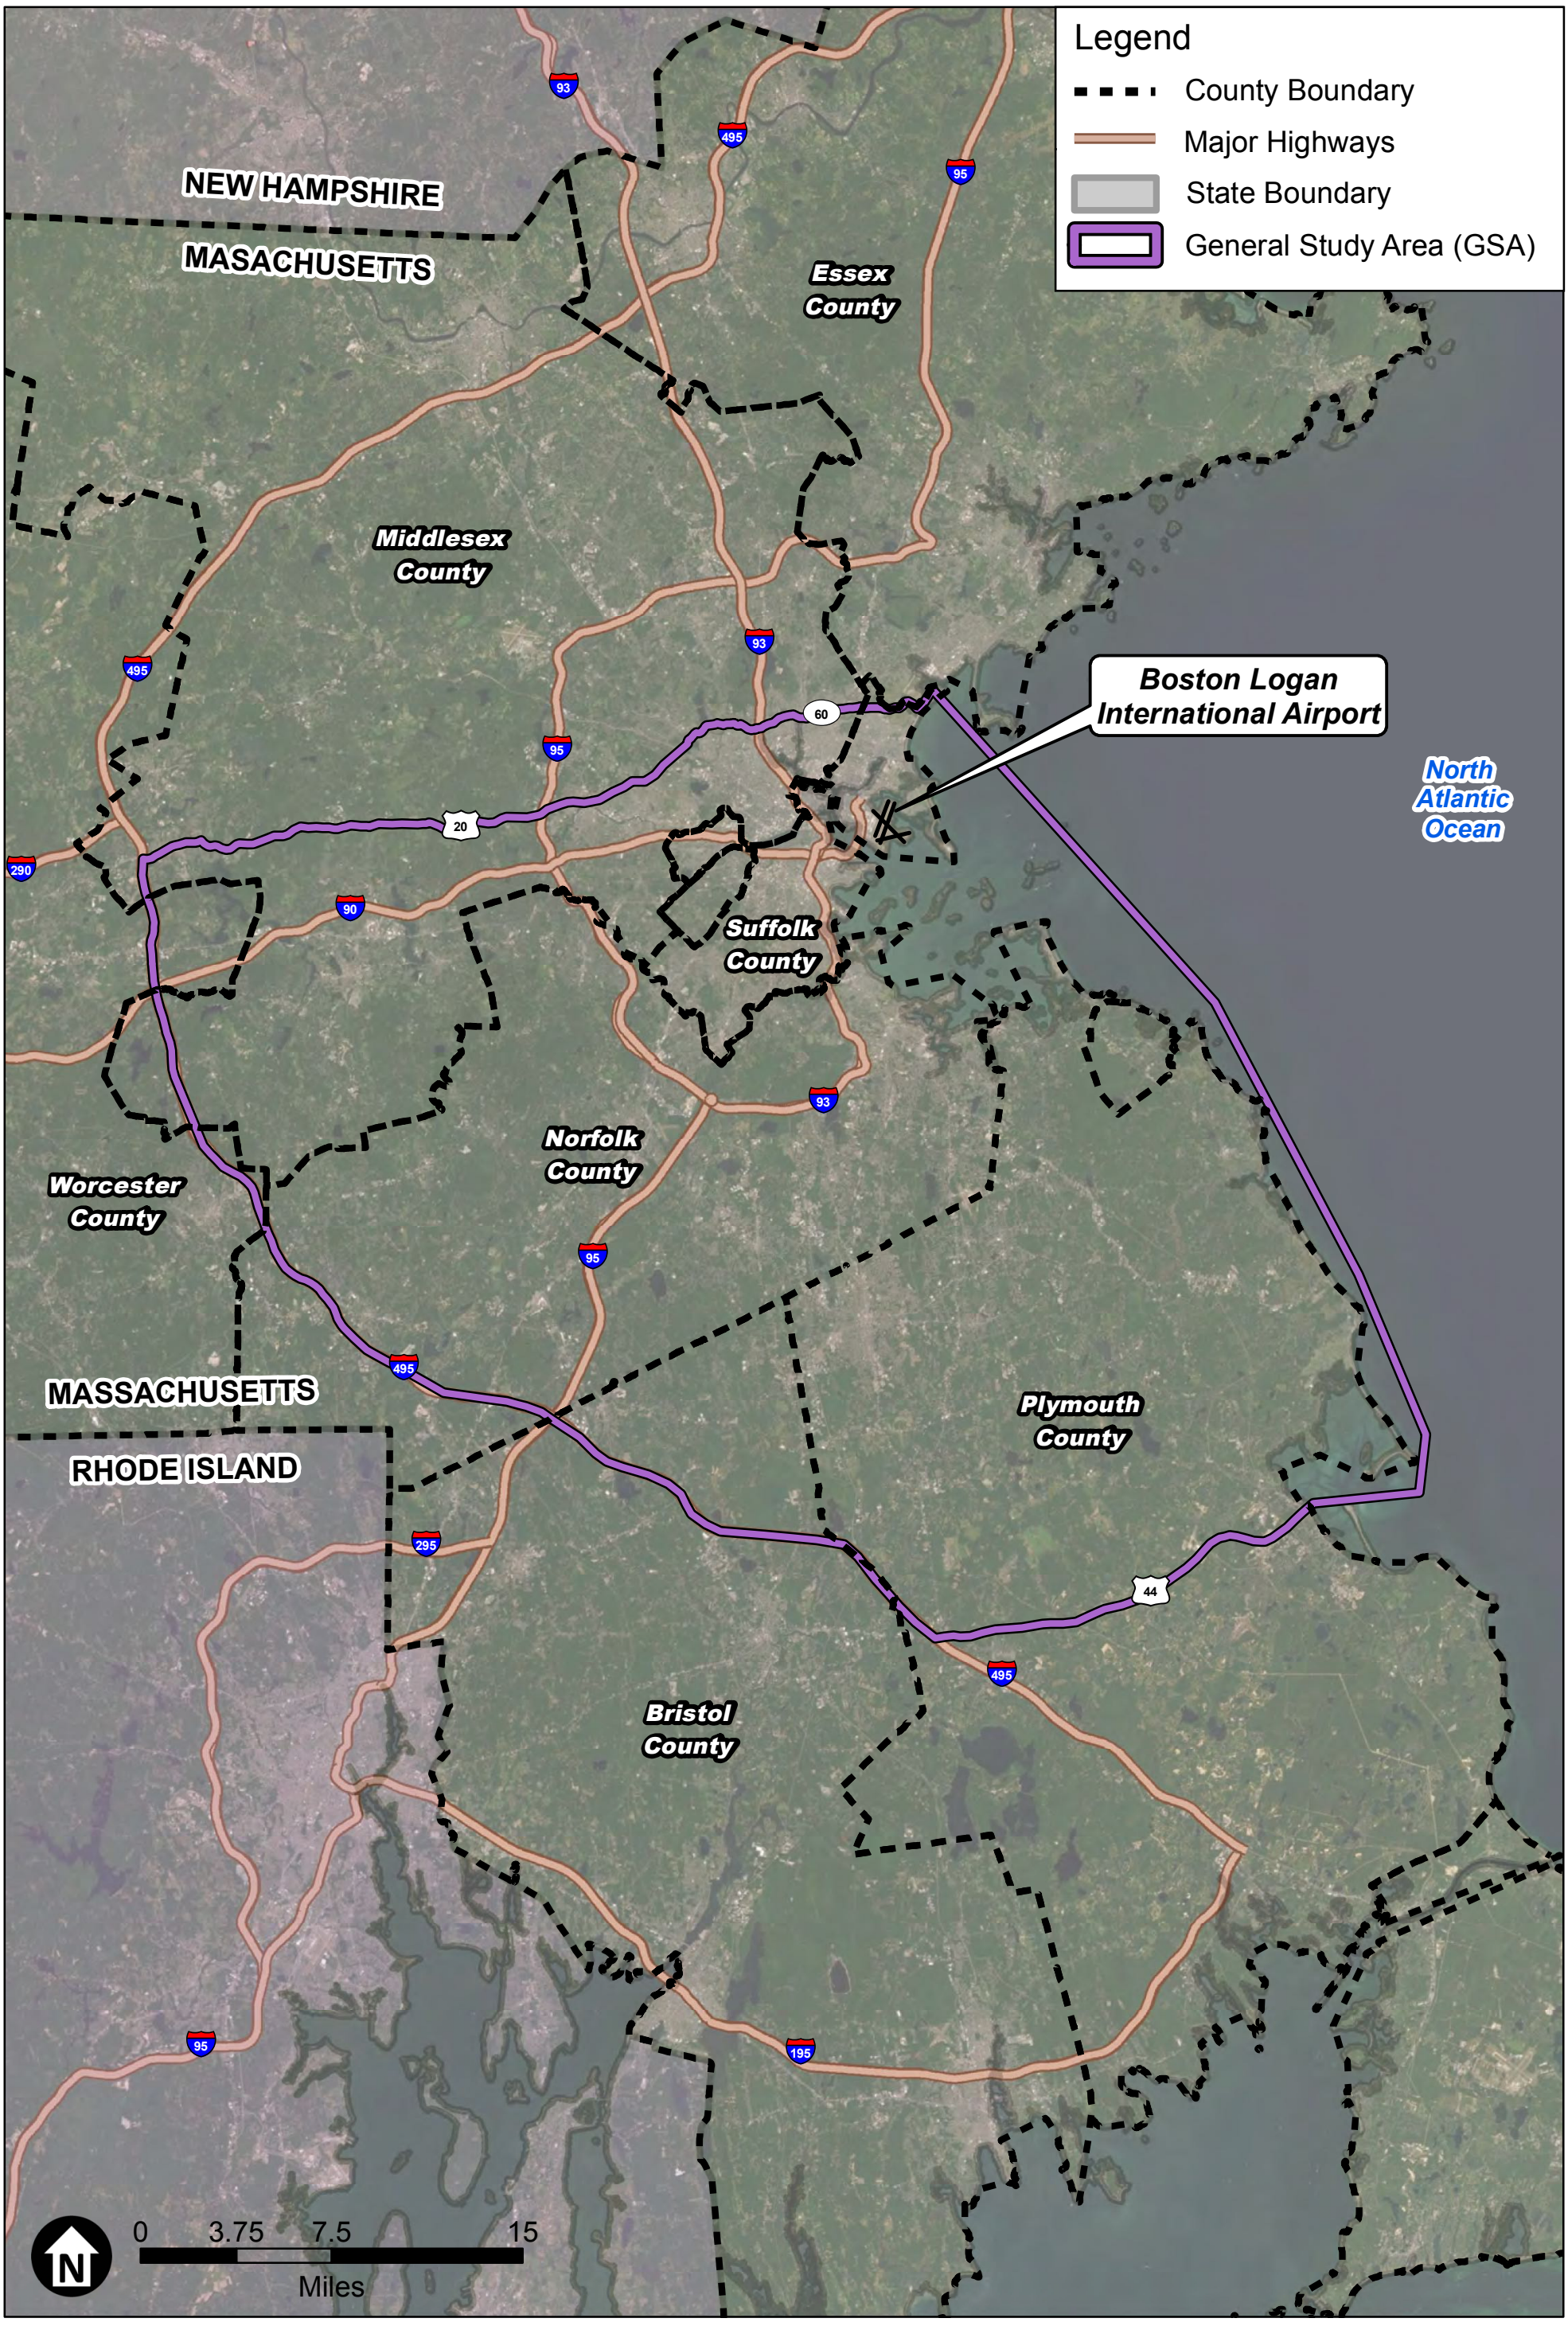
3. FAA's Initial Identification of Historic Properties and Assessment of Effects

The National Register of Historic Places, the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of previously identified historic properties within the GSA. Approximately 4,202 of these resources are within the proposed APE. As noted above, the Proposed Action would not physically affect or alter any historic properties or other cultural resources. The Proposed Action also would not introduce aircraft overflights to resources that are not already overflown by aircraft. However, the FAA is considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute. Therefore, we are asking your assistance in identifying any historic properties within the proposed APE that might meet these criteria. In our experience, these may include isolated properties where a cultural landscape is part of the property's significance, rural historic districts, outdoor spaces designed for meditation or contemplation and certain traditional cultural properties in continuous use. The FAA looks forward to further consultation with your office to discuss whether the undertaking could affect any such historic properties within the APE.



4. Additional Consultation

The FAA has noted the list of historical commissions, regional planning commissions, and other organizations provided in your previous letter. Once the MHC concurs with the proposed APE, the FAA will reach out to each of these organizations.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed Area of Potential Effects and consulting with you to identify historic resources that could be affected by this undertaking. Following your review, we would appreciate having a conference call to receive your feedback and also to discuss next steps. If you have any additional comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact me at (404)-305-5598, or at veronda.johnson@faa.gov.

Reference: Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA (MHC# RC.68314)

Dear Ms. Simon

Thank you for your December 8, 2020 concurrence with our Area of Potential Effects (APE) for the proposed approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). As described in our earlier correspondence, this procedure is needed to enhance the safety of operations at BOS. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA is also sharing this proposed finding with all other consulting parties.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

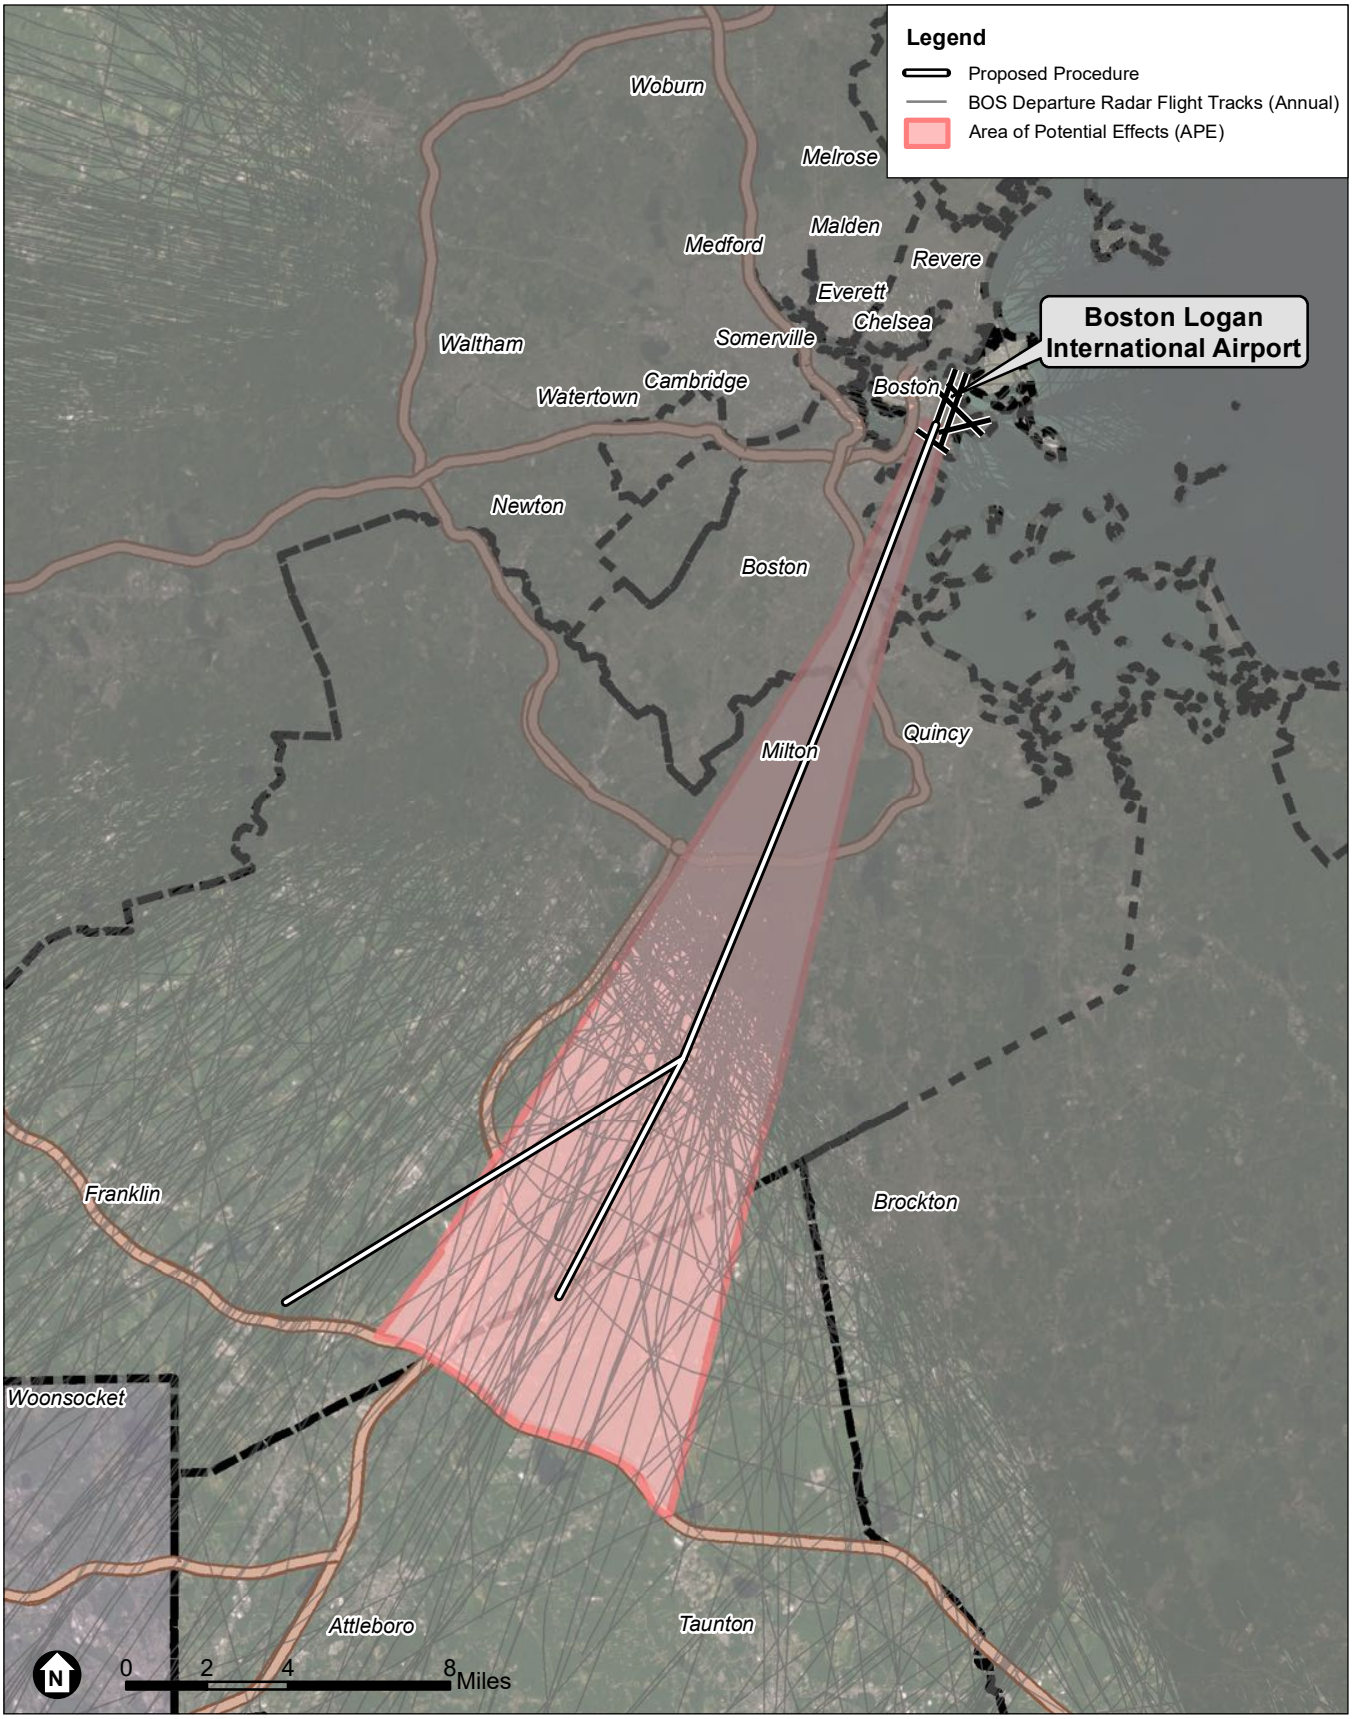
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

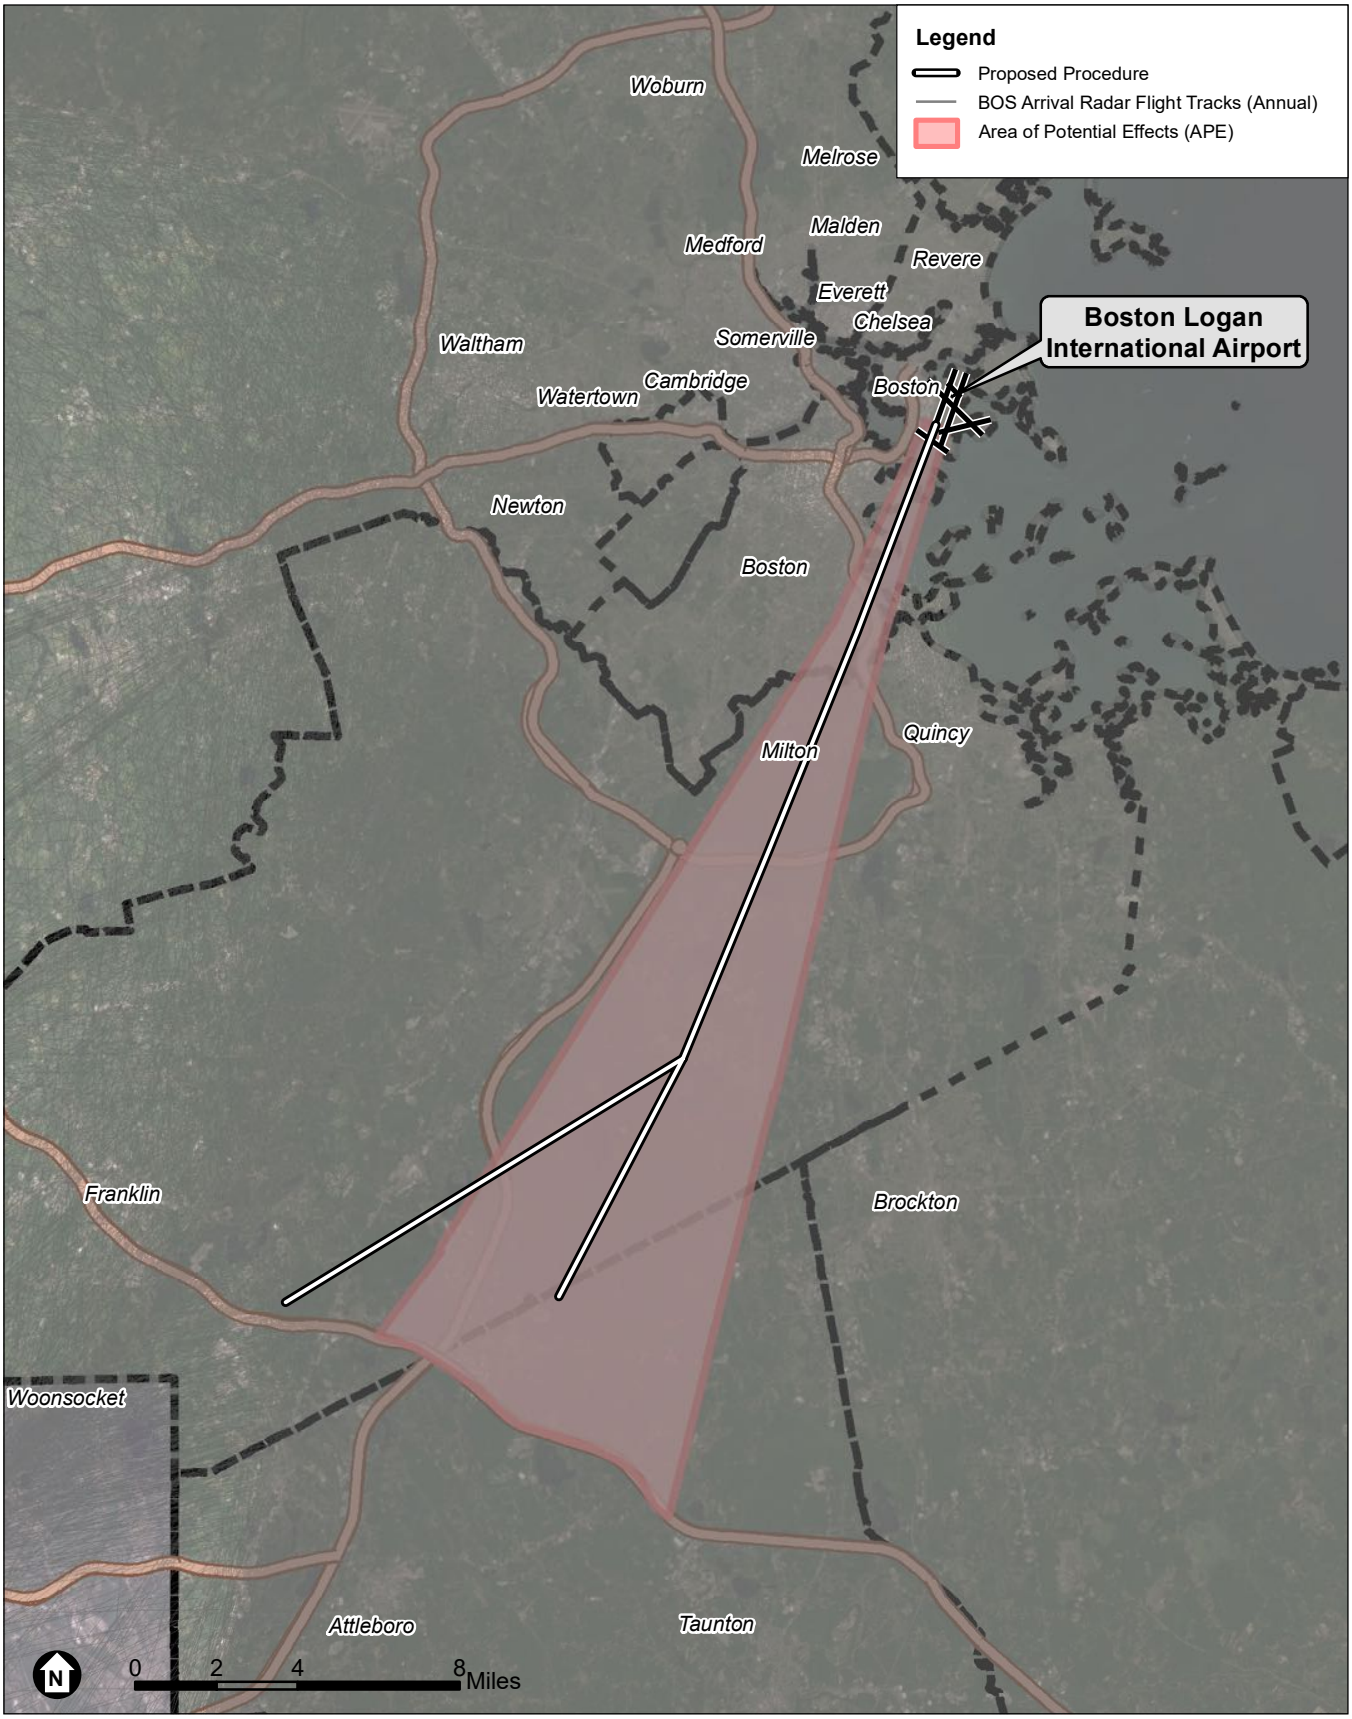


When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Action

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of the properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Action. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.



For more information on the analyses performed as a part of the Draft EA, please visit www.faabostonworkshops.com for a copy of the Draft EA. More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is proposing a Finding of No Adverse Effect for this undertaking. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

The FAA has noted the list of historical commissions, regional planning commissions, and other organizations provided in your previous letter. The FAA is currently reaching out to these groups as consulting parties. If this determination is modified or updated due to that consultation, a new correspondence will be sent to the MHC.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. If you have any questions or concerns, we would be happy to have a conference call to receive your feedback and also to discuss any next steps. If you have any additional comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact me at (404)-305-5598, or at veronda.johnson@faa.gov.

Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

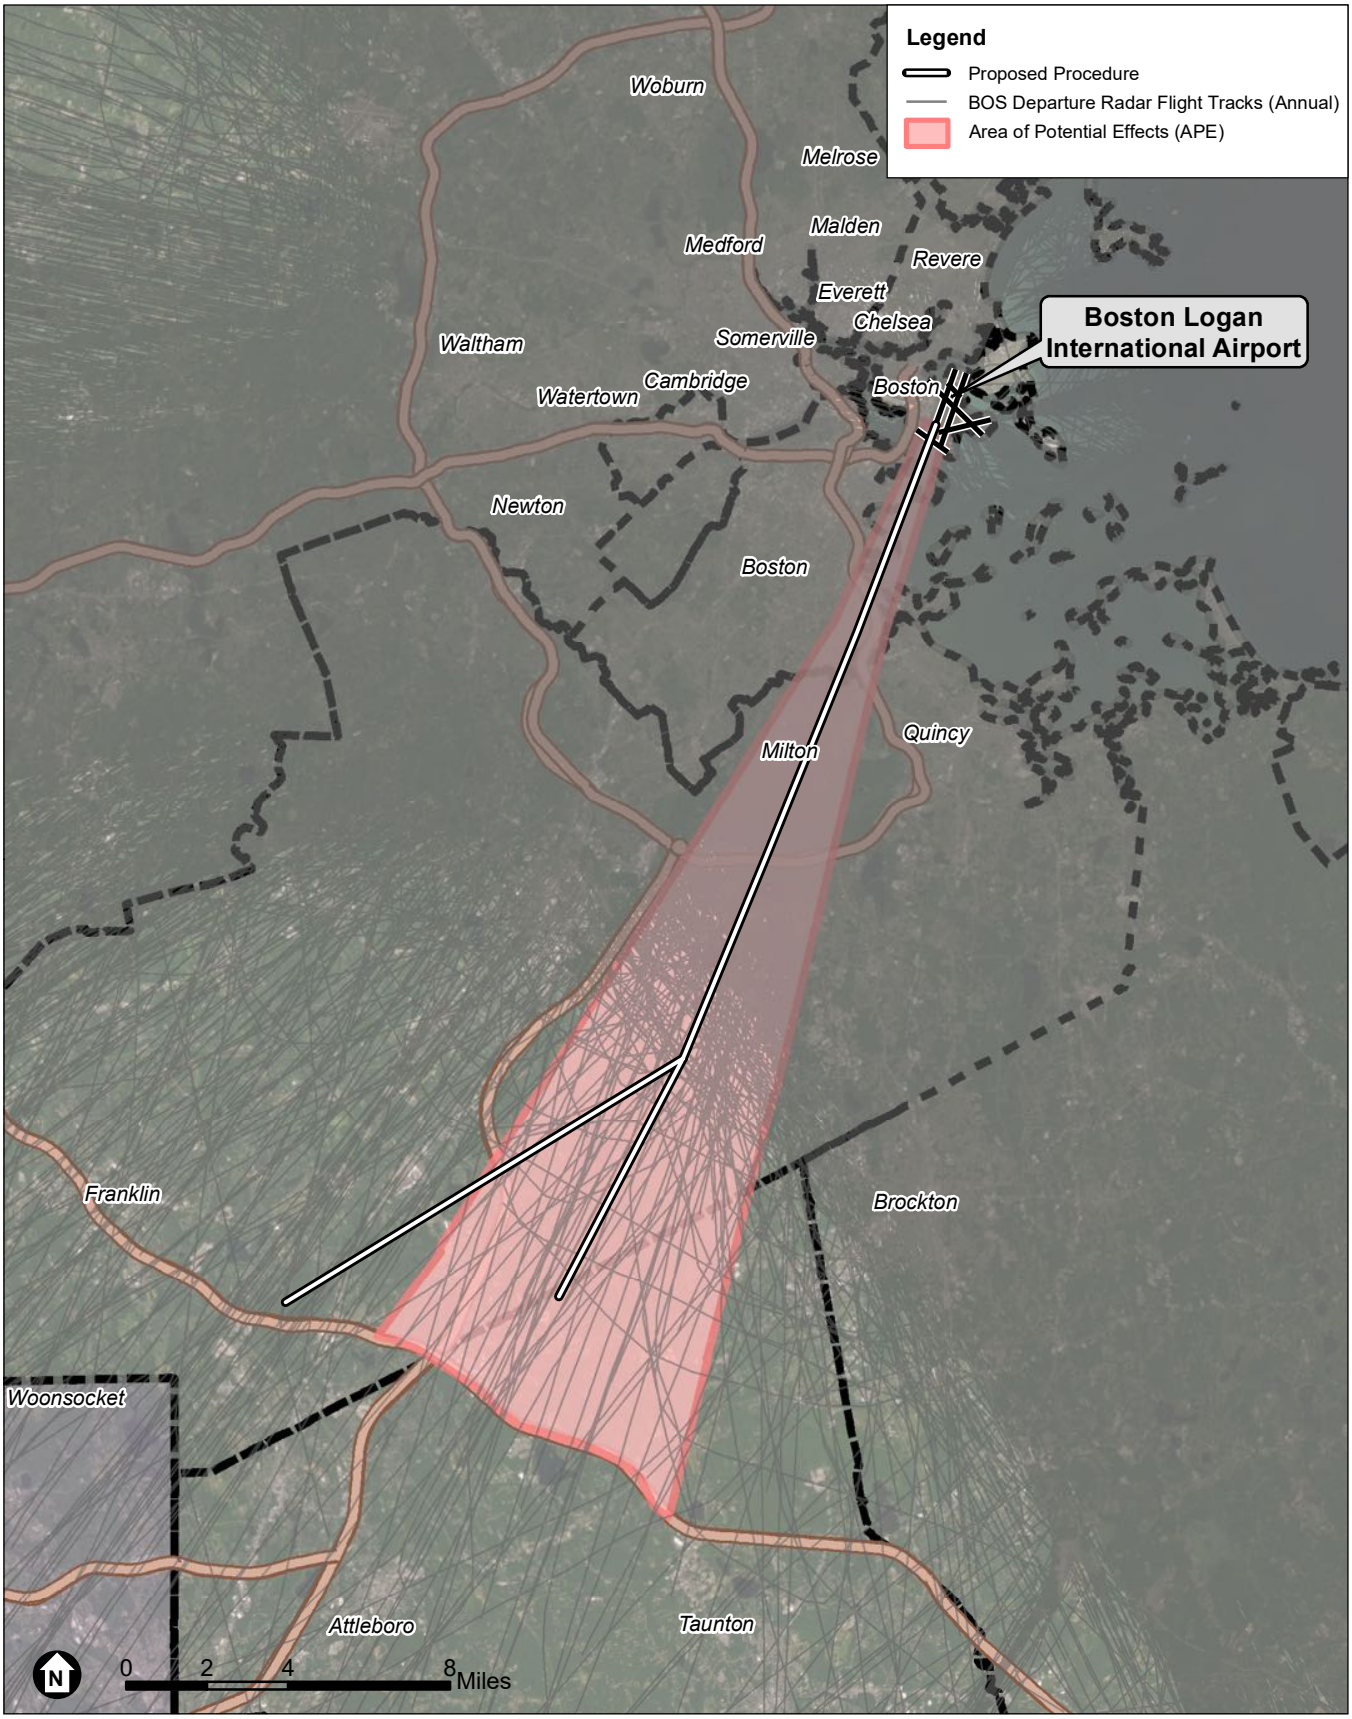
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.



When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

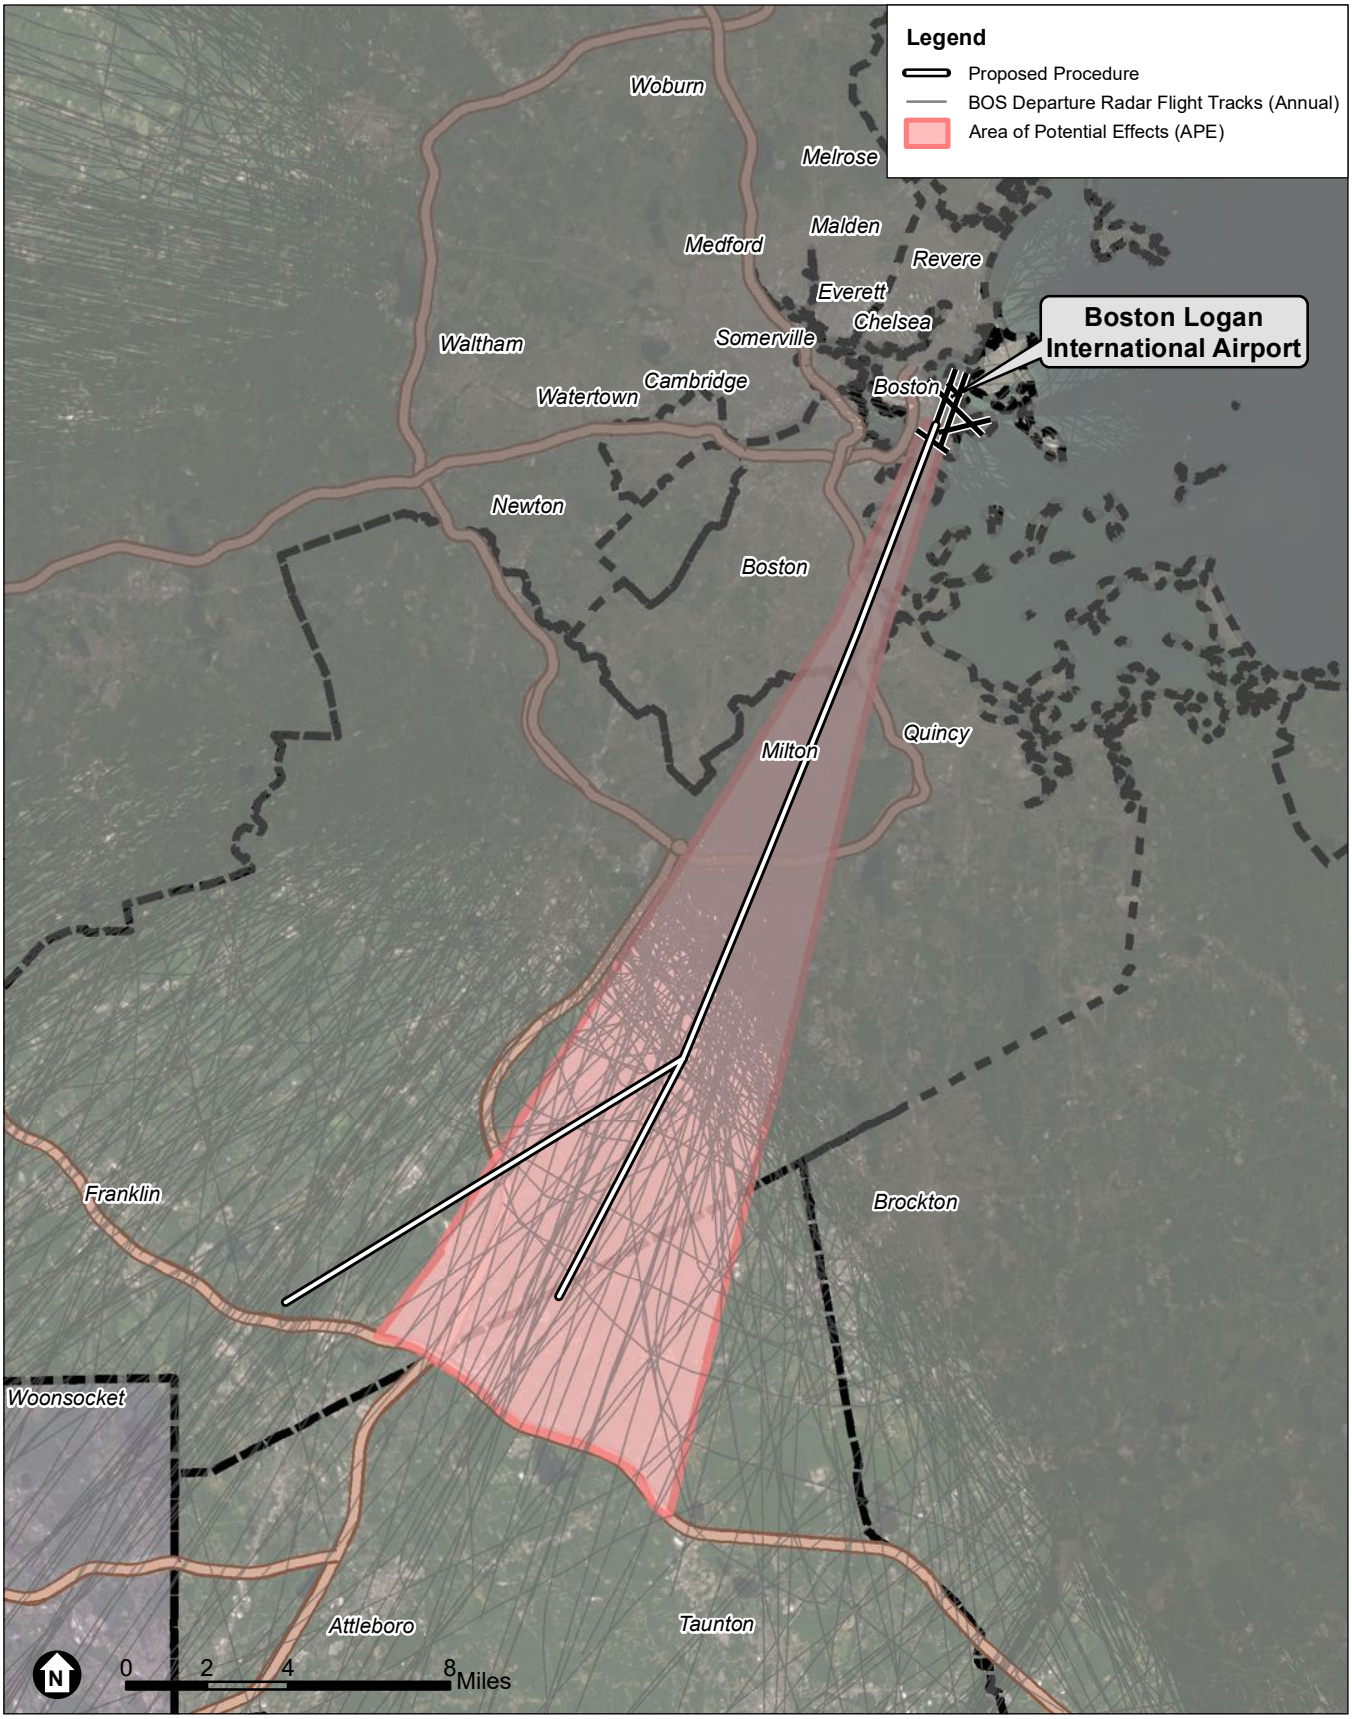
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

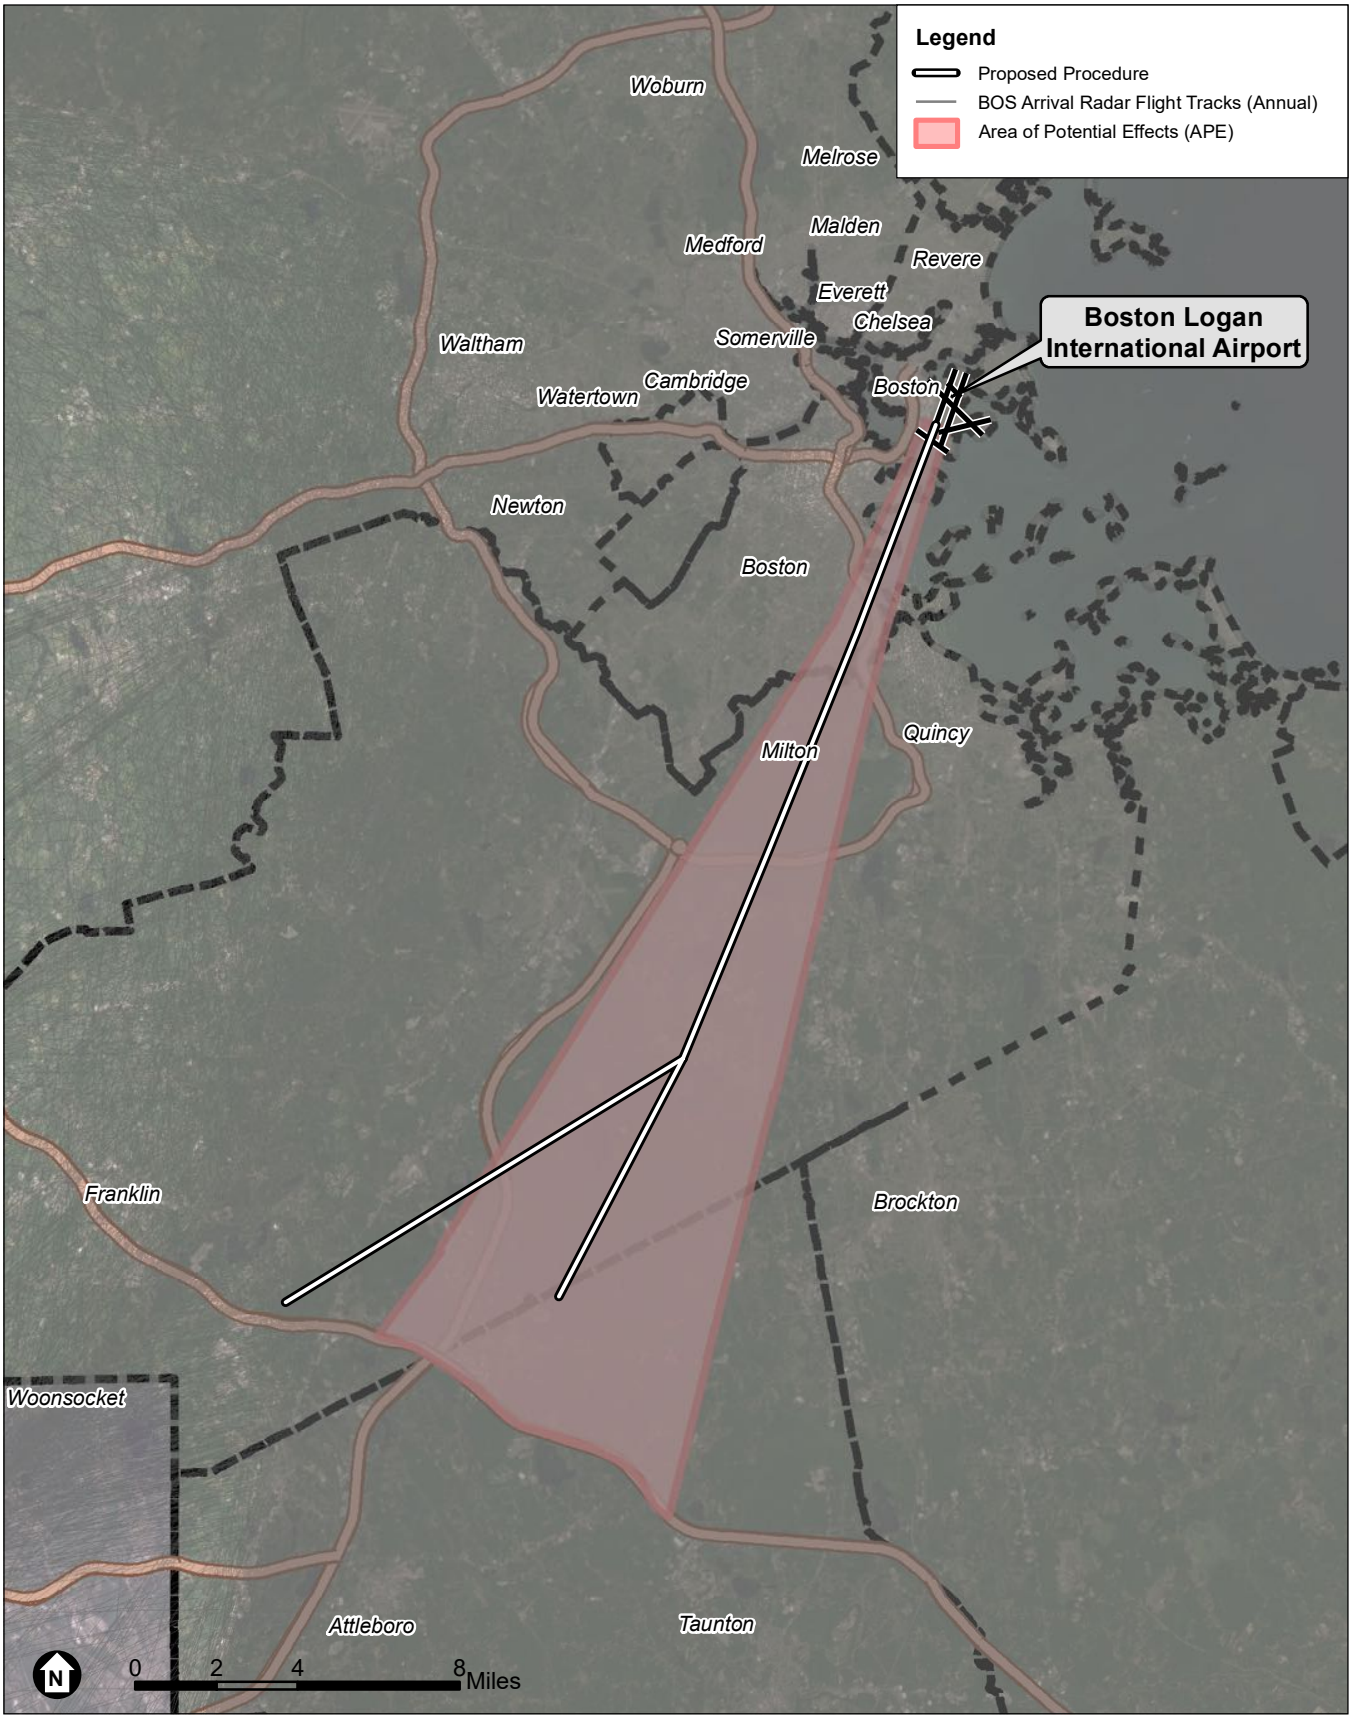


When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.



For more information on the analyses performed as a part of the Draft EA, please visit www.faabostonworkshops.com for a copy of the Draft EA. More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Area of Potential Effects and Arrival Radar Flight Tracks

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. If you have any additional comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact me at veronda.johnson@faa.gov or at the address below.

Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

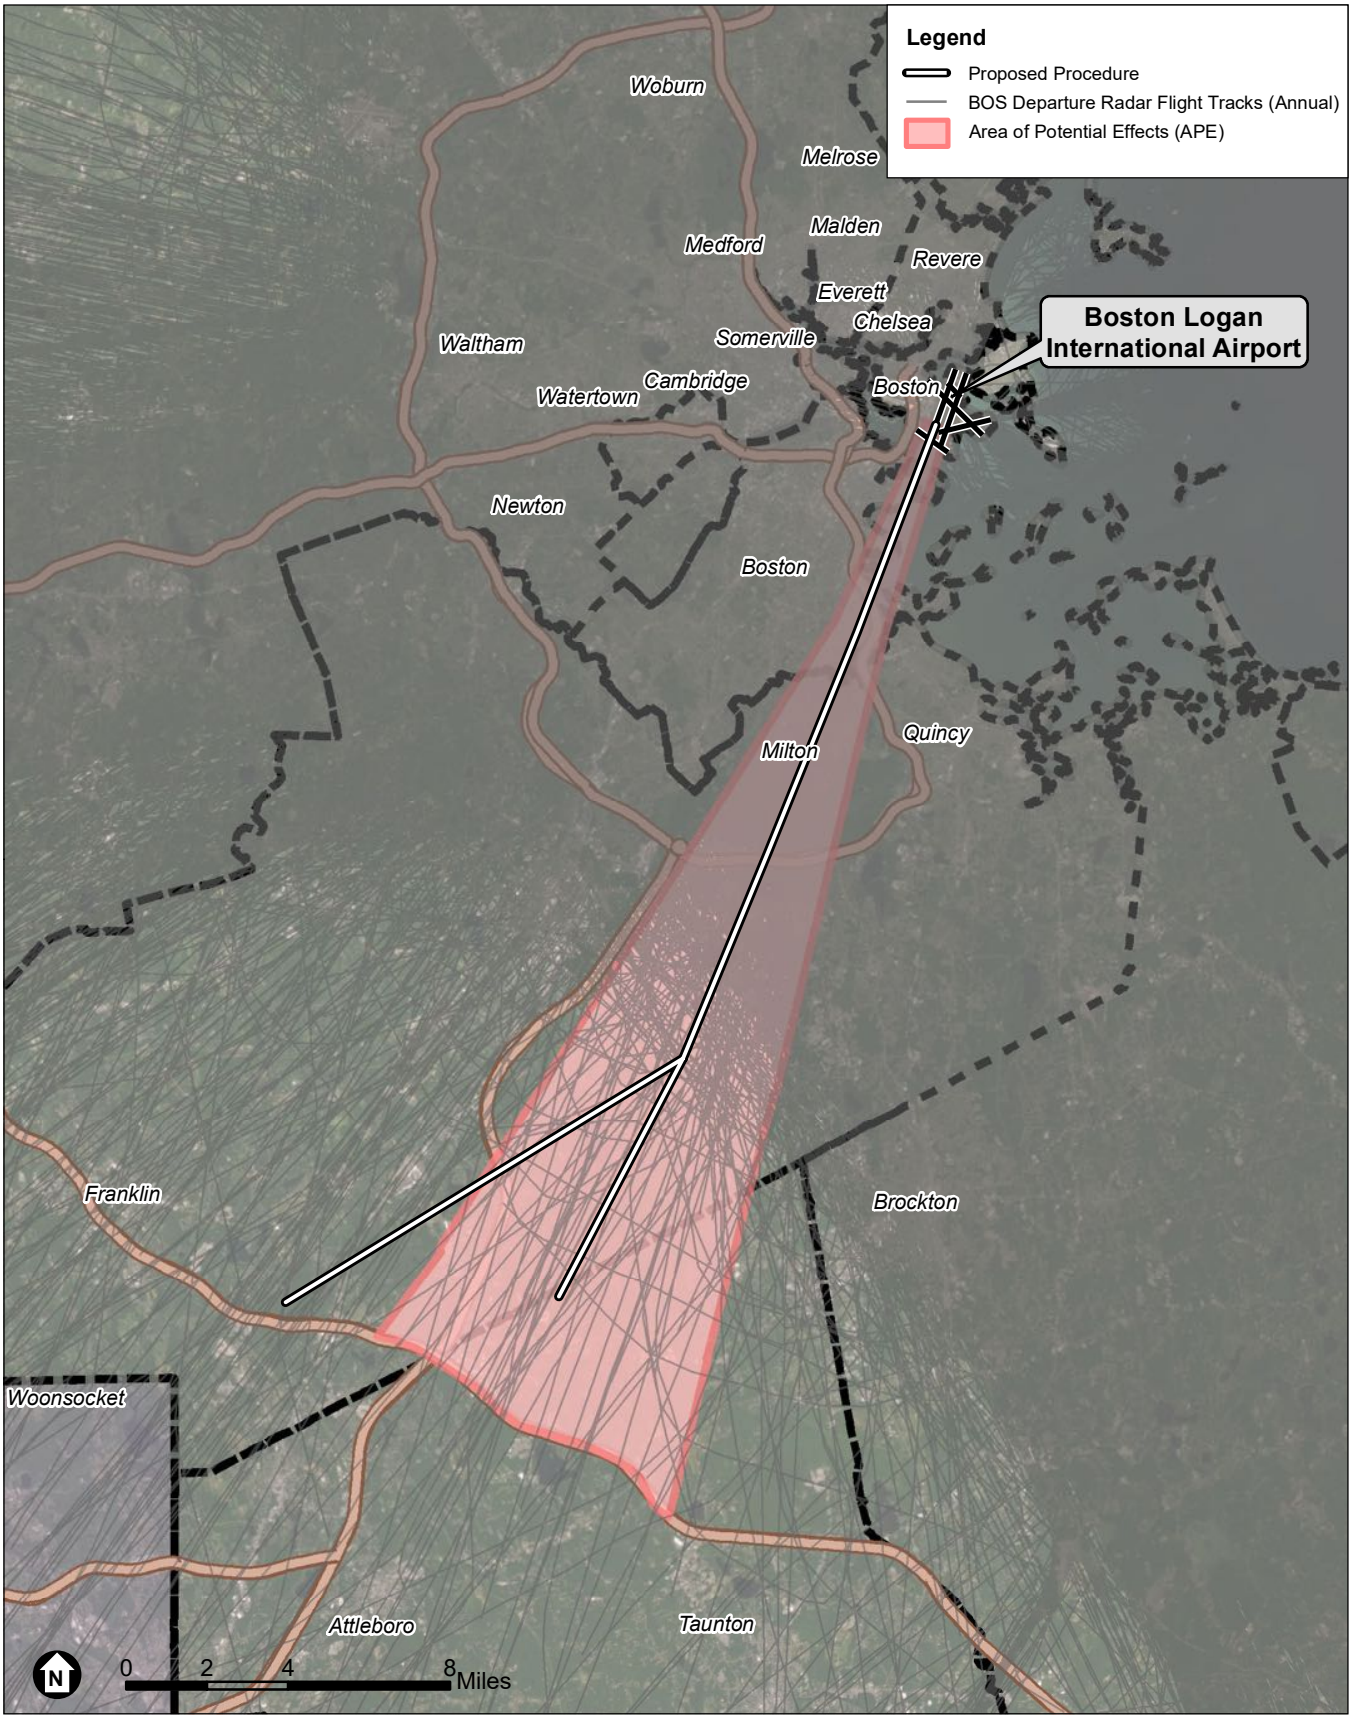
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

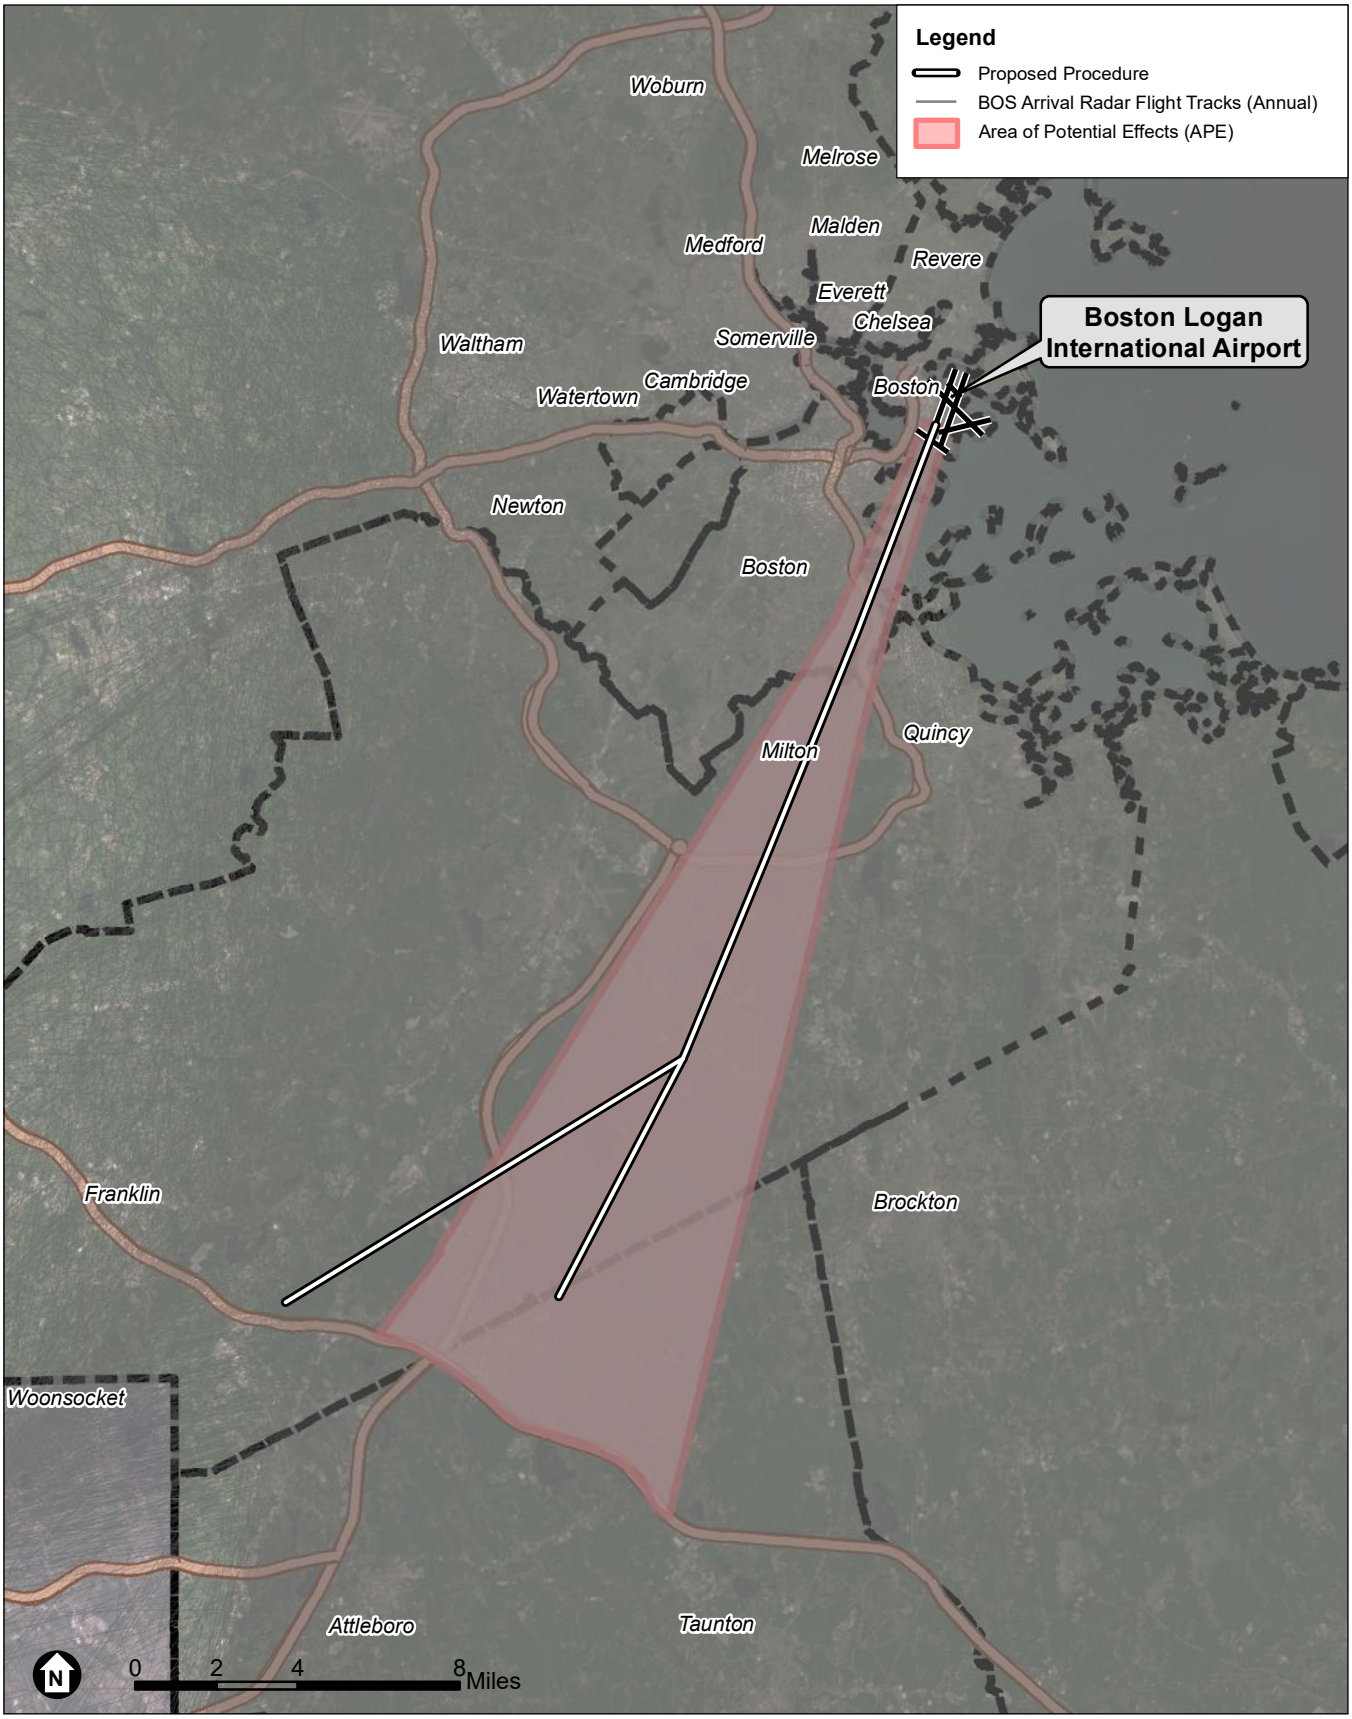


When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.



For more information on the analyses performed as a part of the Draft EA, please visit www.faabostonworkshops.com for a copy of the Draft EA. More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

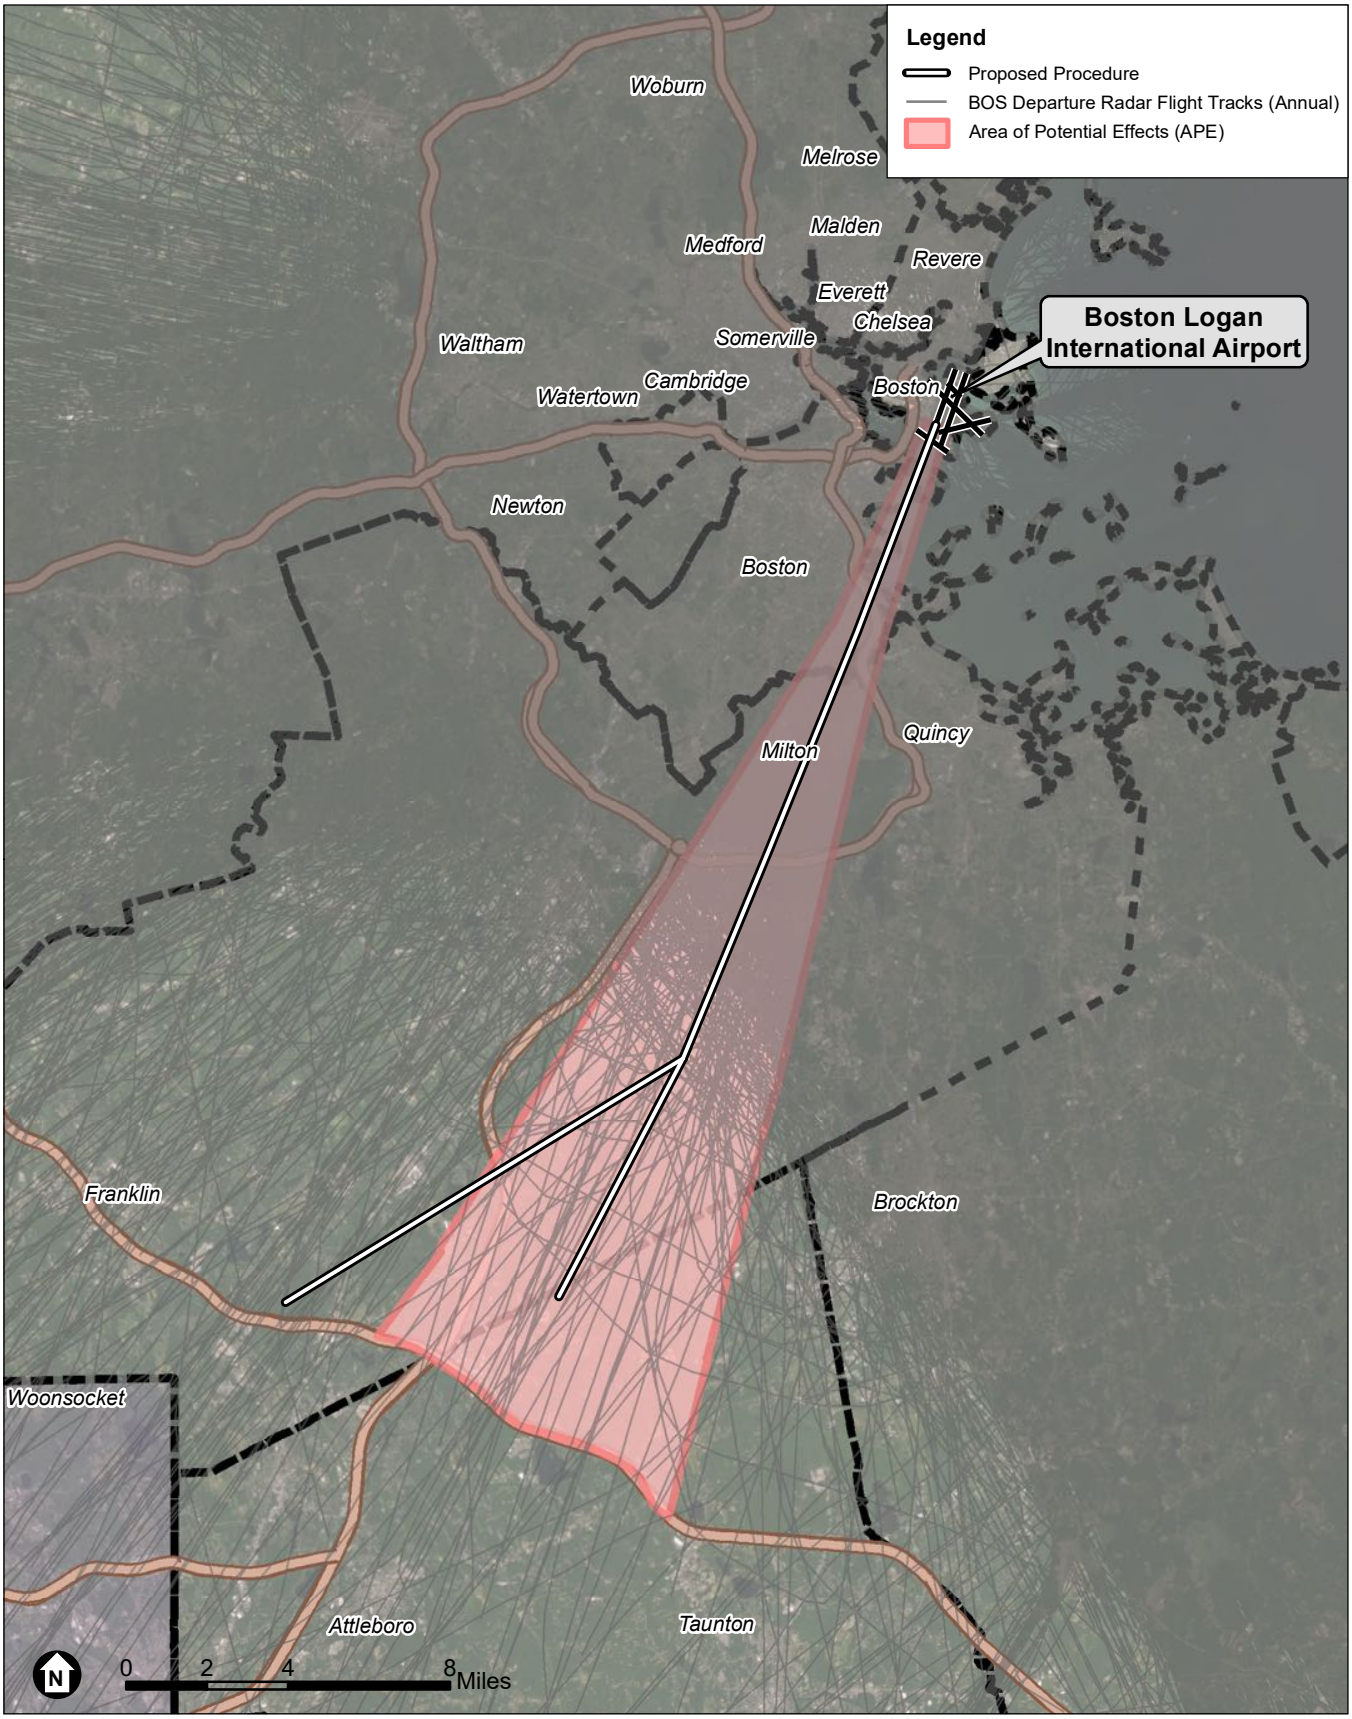
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.



When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

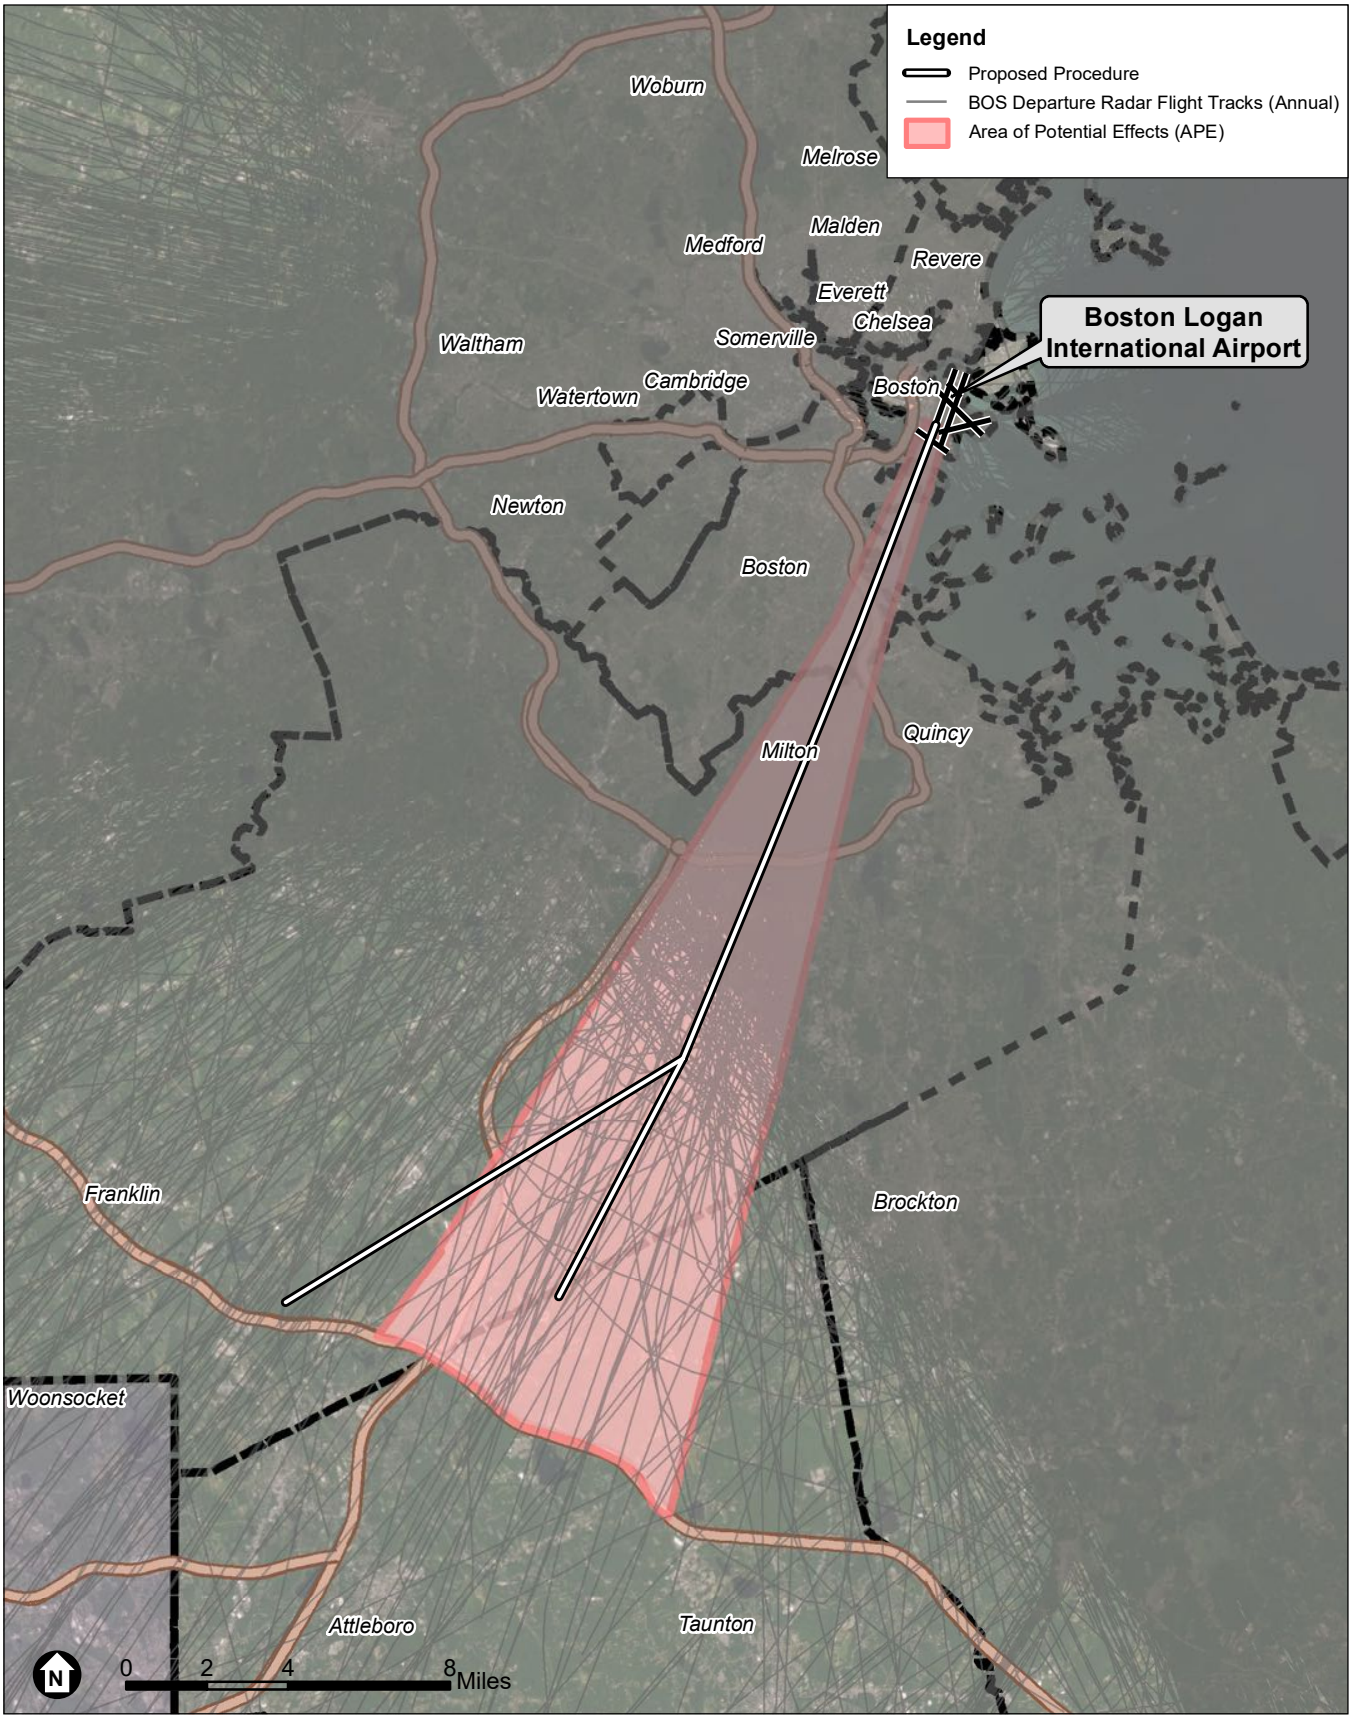
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.



When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

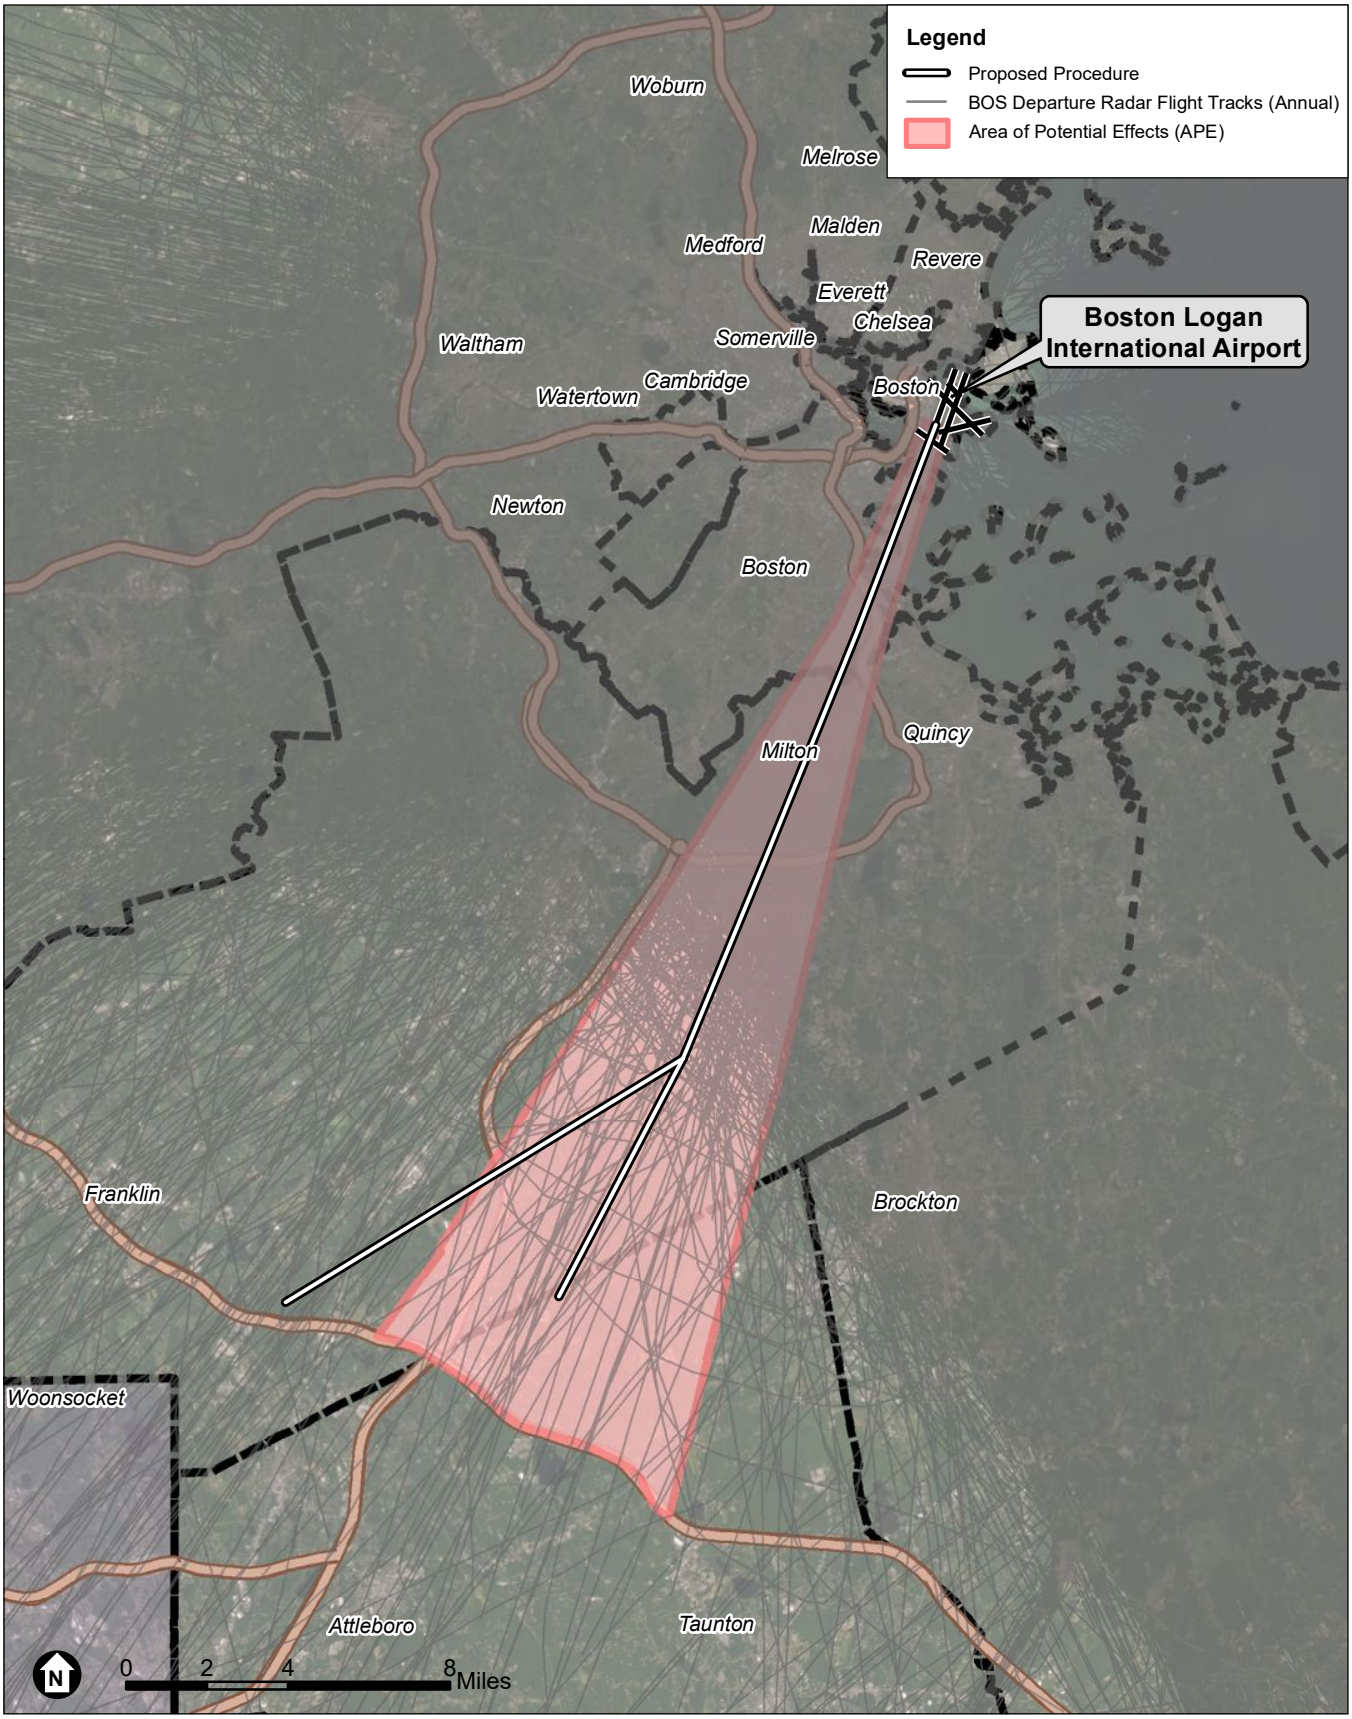
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

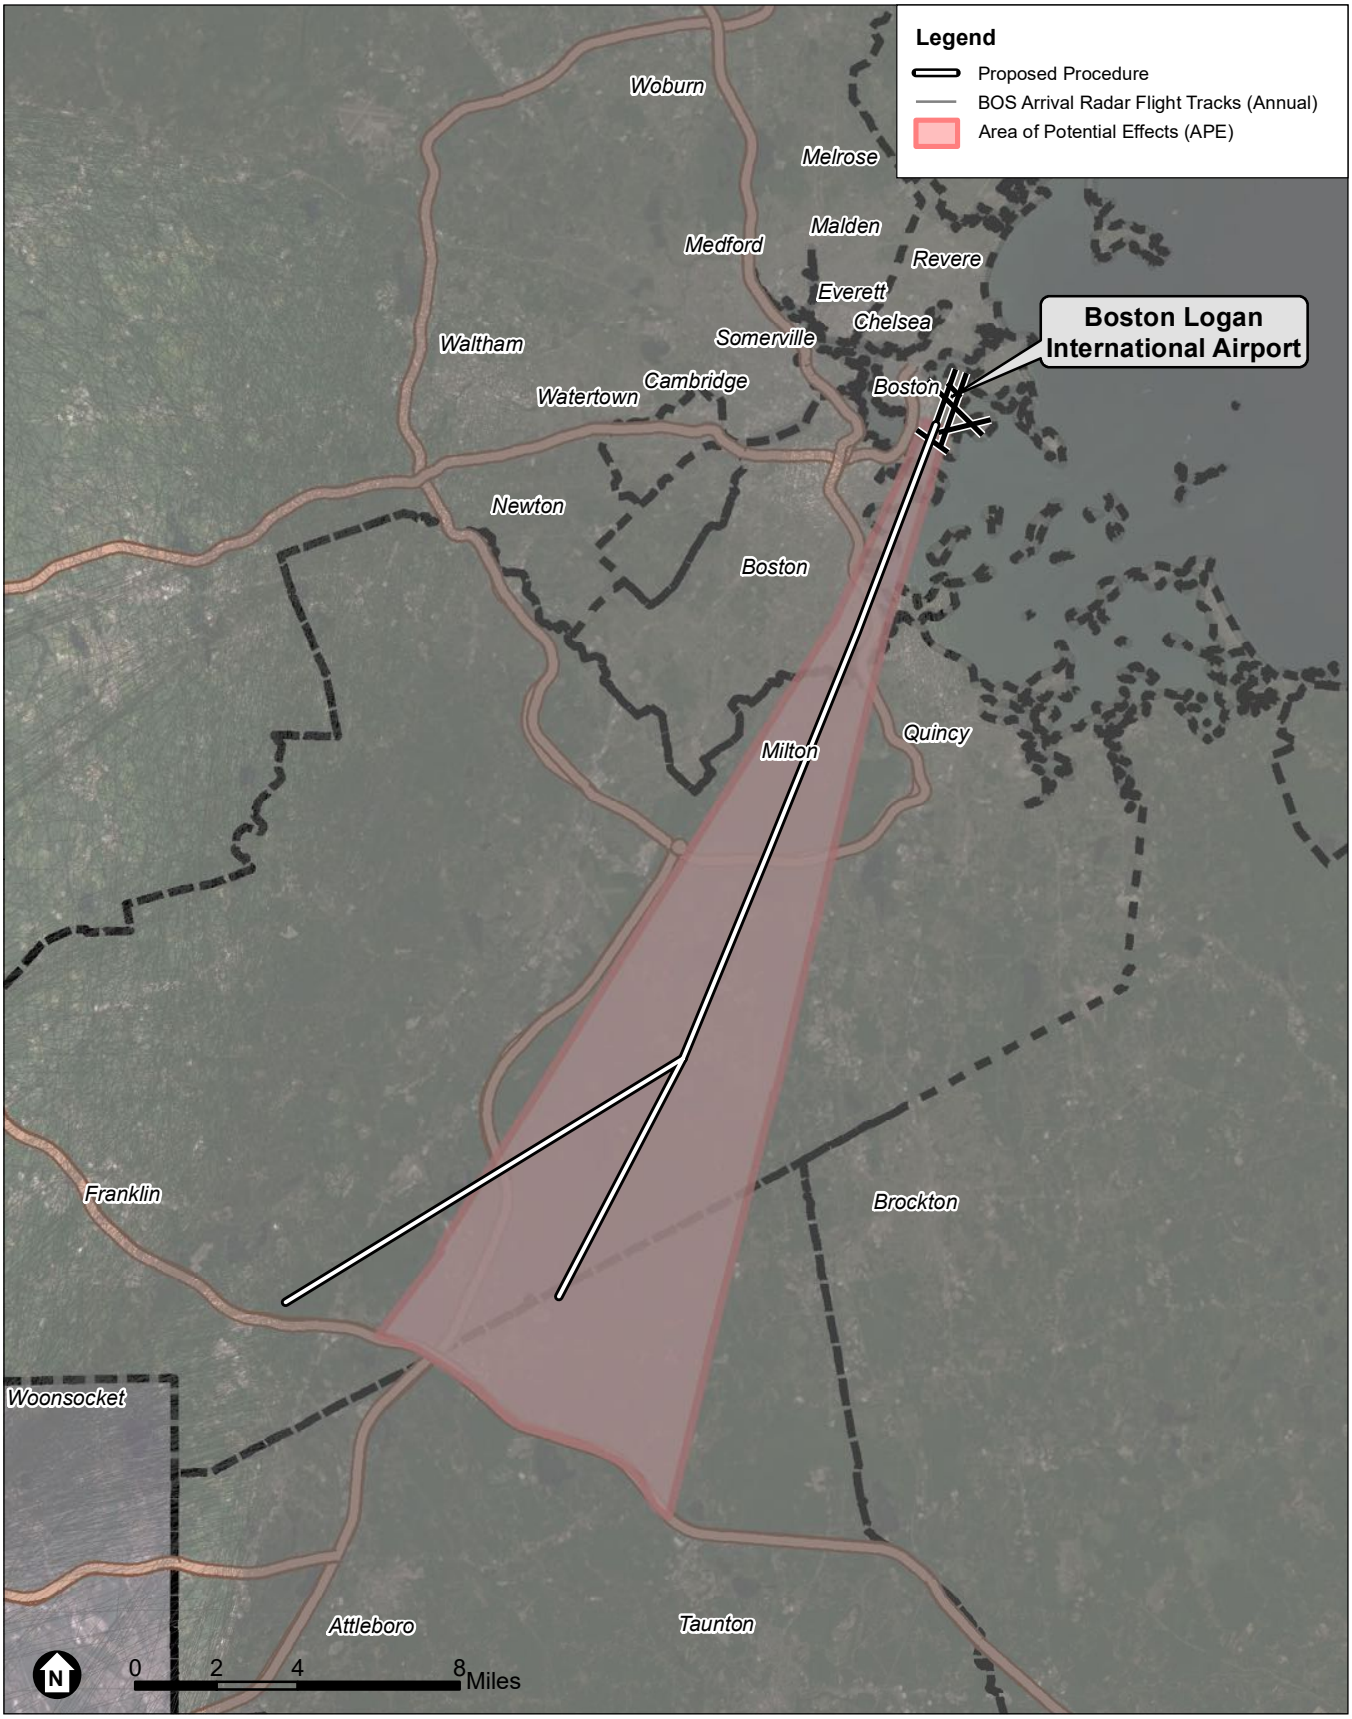


When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.



For more information on the analyses performed as a part of the Draft EA, please visit www.faabostonworkshops.com for a copy of the Draft EA. More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

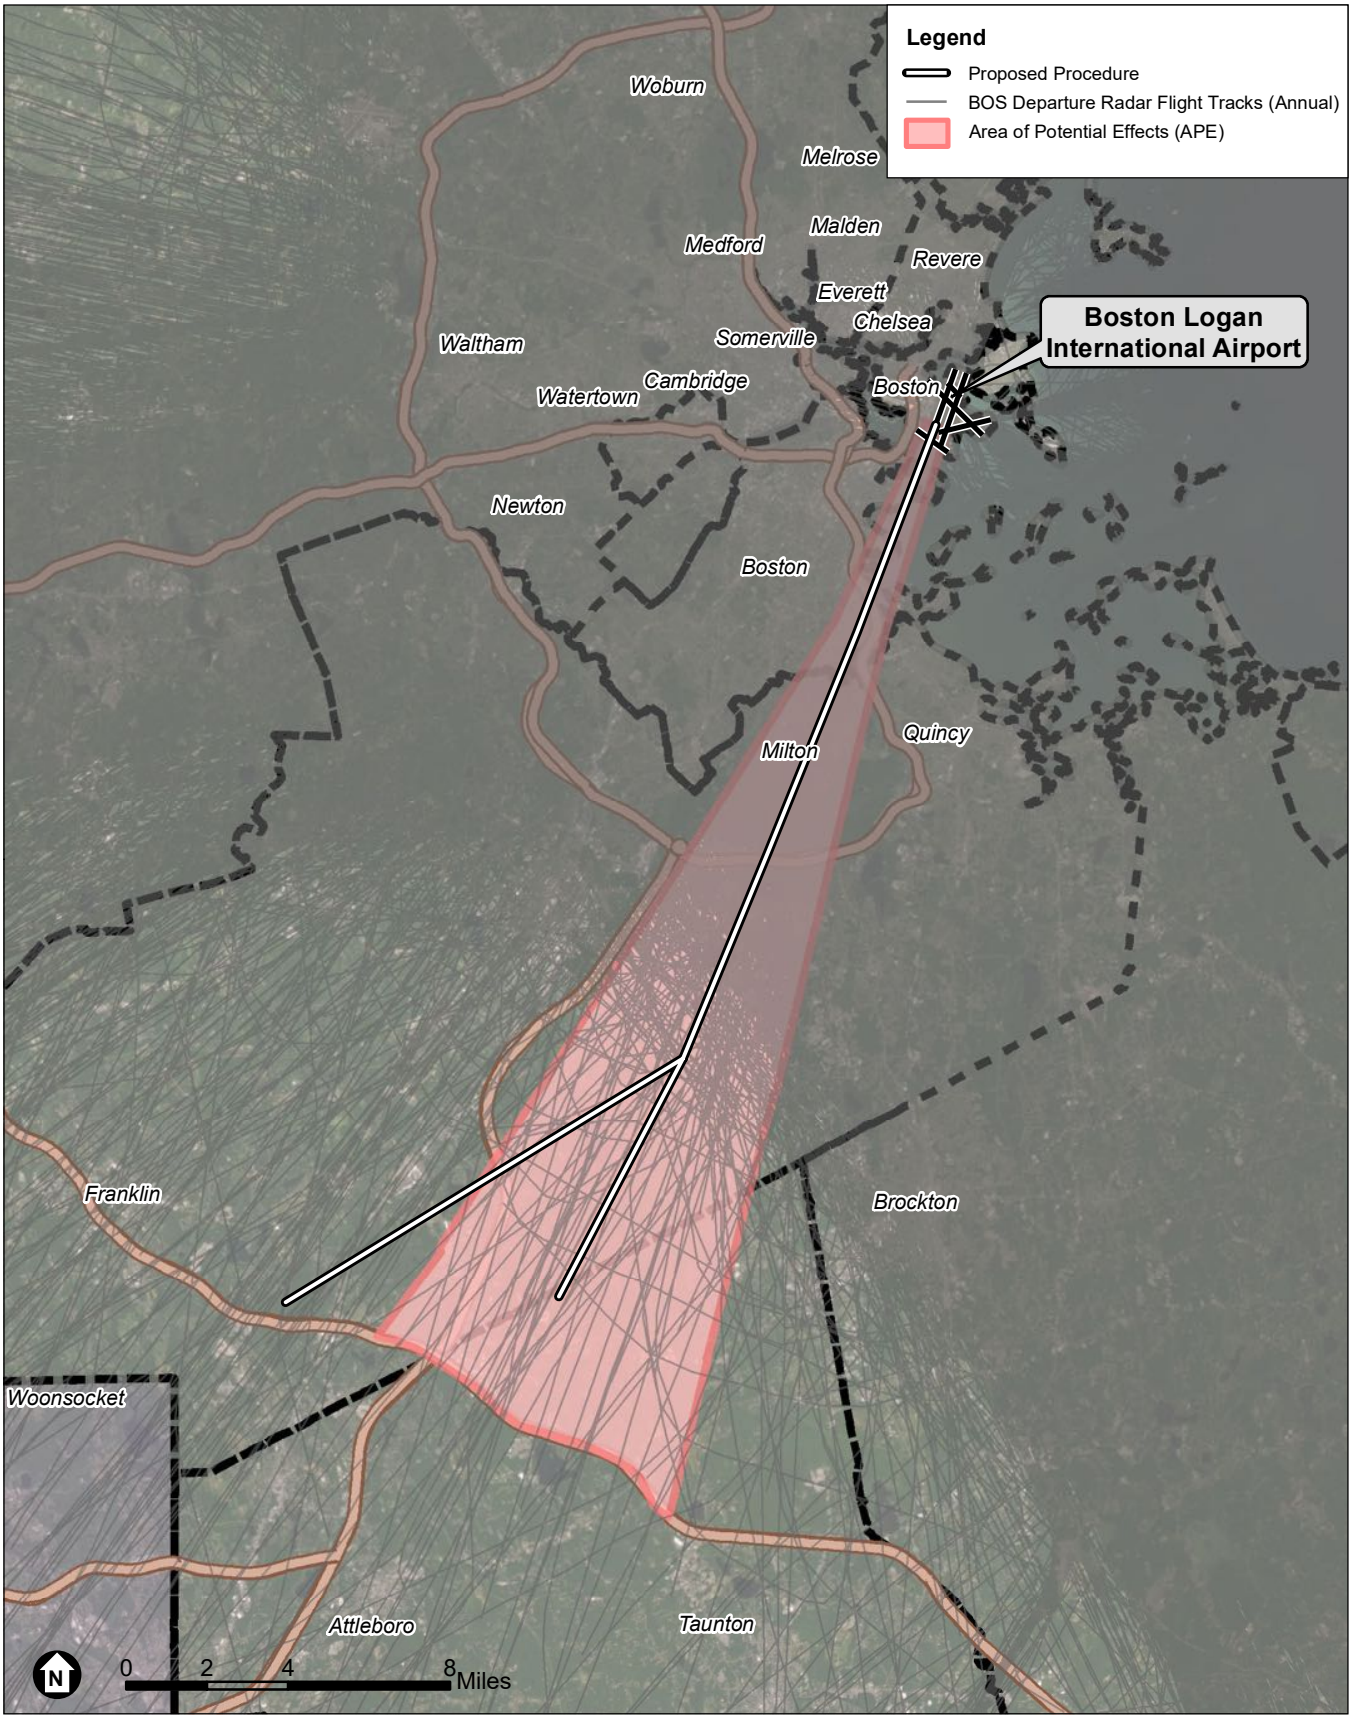

When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. If you have any additional comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact me at veronda.johnson@faa.gov or at the address below.

Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

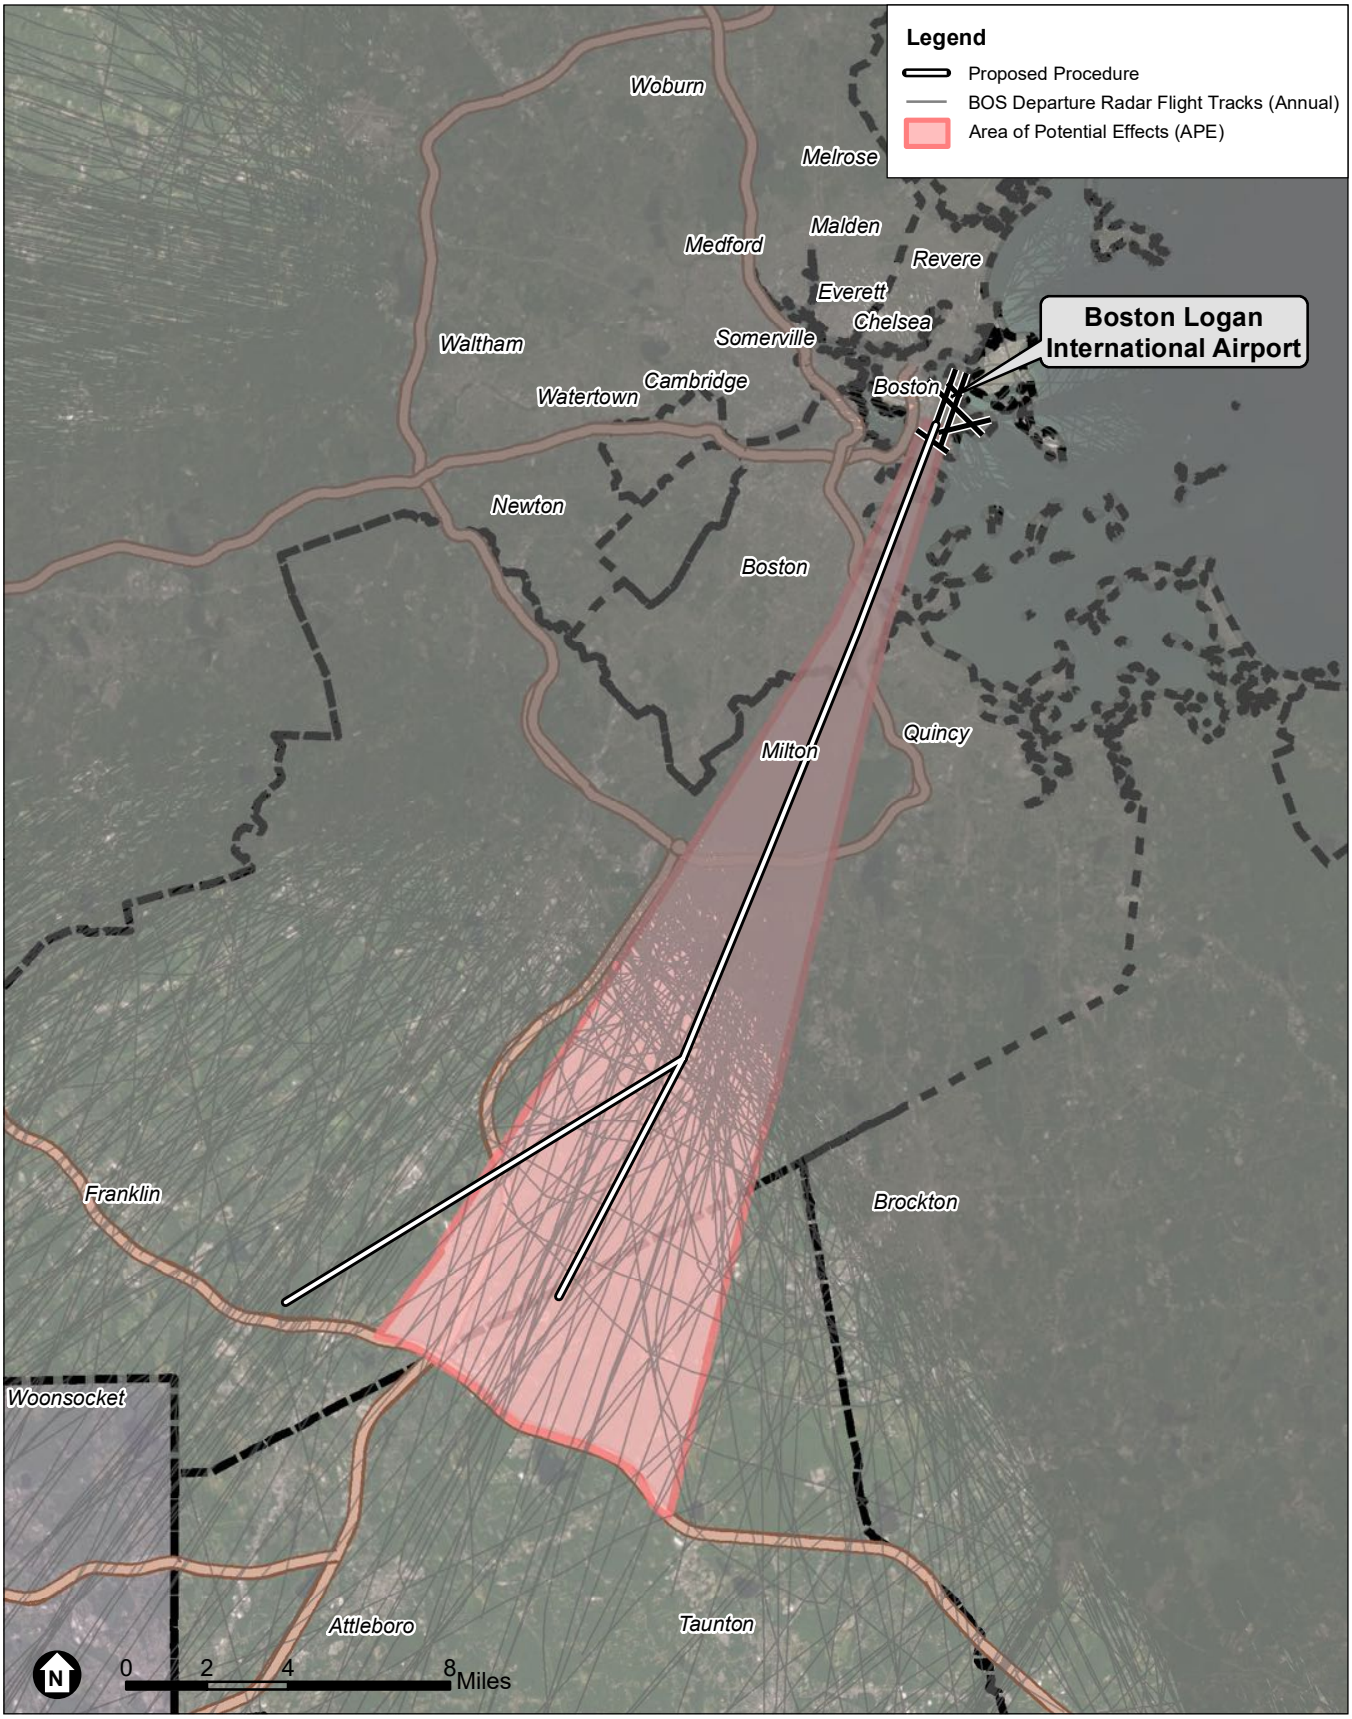
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

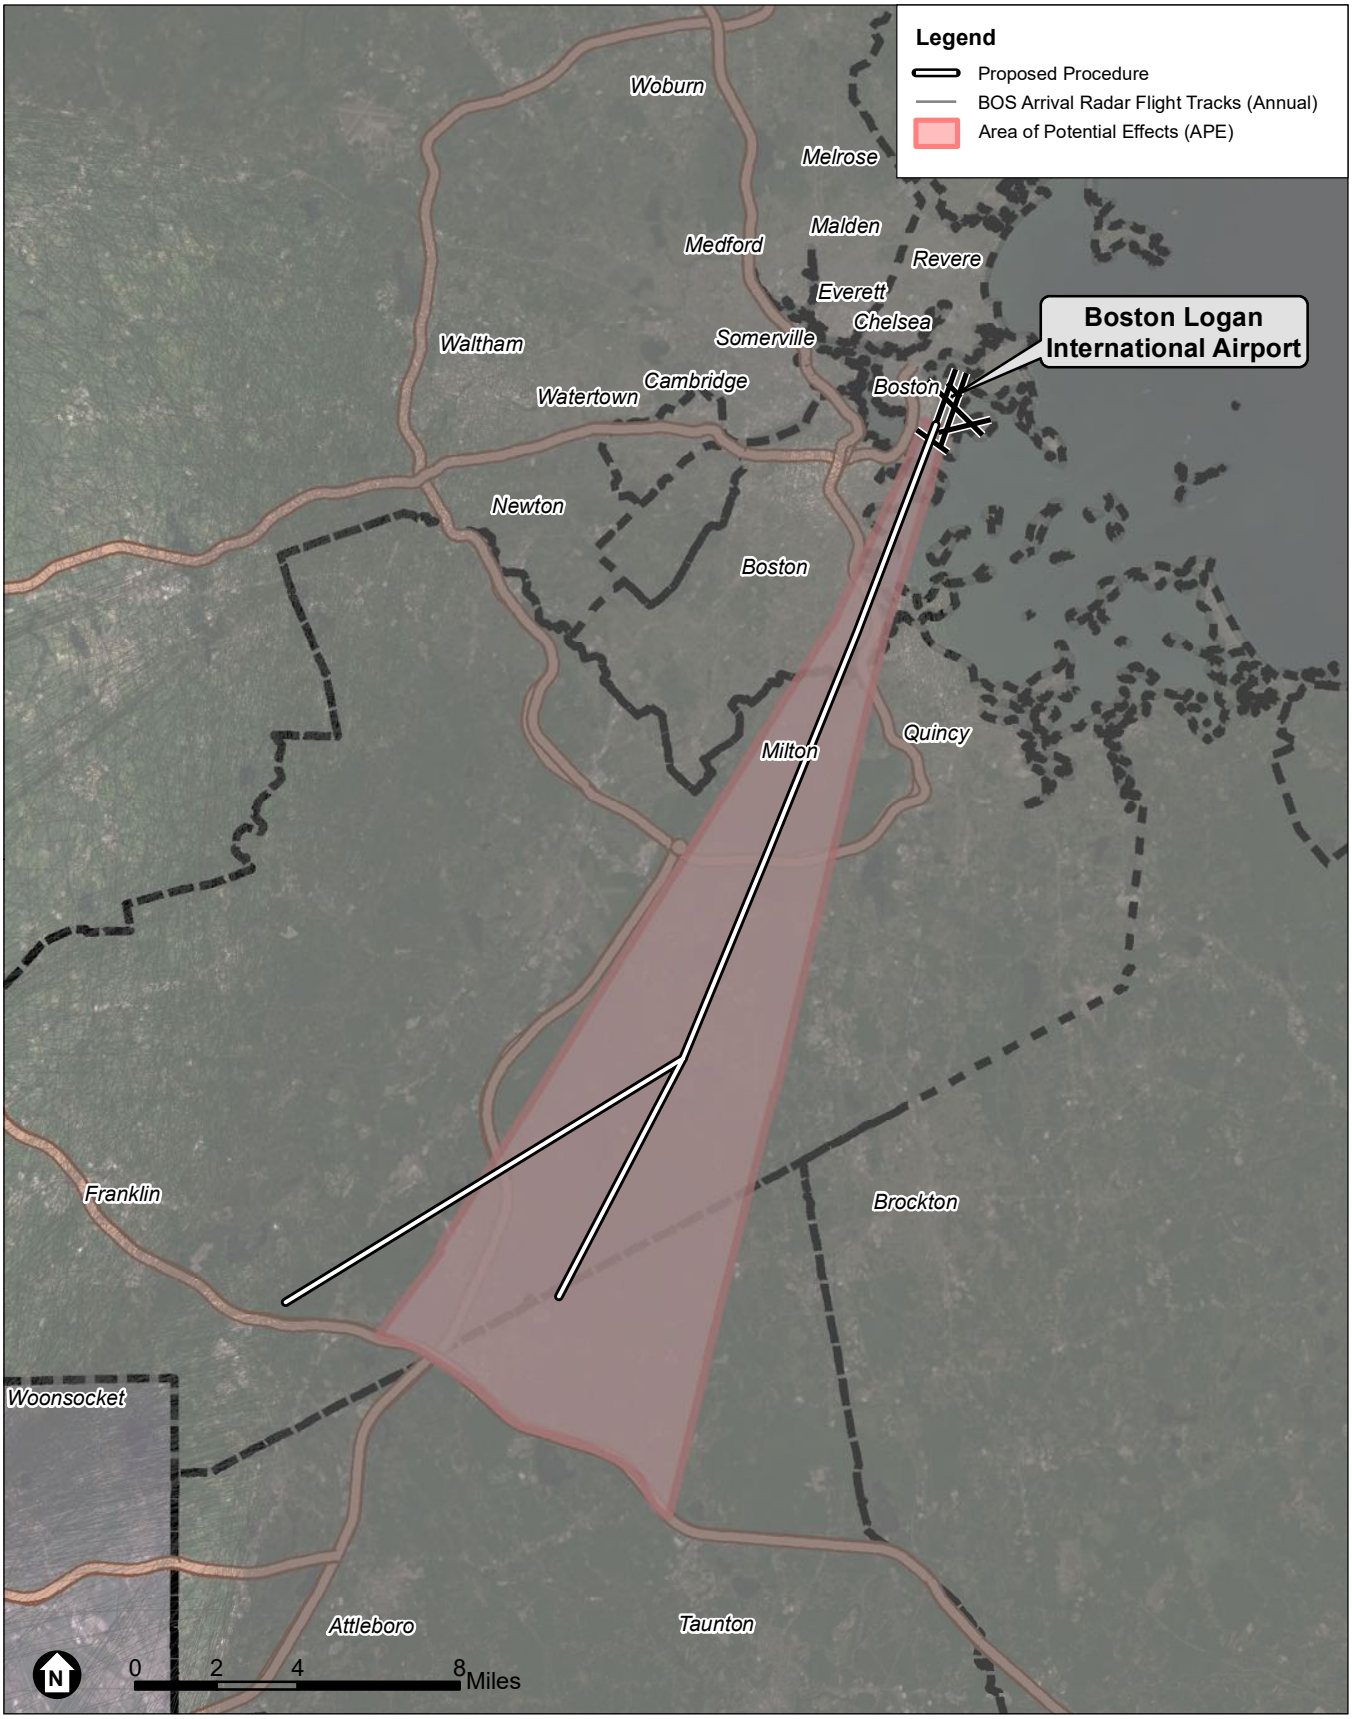


When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.



For more information on the analyses performed as a part of the Draft EA, please visit www.faabostonworkshops.com for a copy of the Draft EA. More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Foxborough Pumping Station	The Foxborough Pumping Station is a historic water pumping station at 25 Pumping Station Road in Foxborough, Massachusetts. Its main pumphouse was designed by Ernest Boyden, a regionally-known architect of water supply systems, and was built in 1891; it is a brick structure with Queen Anne styling. The station also includes several historic wells, a period garage, and the man-made Fales Pond, a once-dammed section of the Neponset Reservoir near the pumphouse.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

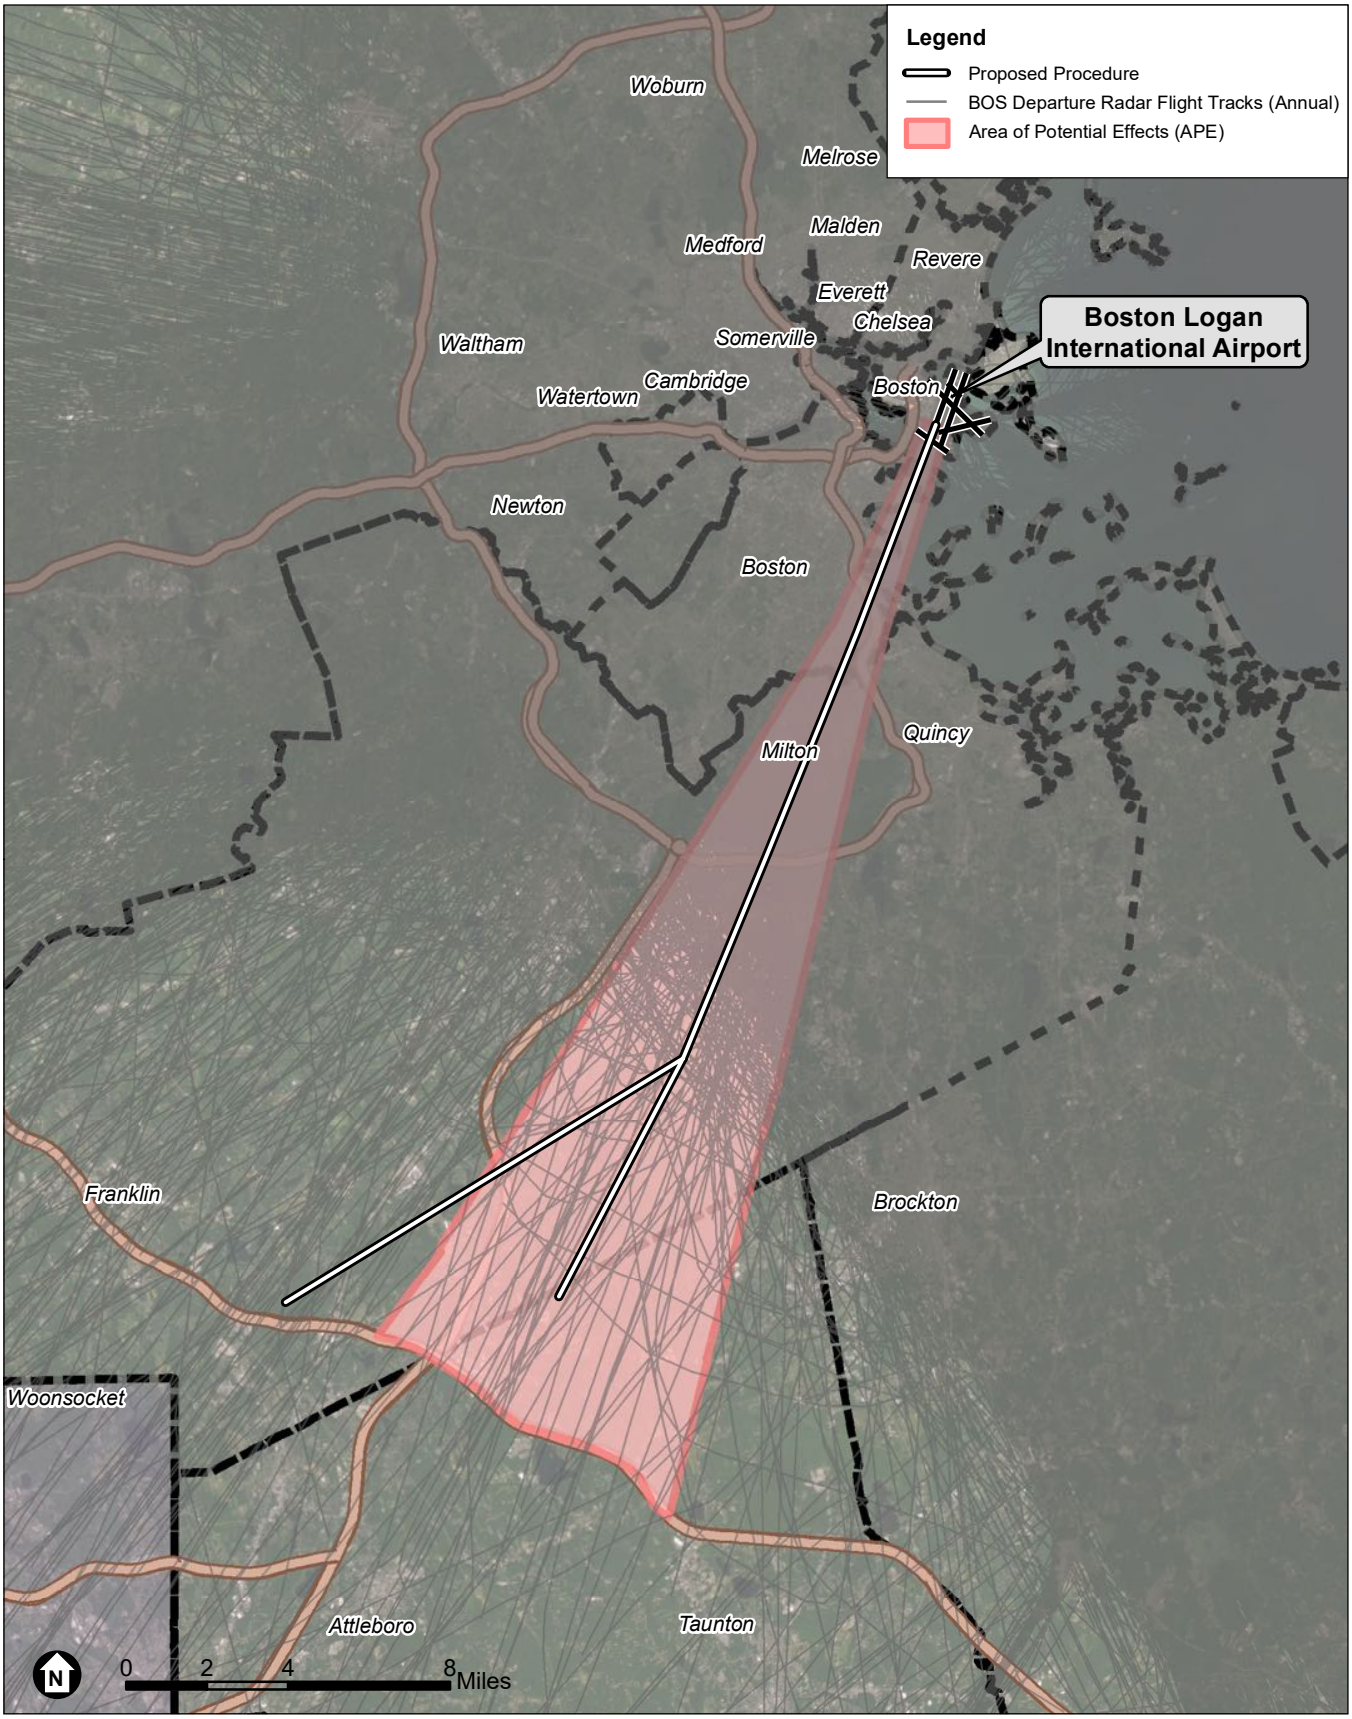
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.



When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. If you have any additional comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact me at veronda.johnson@faa.gov or at the address below.

Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

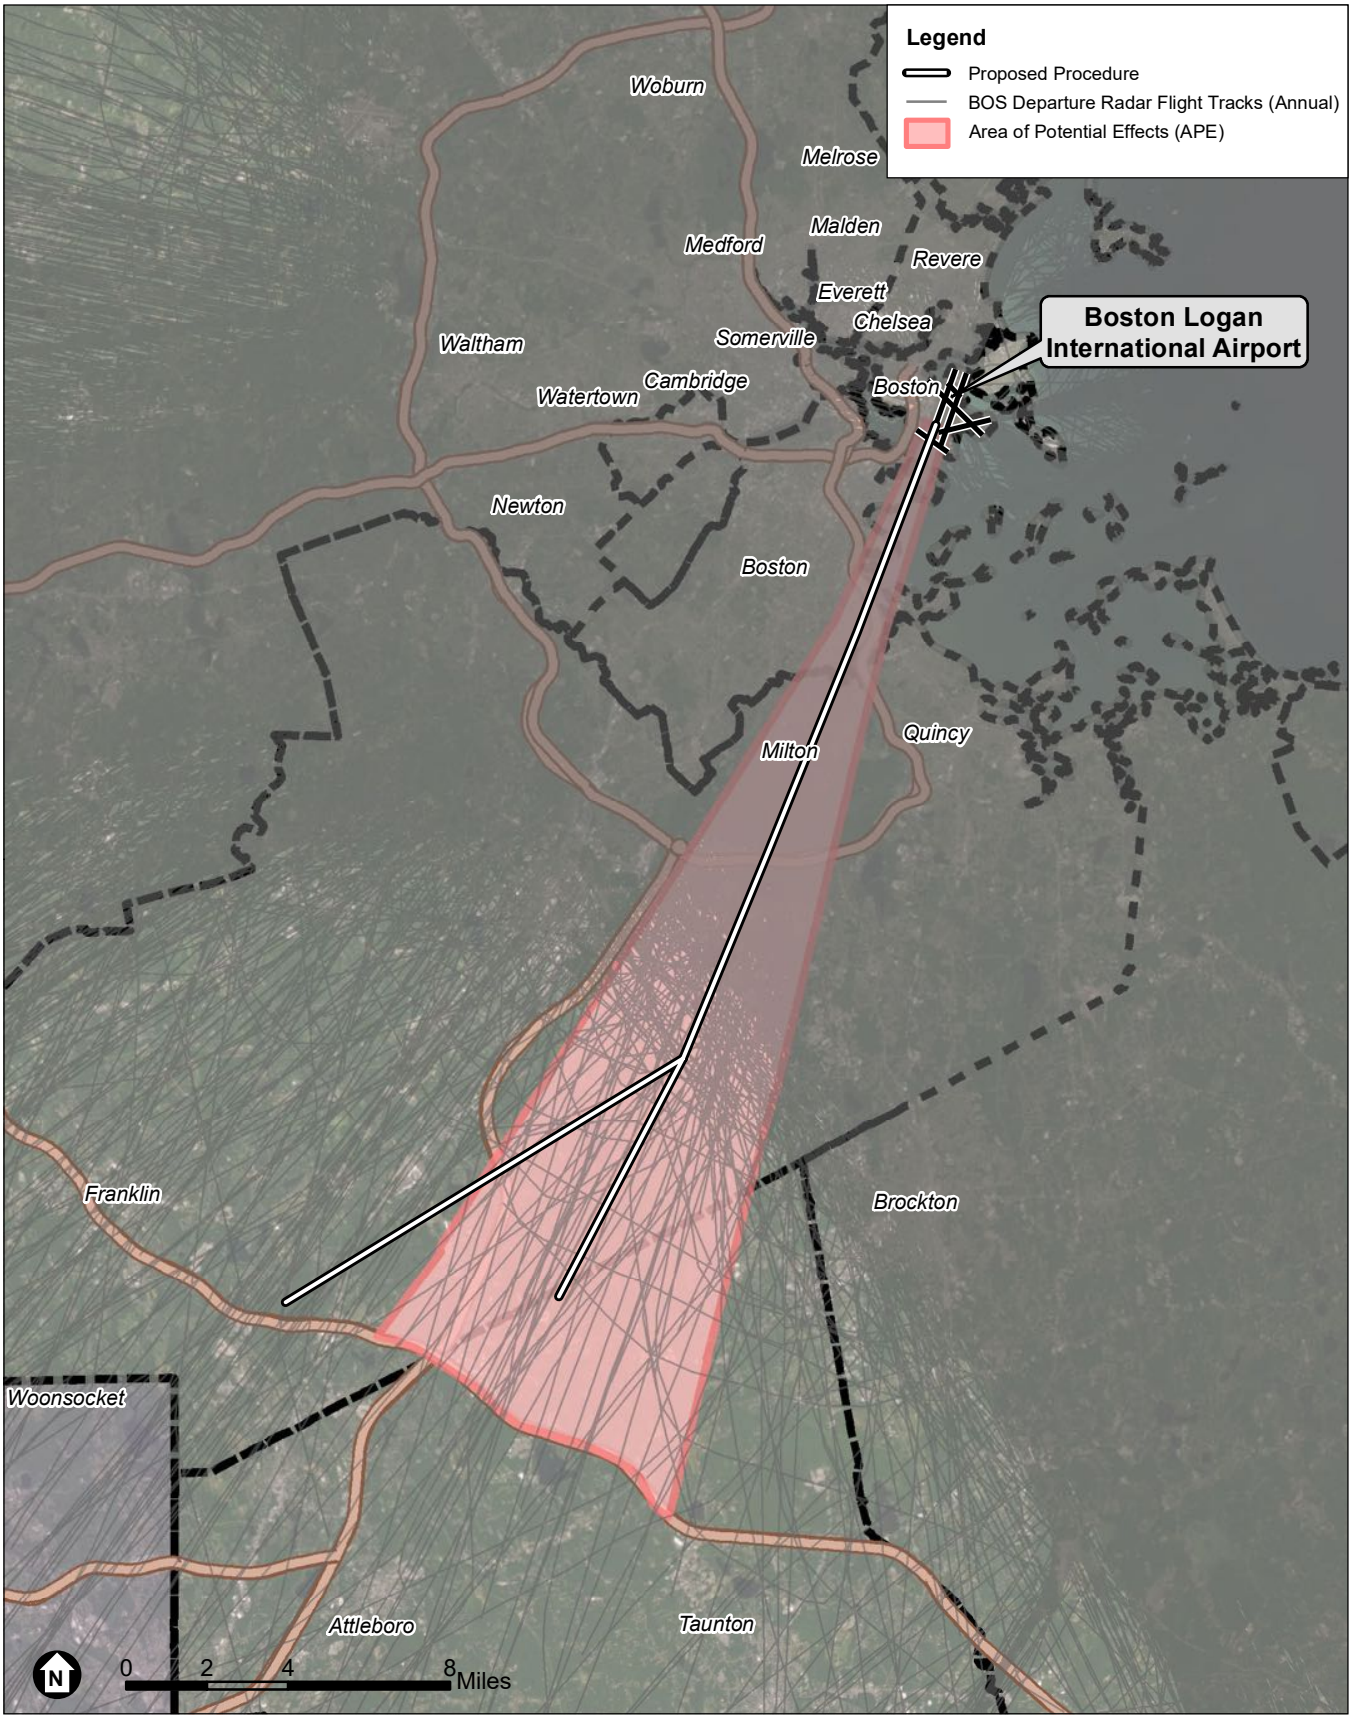
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.



When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

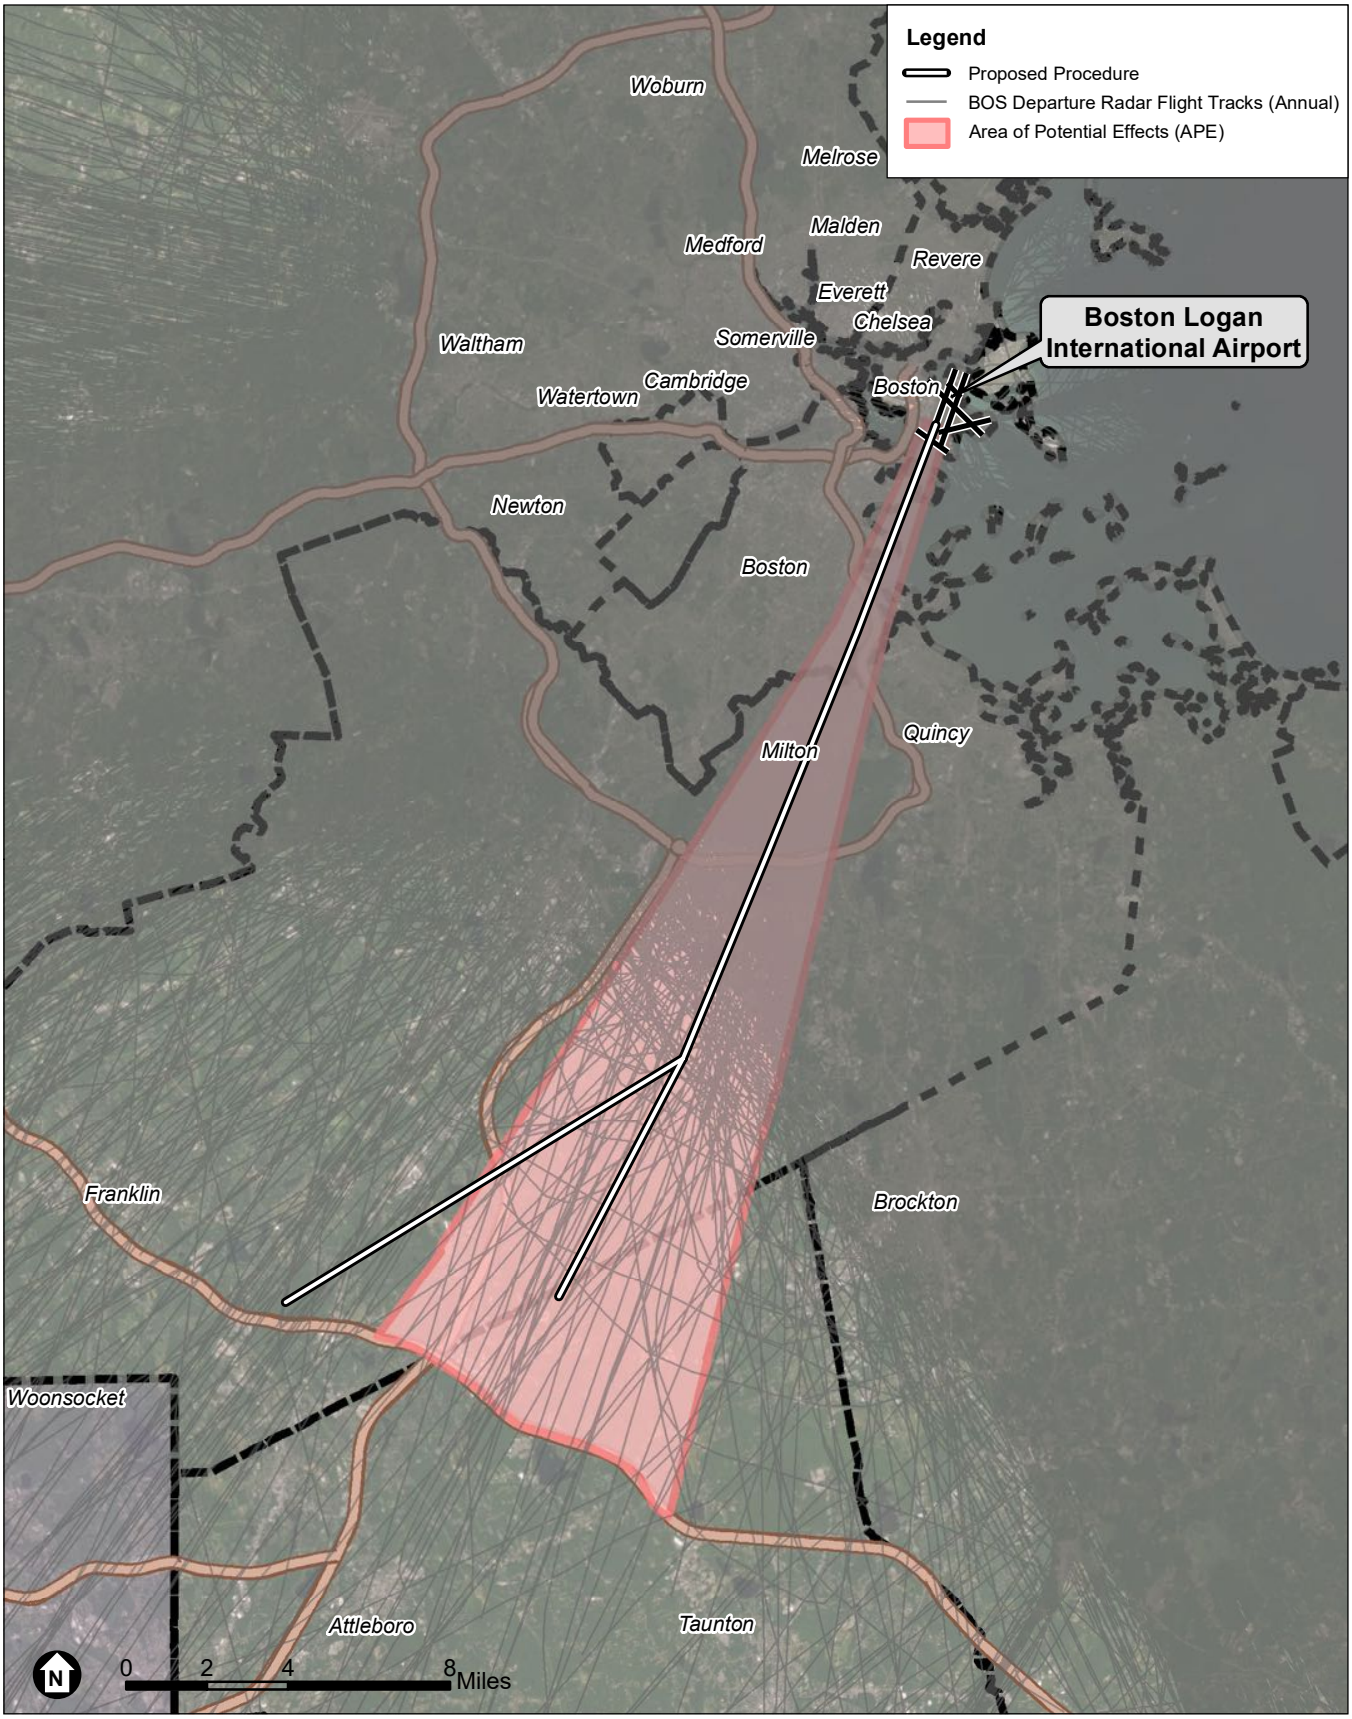
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

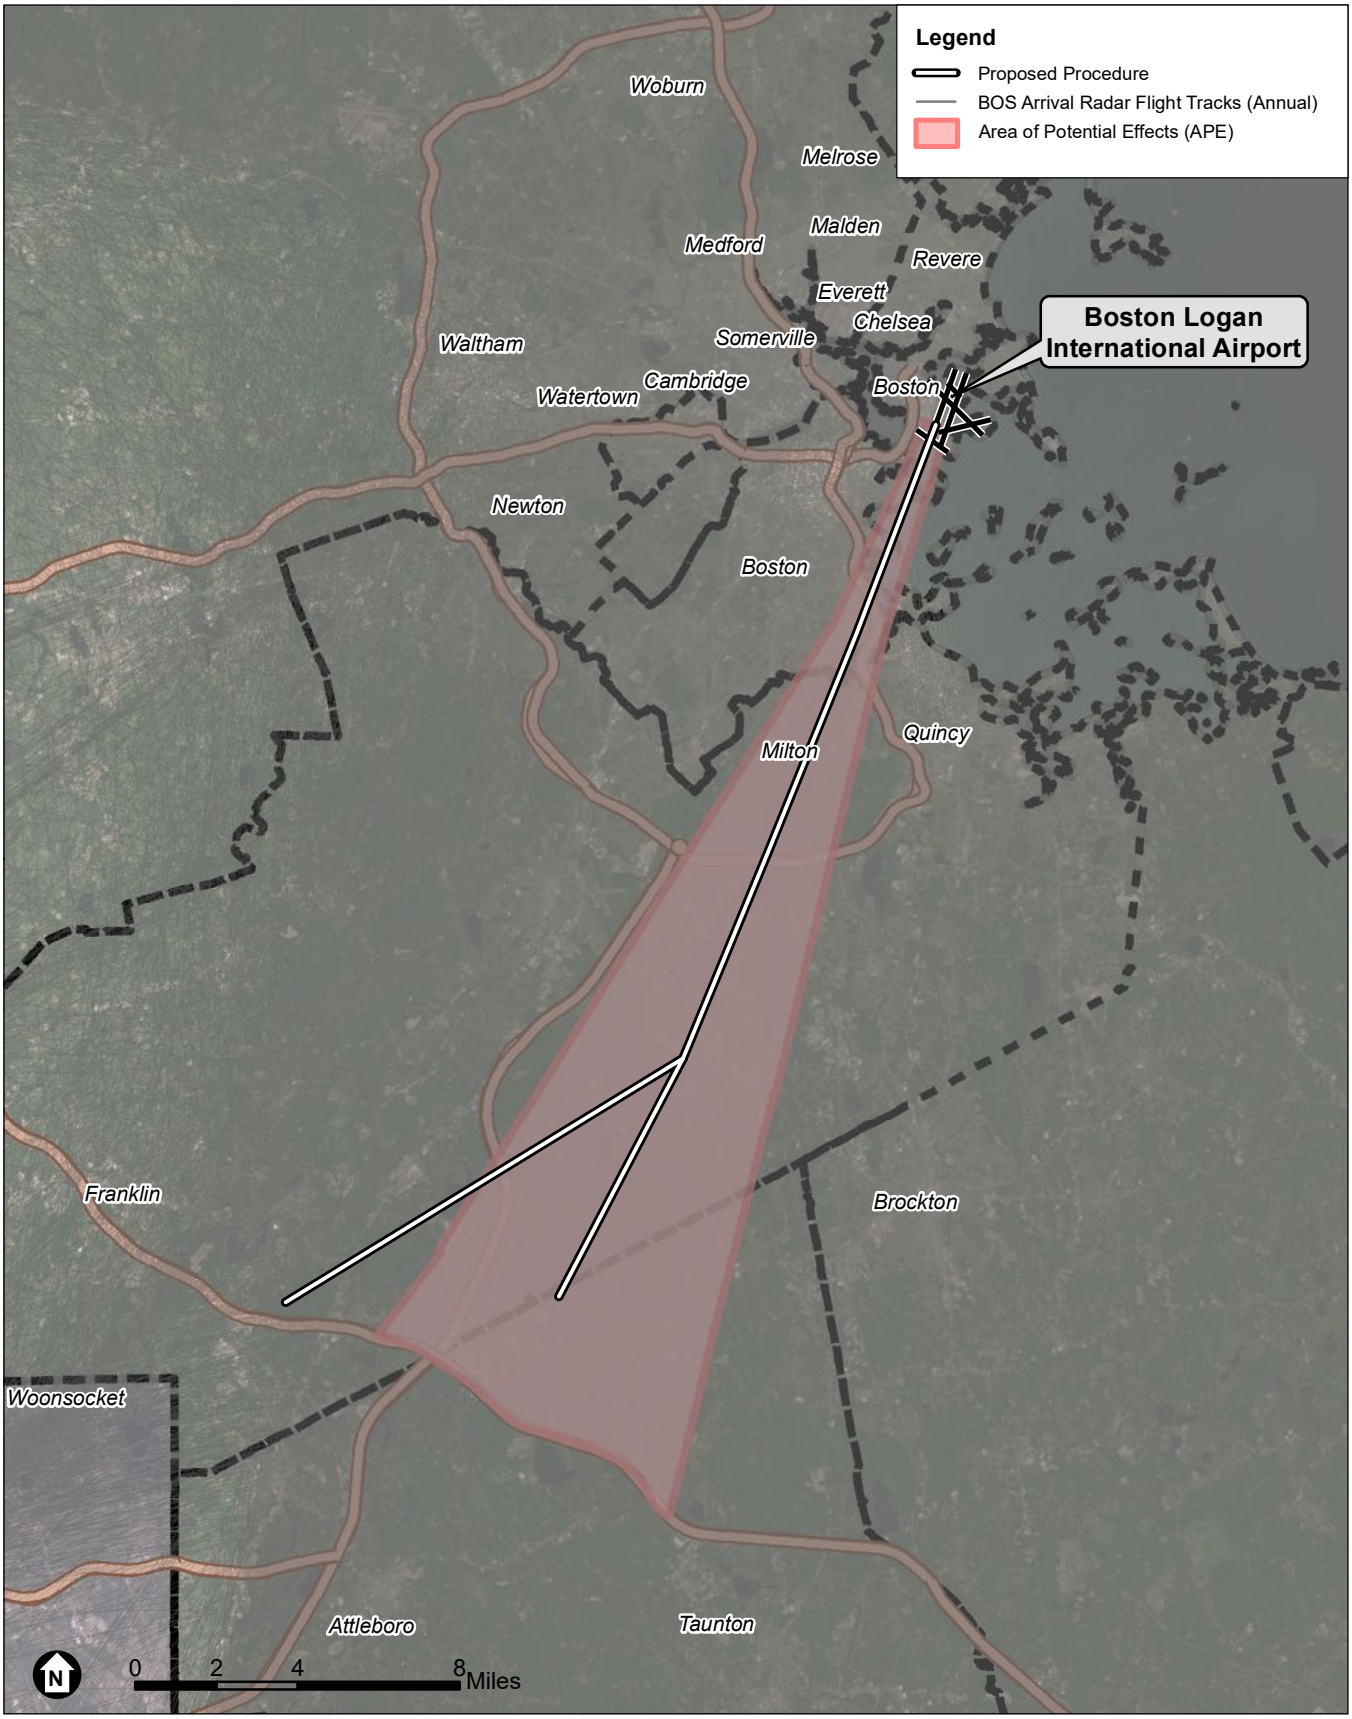


When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.



For more information on the analyses performed as a part of the Draft EA, please visit www.faabostonworkshops.com for a copy of the Draft EA. More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

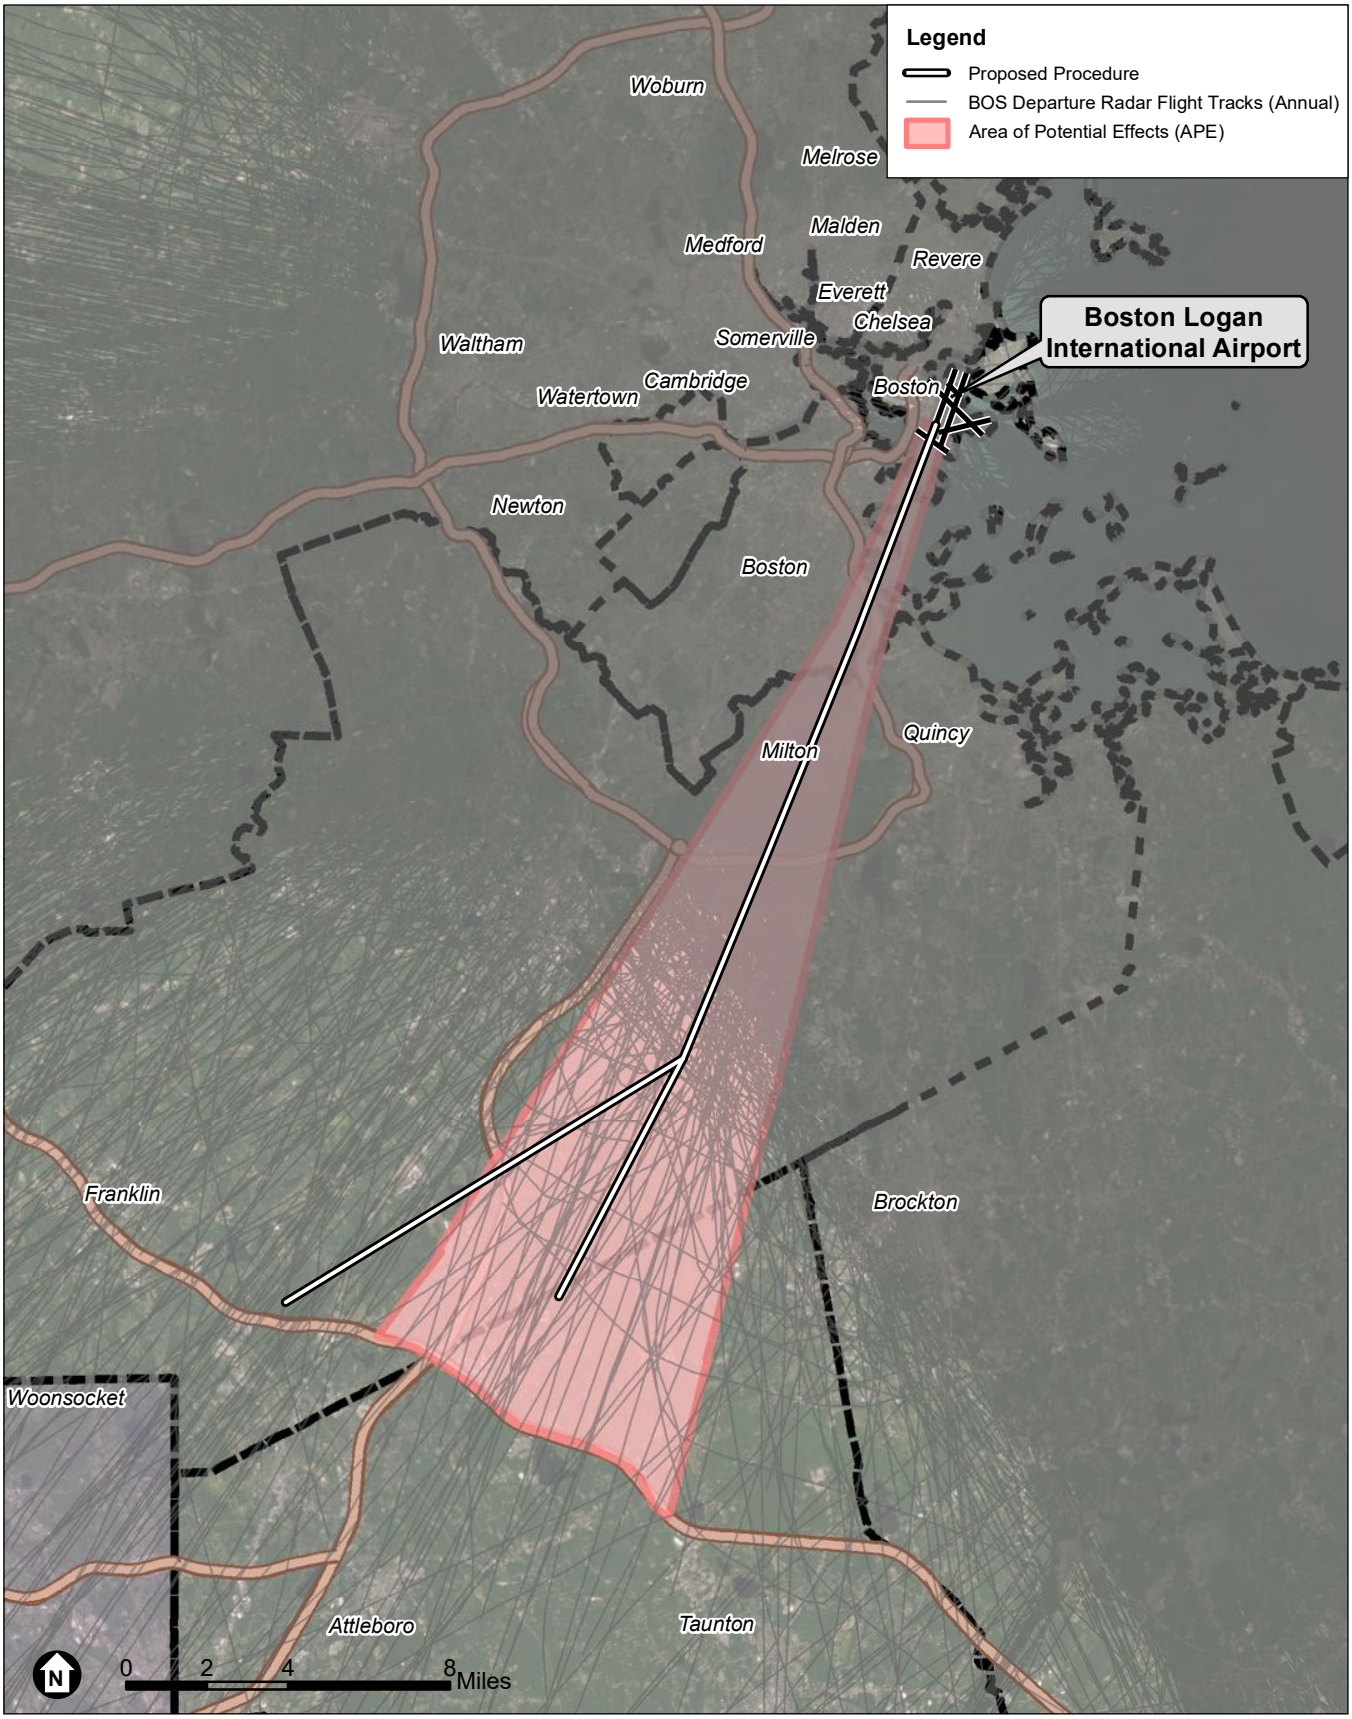
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.



When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. If you have any additional comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact me at veronda.johnson@faa.gov or at the address below.

Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

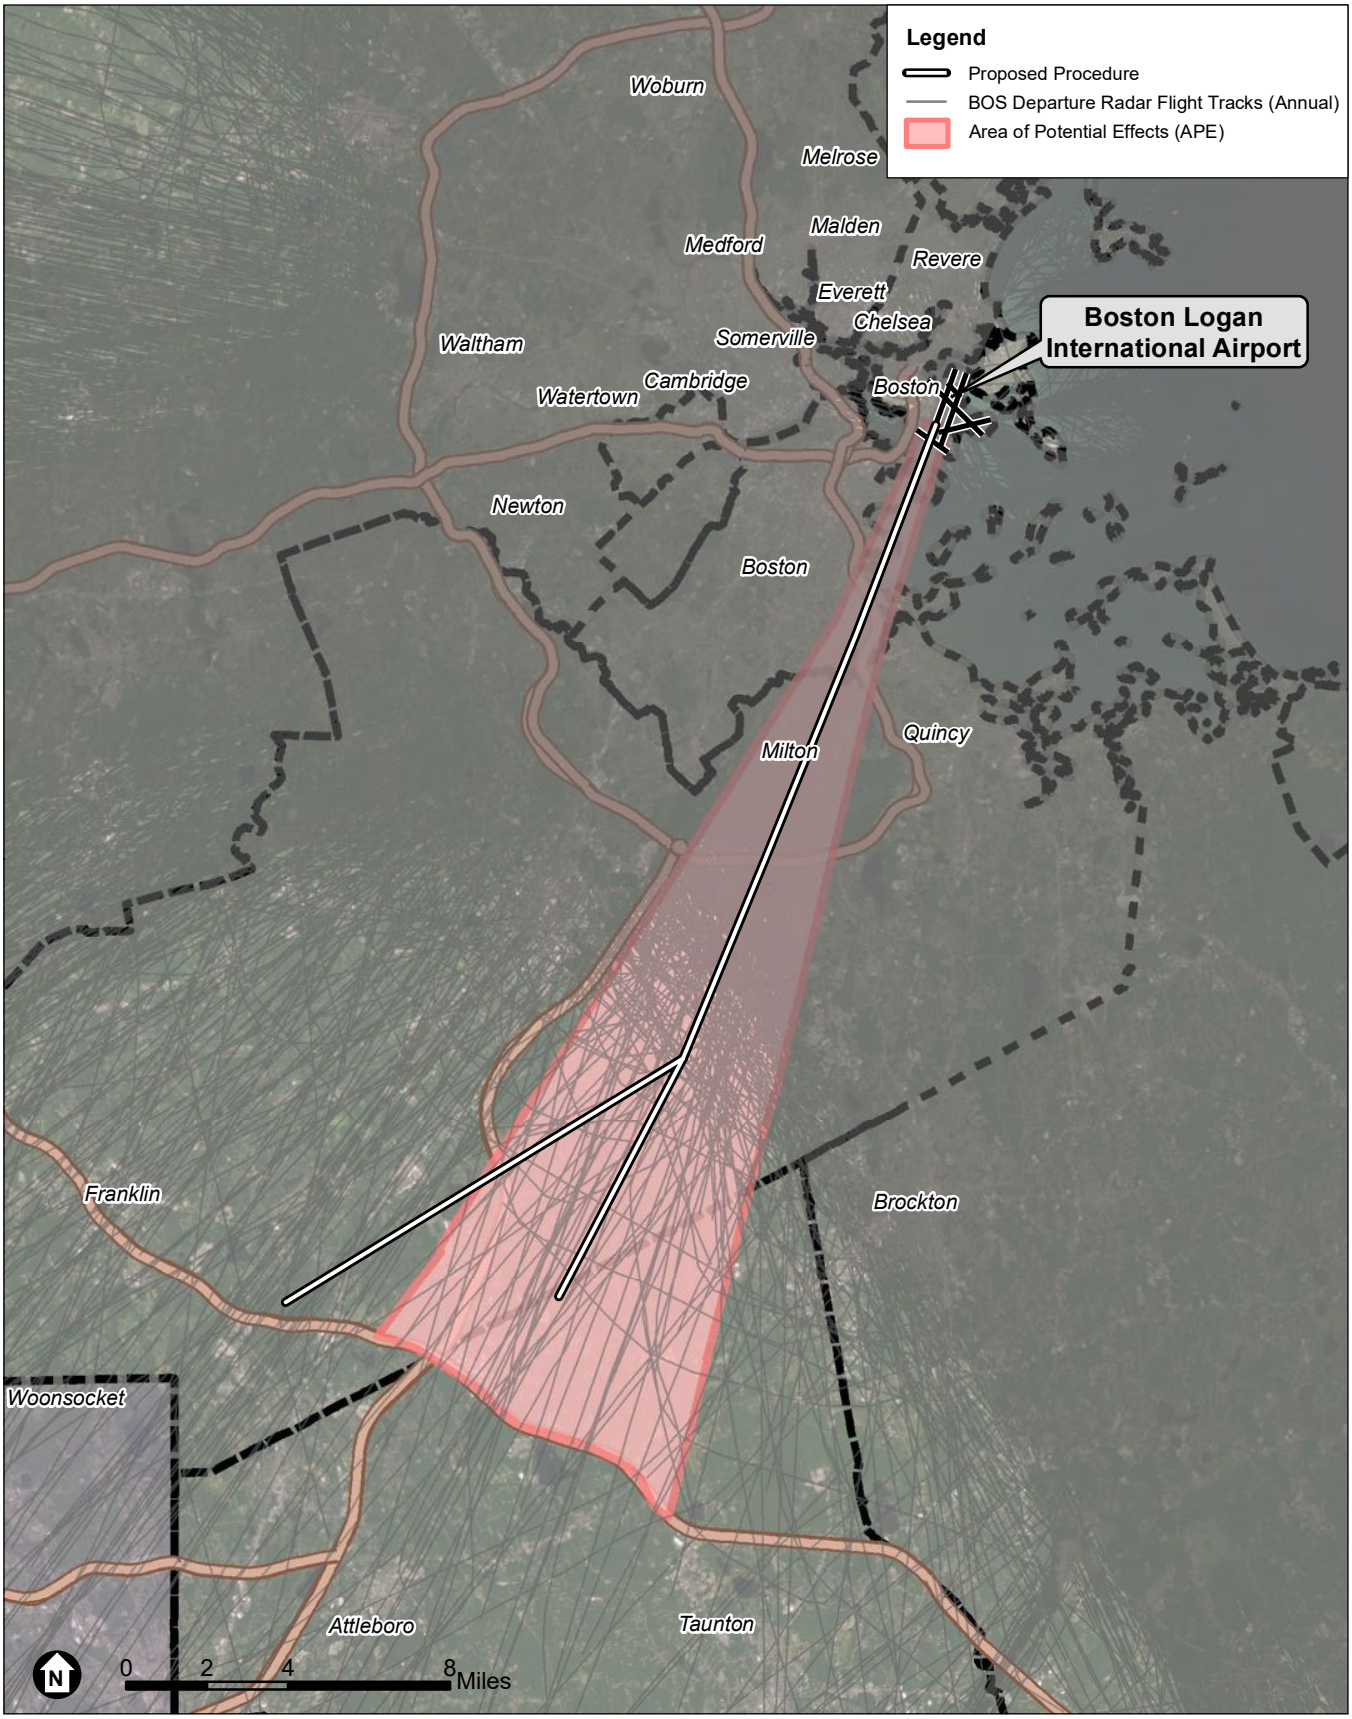
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

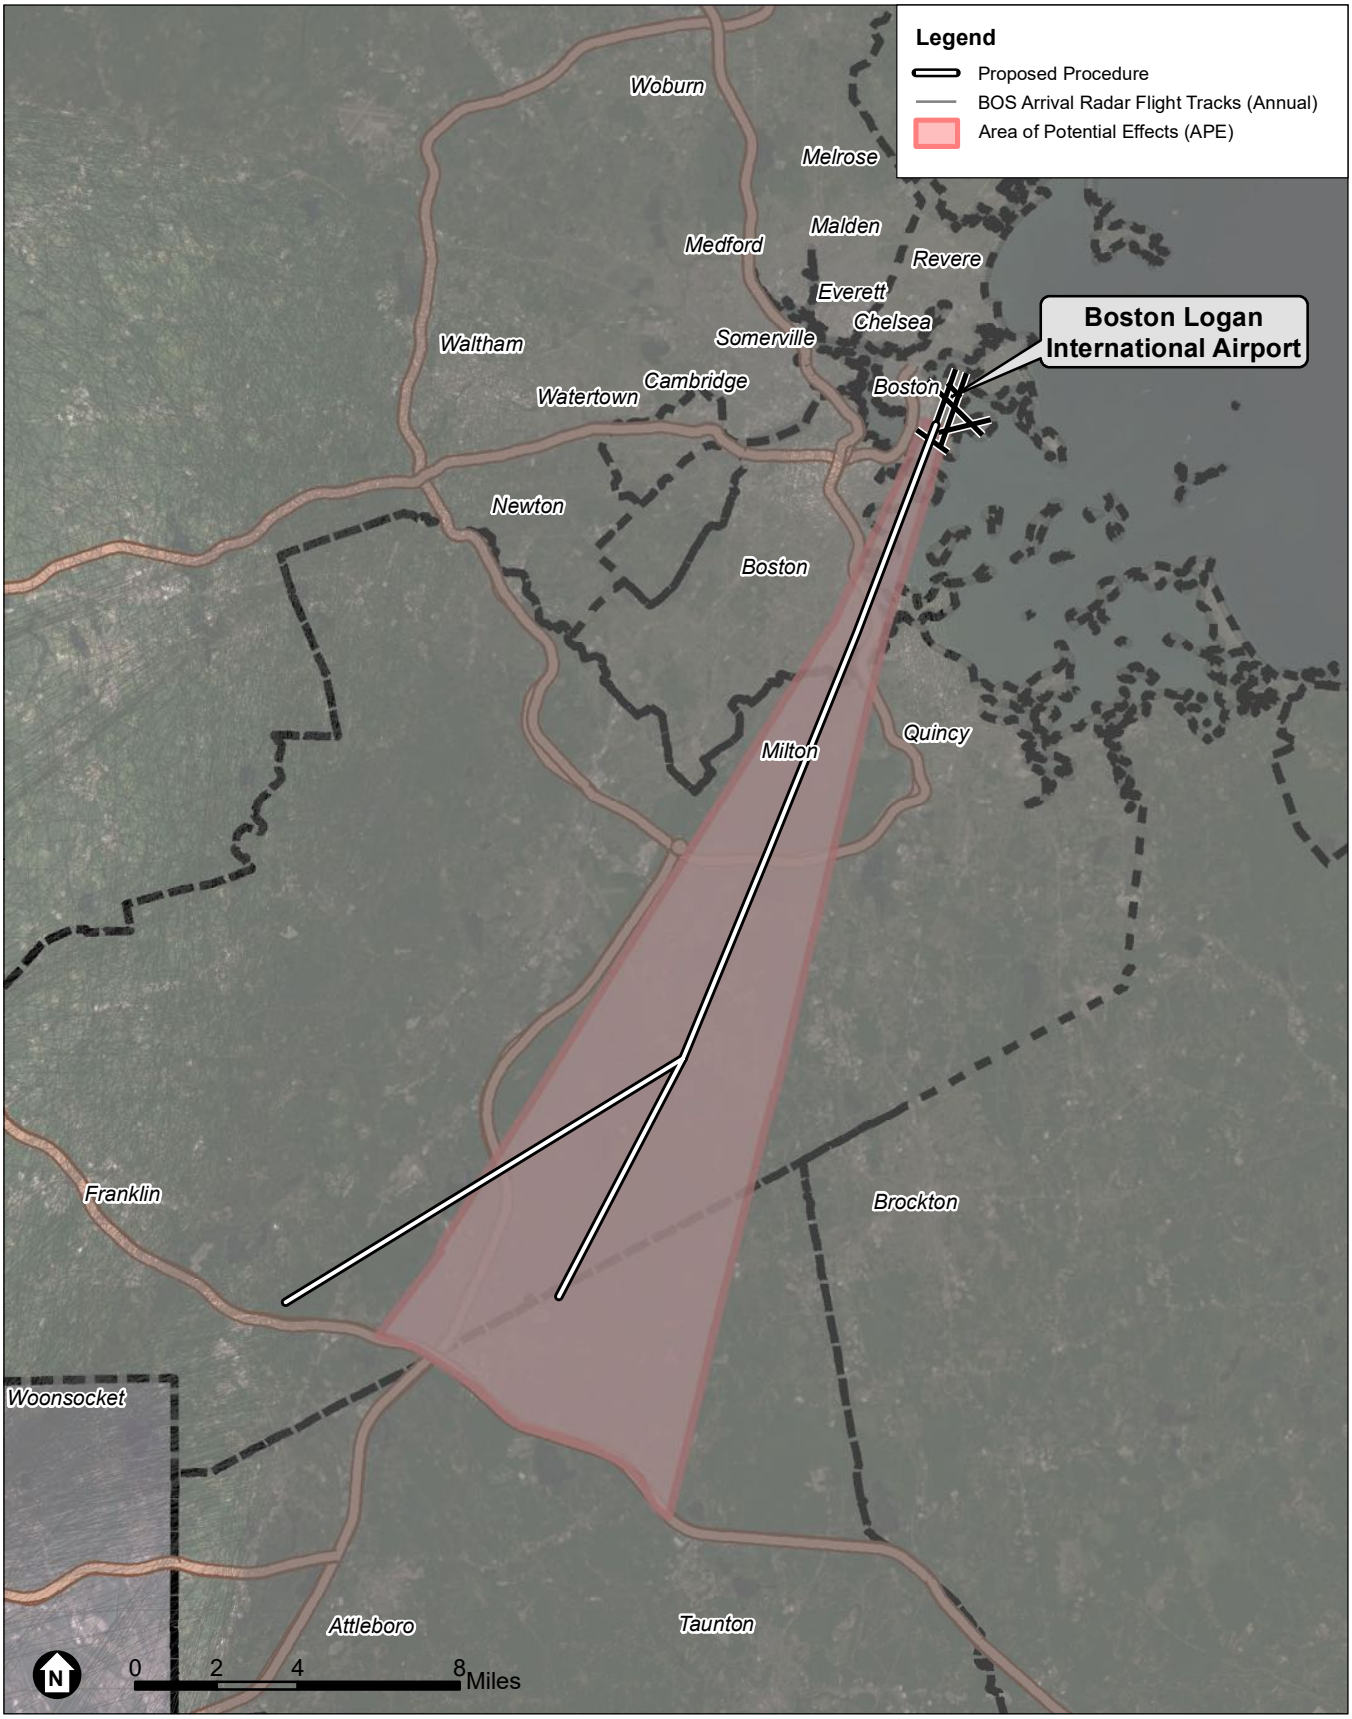


When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.



For more information on the analyses performed as a part of the Draft EA, please visit www.faabostonworkshops.com for a copy of the Draft EA. More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

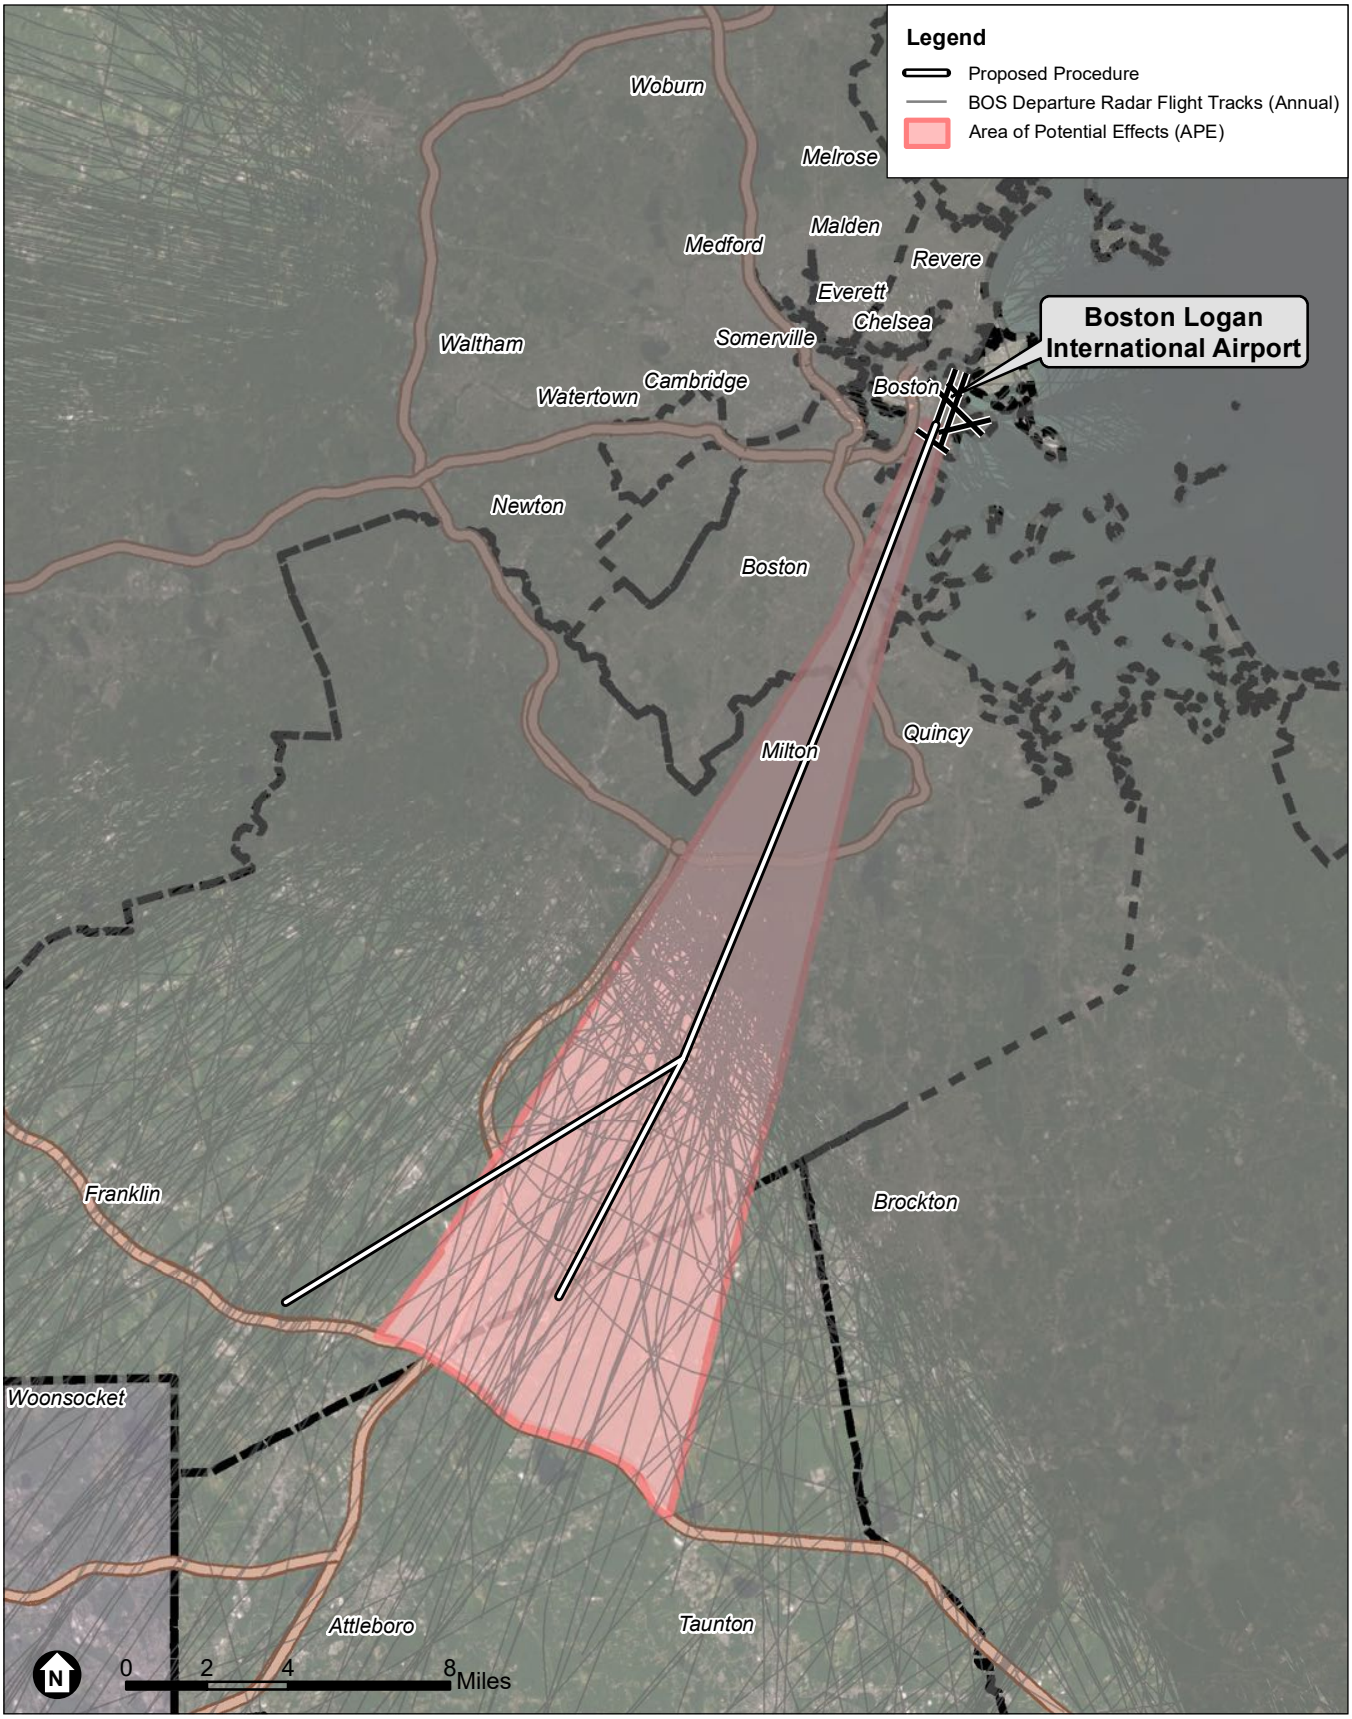
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.



When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. If you have any additional comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact me at veronda.johnson@faa.gov or at the address below.

Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

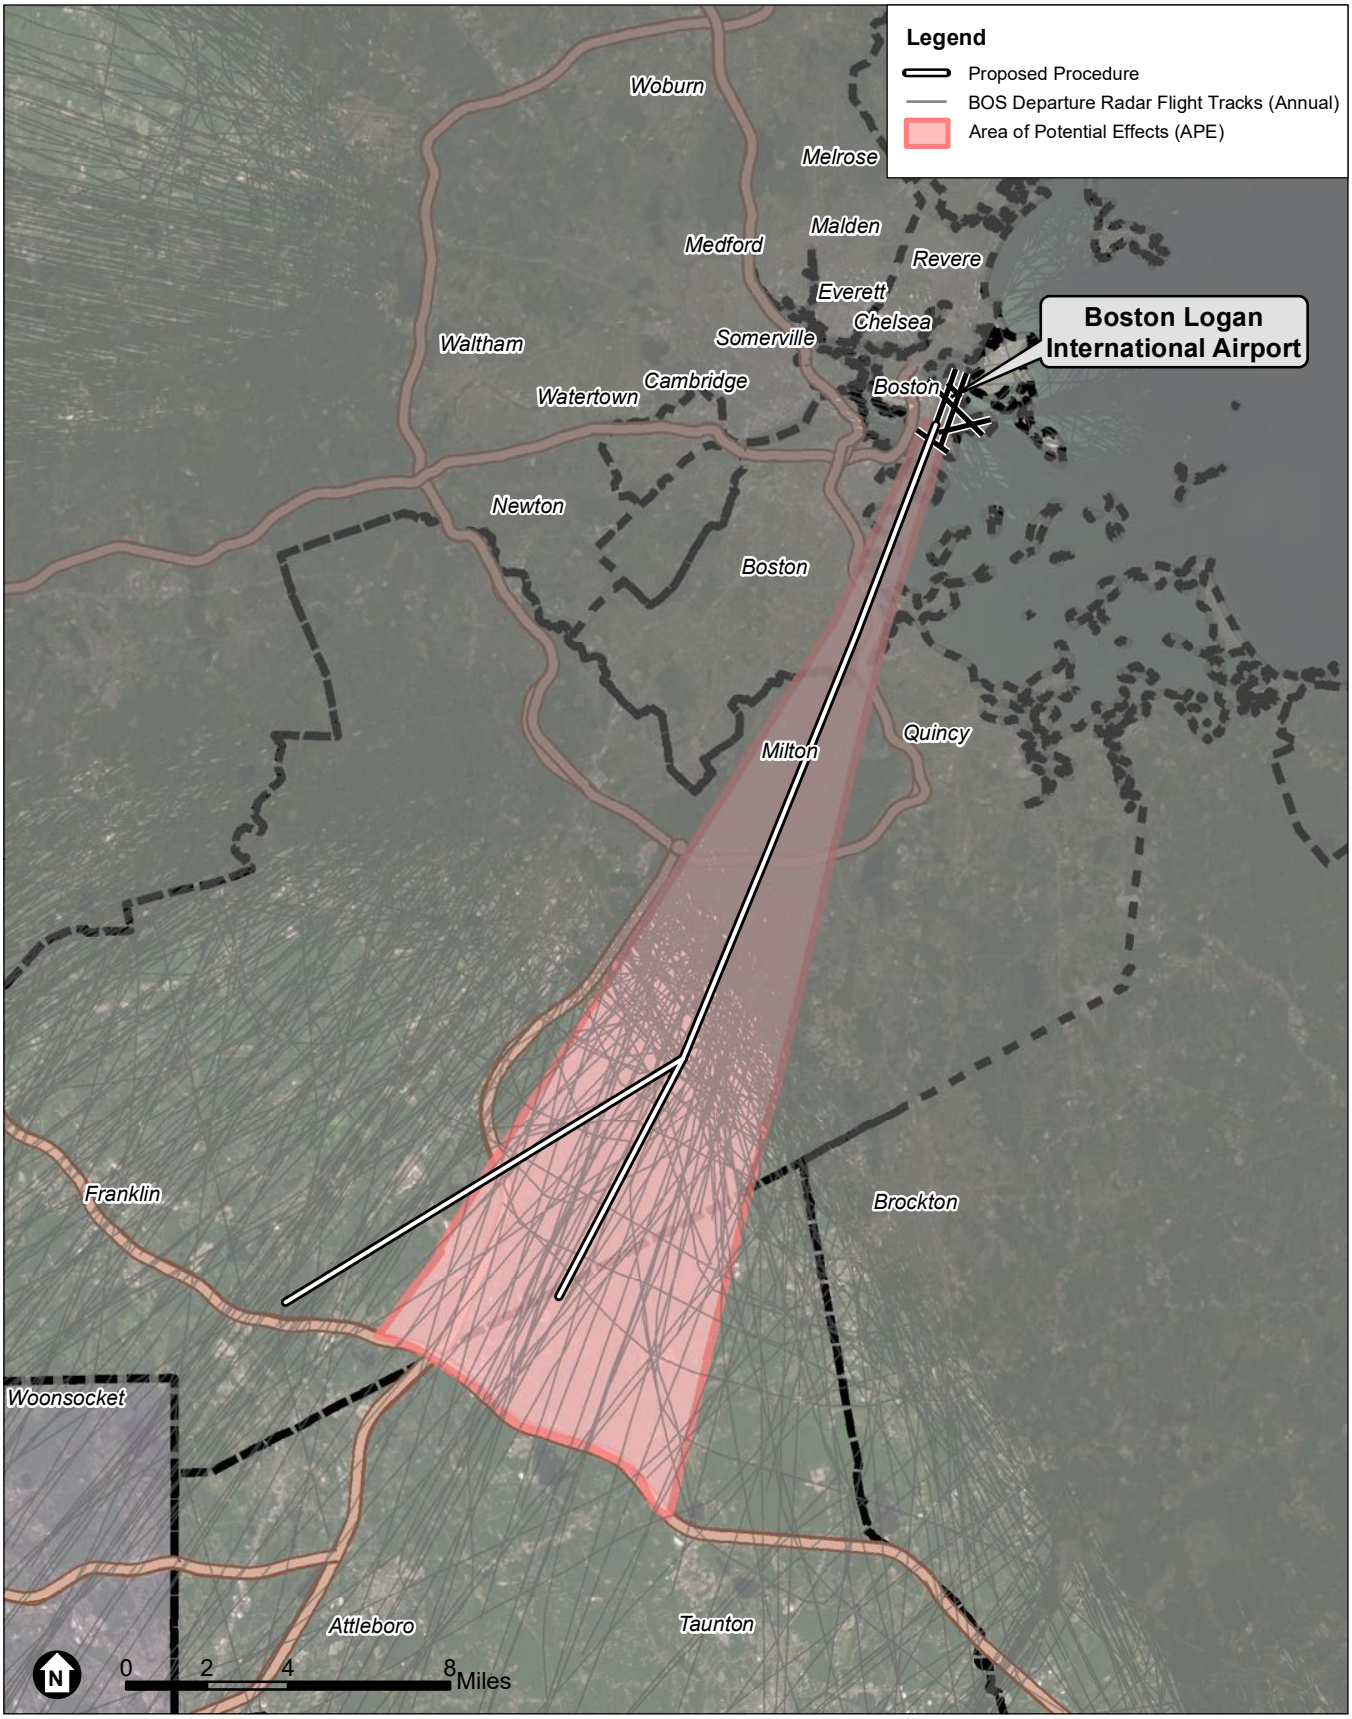
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

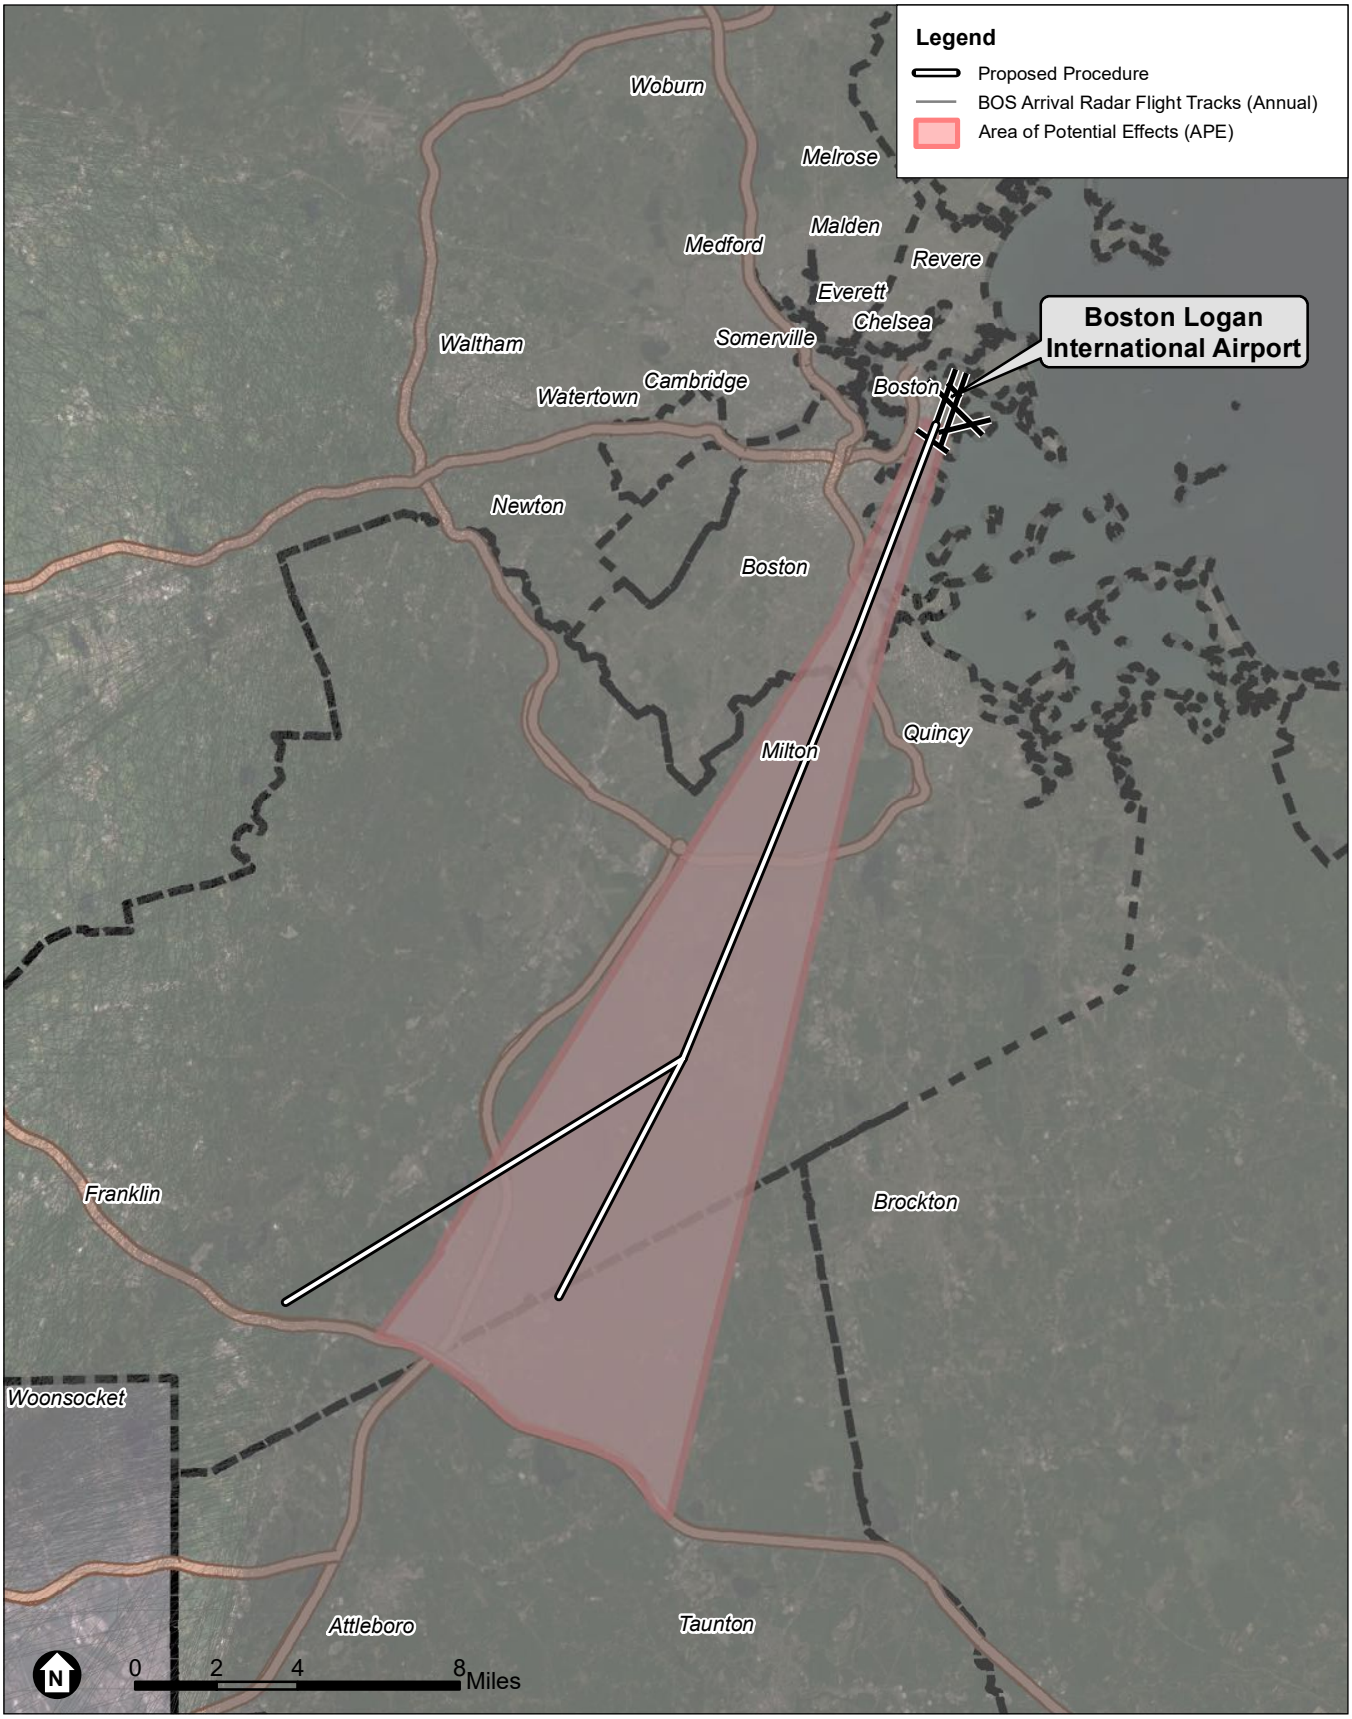


When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.



For more information on the analyses performed as a part of the Draft EA, please visit www.faabostonworkshops.com for a copy of the Draft EA. More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

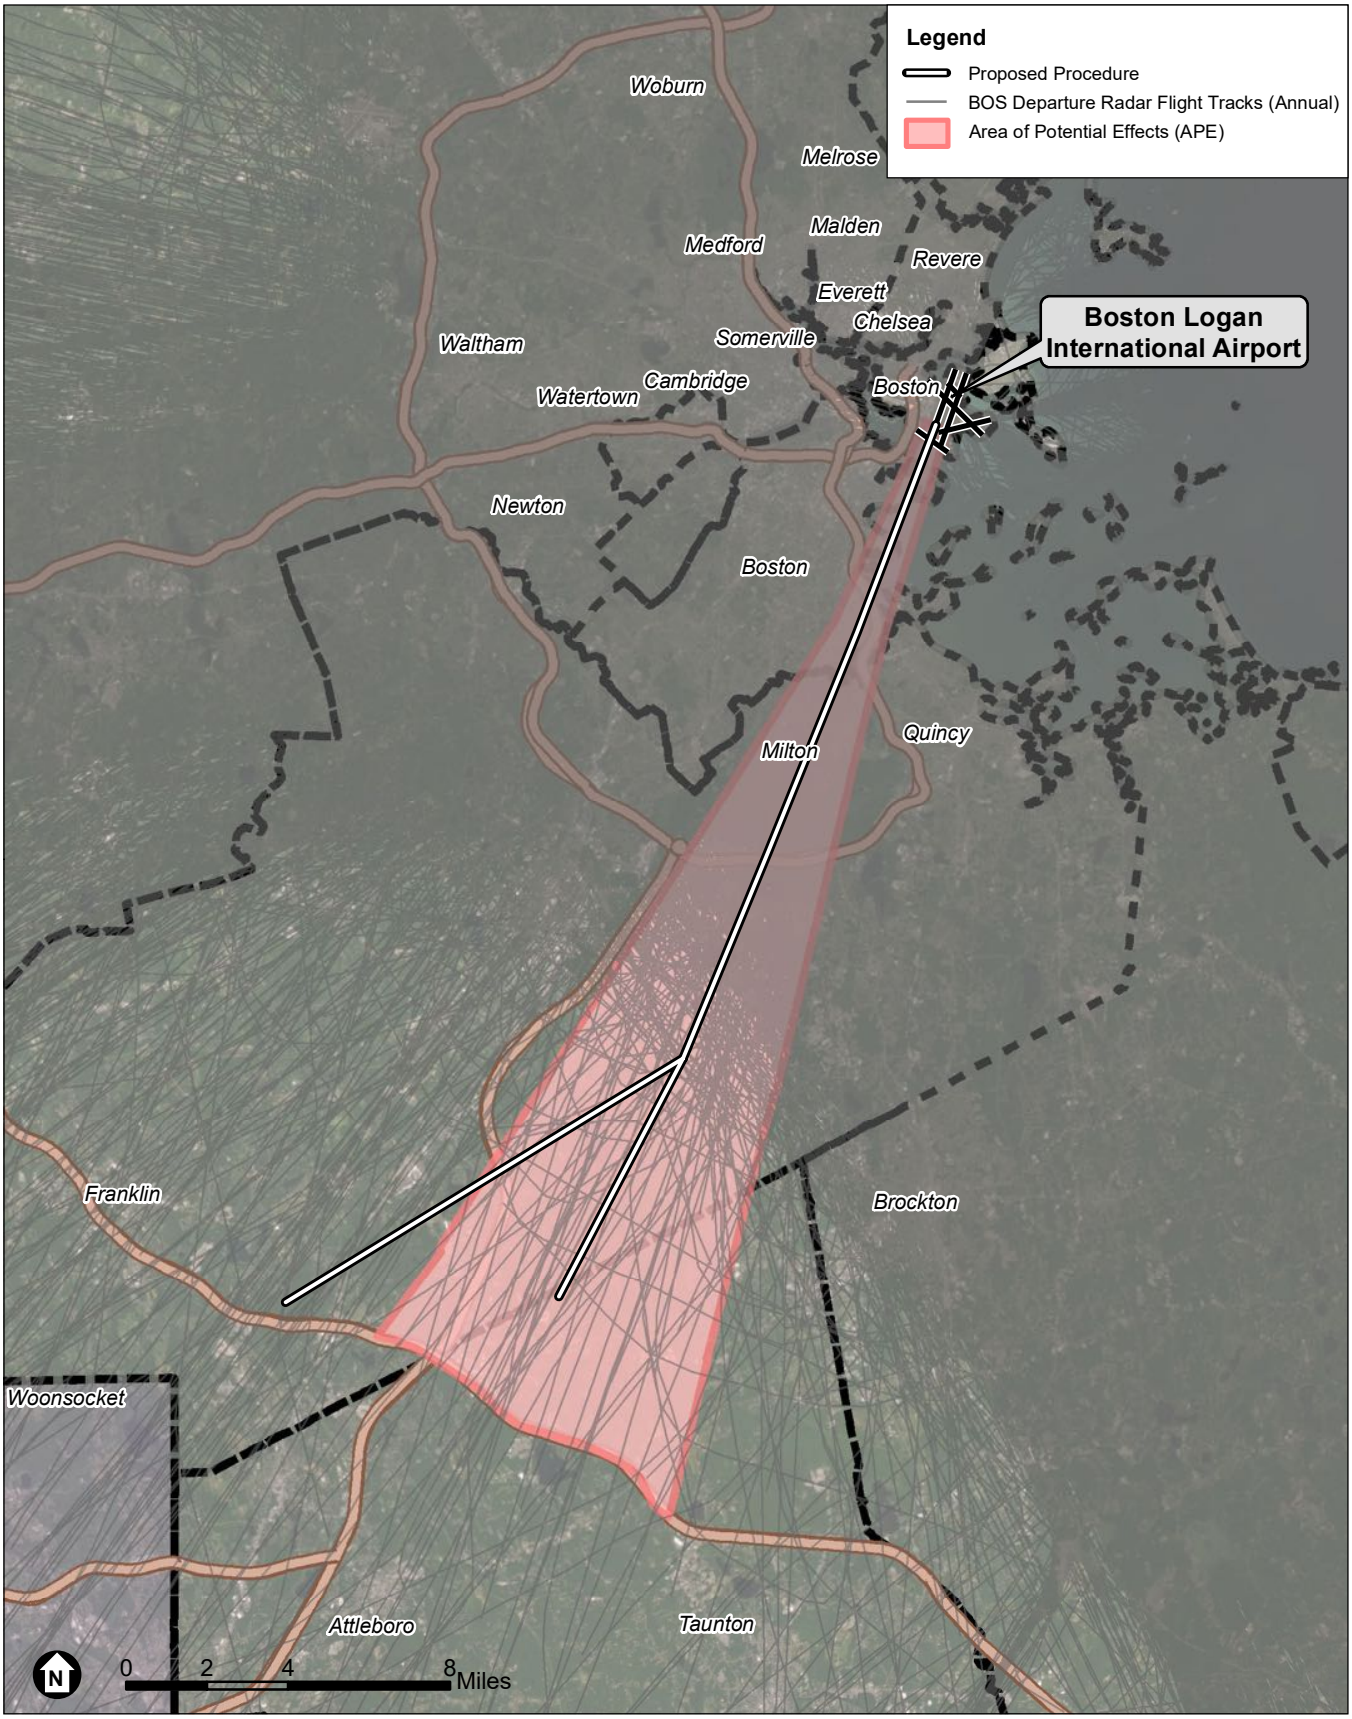
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.



When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. If you have any additional comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact me at veronda.johnson@faa.gov or at the address below.

Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

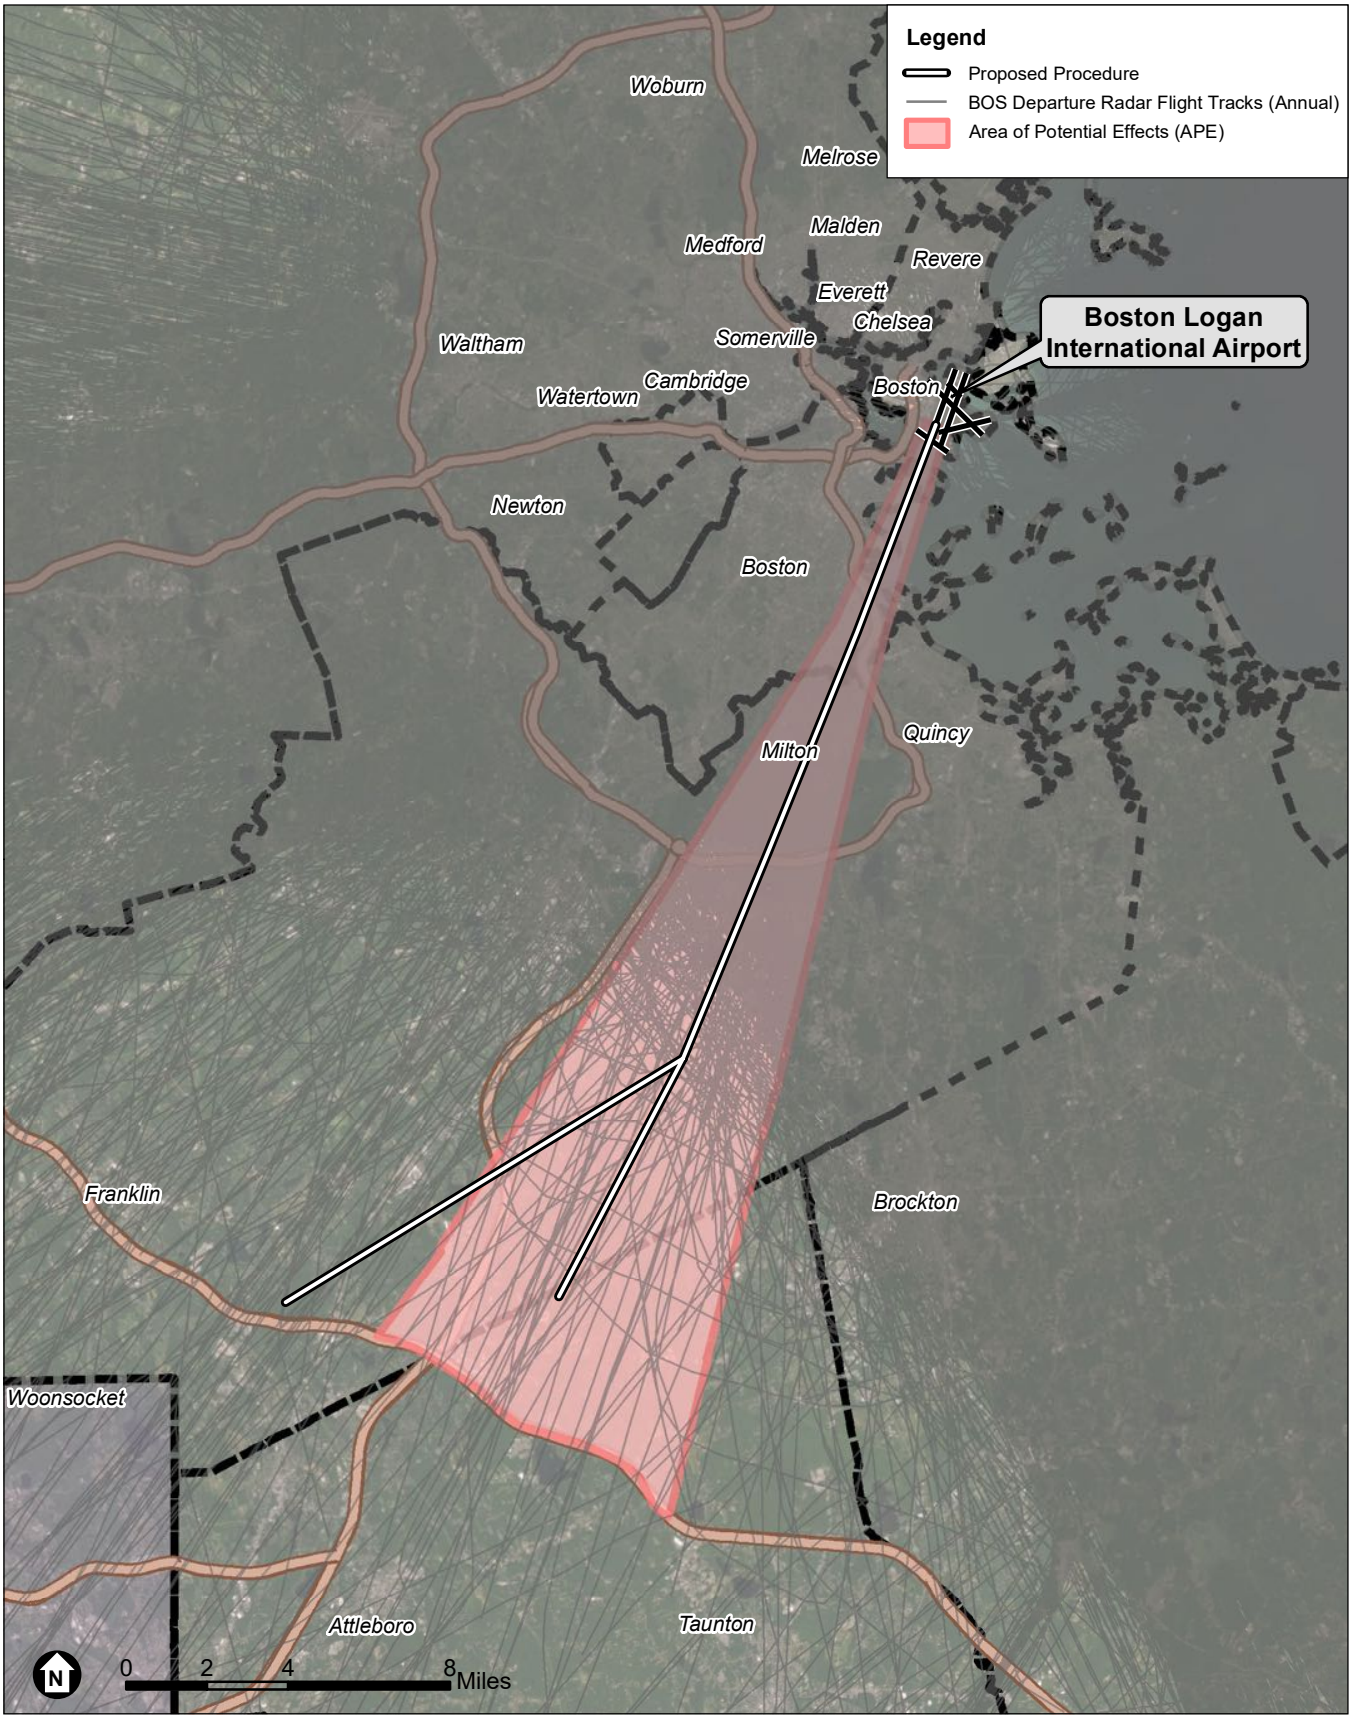
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.



When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

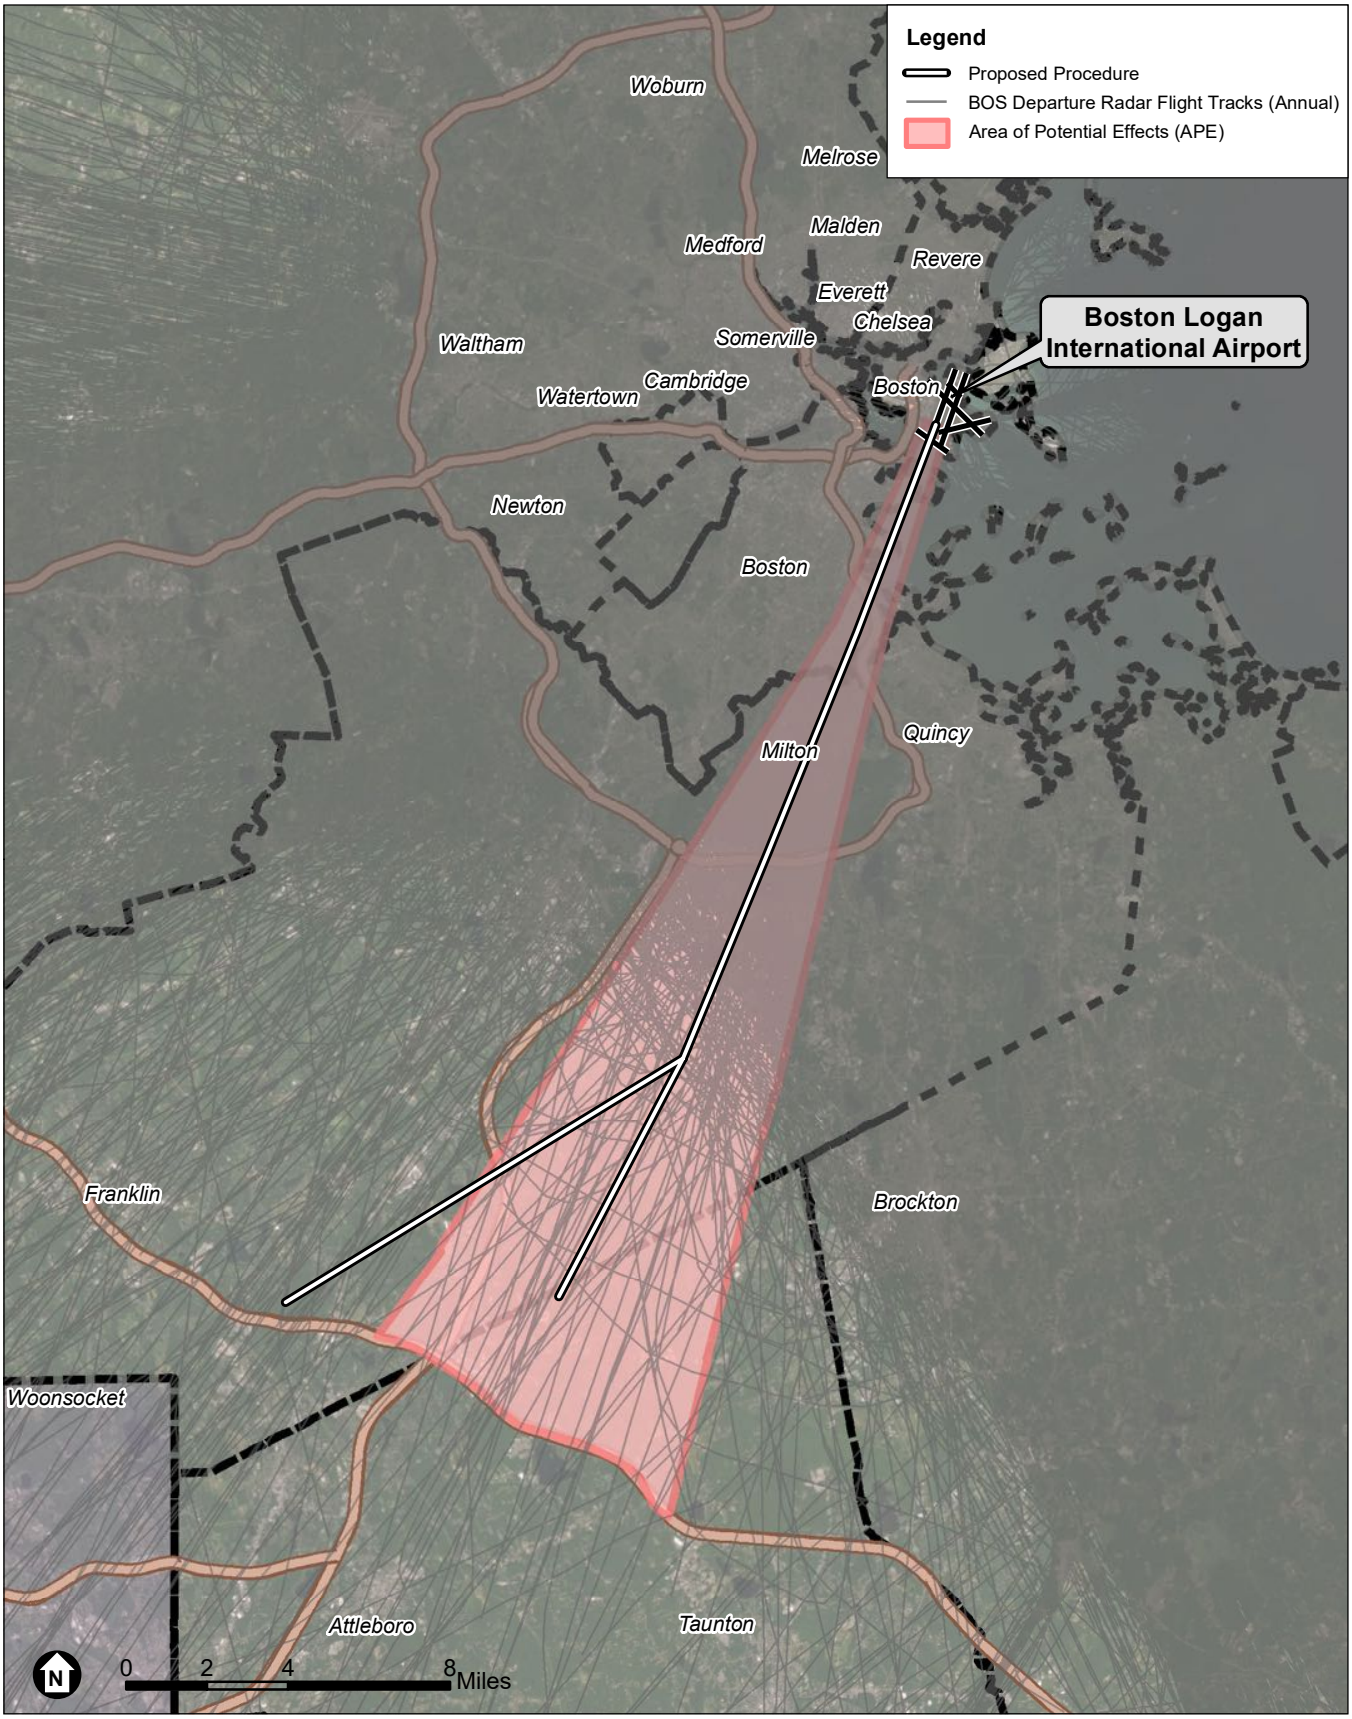
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.



When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. If you have any additional comments or questions on this undertaking, please contact me at veronda.johnson@faa.gov or at the address below.

Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA

To Whom It May Concern,

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS). This new procedure would allow for aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation as well as allow for landing during low visibility conditions. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS.

Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(a), the FAA previously consulted with the Massachusetts Historical Commission to identify the Area of Potential Effects for this undertaking. In continuing with our responsibilities under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and its implementing regulations, the FAA invites you to participate as a consulting parting and submits this assessment of adverse effects, which concludes with a proposed Finding of No Adverse Effects and our supporting rationale for that finding. The FAA seeks your views or comments on this finding, which can be addressed to the FAA using the email or address given at the conclusion of this letter. Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.5(c), please provide any comments within 30 days from receipt of this letter.

Project Background

As described in greater detail in the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment (EA), which can be accessed at www.faabostonworkshops.com, the FAA is evaluating a new proposed Area Navigation (RNAV) Global Positioning System (GPS) instrument approach procedure at BOS. This new procedure, which is depicted in Attachments A and B, is needed to allow aircraft to land onto Runway 4L with GPS technological automation. The current absence of an RNAV procedure to Runway 4L precludes use of the runway during low visibility conditions. The proposed procedure route is an overlay of existing arrivals and is expected to lead to a net increase of 255 annual arrivals to BOS generally, which represents 0.1% of the total annual arrivals, and an increase of 359 annual arrivals specifically to Runway 4L. These additional procedural capabilities would increase the safety and efficiency of the airspace around BOS. Publication of the proposed procedure would constitute an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

Regulatory Overview

Under NEPA, the FAA is responsible for analyzing the impacts of its action on historical, architectural, archeological and cultural resources as part of its broader review of the human environment. Because the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is the principal statute concerning such resources, most of this analysis is conducted in coordination with the process under Section 106 of the NHPA, which requires federal agencies to consider the effects of their projects on properties listed, or eligible for listing, in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). As this is an FAA Action, the FAA document Section 106 Handbook: How to Assess the Effects of FAA Actions on Historic Properties under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act was consulted and referenced in order to make this determination.

Review of Historic/Eligible Properties

The National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and the Boston Landmarks Commission's data sources were used to gather a comprehensive directory of all potential historic and cultural resources within the APE. A total of 19 properties within the APE were found to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places as historic districts or individual properties in accordance with the criteria described in the NHPA. These 19 properties are identified and described in Table 1. A total of 4,184 state and local designated properties were identified within the APE and are summarized by their location in Table 2. These 4,184 properties represent the group of potential resources that would be evaluated for National Register eligibility. For the purposes of this proposed finding, we assume all of these properties are eligible for the National Register and propose a finding of no adverse effect for all properties within the APE currently listed, determined eligible for listing, and assumed eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Table 1: National Register of Historic Places Properties within the APE

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Milton Cemetery	Milton Cemetery contains some of the best examples of funerary art from the colonial times to the Victorian era. An historic garden cemetery, it was established as the Town's only cemetery in 1672.
Spring Brook Cemetery	The most prominent structure in the cemetery, Card Memorial Chapel, was designed by Charles Eastman & built in 1898 and funded by Simon & Mary Card in memory of their daughter Lulu.
Dorchester Park	Dorchester Park is a historic park bounded by Dorchester Avenue, Richmond, Adams and Richview Streets in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts.

NRHP Property Name	Brief Property Description
Dorchester--Milton Lower Mills Industrial District (Boundary Increase)	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is a historic district on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.
Savin Hill Historic District	The Savin Hill Historic District is significant for its association with the development of the area from a mid-19th century speculative housing development for Boston's upper-middle class to a close-knot neighborhood of residents from diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. The surviving historic resources catalogue Savin Hill's rich history and remain a cohesive collection of well-preserved historic homes. The district further attains significance as an intact collection of buildings representing a full range of architectural styles.
Blue Hills Parkway	The Blue Hills Parkway, a 1.5-mile-long boulevard in Boston and Milton, is significant as one of the earliest connecting parkways designed for the Metropolitan Parks Commission (MPC) by Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot and its successor firm, Olmsted Brothers, and it is emblematic of the firm's principles of parkway creation. A divided highway that runs directly south through early 20"'-century residential neighborhoods, the Blue Hills Parkway directly connects the Blue Hills Reservation (the largest open space in Metropolitan Boston) with Boston, the Neponset River Reservation, and Truman Parkway.
Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, in Massachusetts, is especially noteworthy because it is the first regional park system in the United States.
Old Harbor Reservation Parkways, Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston	The Old Harbor Reservation Parkways are three historic roads in the Old Harbor area of Boston. They are part of the Boston parkway system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.
Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District	The Dorchester-Milton Lower Mills Industrial District is located on both sides of the Neponset River in the Dorchester area of Boston and in the town of Milton, Massachusetts. It encompasses an industrial factory complex, most of which was historically associated with the Walter Baker & Company, the first major maker of chocolate products in the United States.

Furnace Village Historic District	The Furnace Village Historic District encompasses the historic colonial industrial area in Easton, Massachusetts. At its center is at the intersection of Foundry street, South street and Poquanticut Avenue. The area was settled in 1723, with industrial activity beginning in 1742. The iron furnace was established in 1751, and for industrial purposes, continued in the 19th century. In addition to the colonial era, there is also an employee of the housing of the 19th century.
Milton Centre Historic District	The Milton Centre Historic District is both the historical and geographic center of the town of Milton. The 23-acre historic district includes Canton Avenue between Reedsdale Road and Thacher and Highland Streets. Milton Centre is historically significant for its association with the development of the town following the relocation of the third meeting house to Academy Hill in 1728, and the subsequent shift of the town center from Milton Hill.
Scott's Woods Historic District	Scott's Woods Historic District is the area of Hillside, Harland and Forest Streets between Randolph Avenue and the ridge between Hancock and Bugbee Hills, now the MDC Blue Hills Reservation. The Scott's Woods Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a semirural, residential area that contains a significant concentration of 18th, 19th and early 20th century dwellings and barns that reflect the Town's agricultural and architectural history from 1713 to 1932, the district' s period of significance. Originally known as the "Blue Hill Land," a three thousand-acre tract of land sold by the town of Boston in 1711 to four residents of Milton. The area in the southwest part of Milton is thought to have been named for a member of the Scott Family that lived in the area in the early eighteenth century. Hillside Street, named for being literally on the 'side' of Blue Hill, is the major thoroughfare in the district.
Milton Hill Historic District	Milton Hill Historic District is located on a lofty hill between Milton Village and Algerene Corner, formerly known as Union Square at the junction of Adams and Centre Streets. The Milton Hill Historic District in Milton, Massachusetts is a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in the Town. As Milton developed from a rural community to a prosperous suburb of Boston, Milton Hill, throughout the period of significance, 1740-1945, has been the home of wealthy Milton and Boston business, professional and civic leaders. It began its rise to prominence as an estate district in 1742 with the establishment of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate. For the next two hundred years, attracted by the rural scenery afforded by the Neponset River and the Blue Hills and the proximity of the Town's commercial center and Boston, prominent families built country homes, a number designed by noted national and local architects, including William Ralph Emerson; Peabody and Steams; and Perry, Shaw and Hepbum.

Harrison Square Historic District	Clam Point (also known as Harrison Square) is a sub-neighborhood in Boston, noteworthy for its collection of substantial Italianate Mansard residences. The area is known to have the most cohesive, intact collection of mansion-scale, mid-19th century housing in Boston, and includes the Park, Everett, Freeport, Mill, Ashland, Blanche streets, and Victory Road in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.
Canton Corner Historic District	The Canton Corner Historic District encompasses the historic town center of Canton, Massachusetts. Centered on the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, it includes more than 25 properties and 170 acres (69 ha), whose architectural history spans 250 years of occupation and includes the town's major civic buildings.
Boyden, Seth, House	The Seth Boyden House is a historic house at 135 Oak Street in Foxborough, Massachusetts. The home is significant for its unusual architectural design as well for its association with the Boyden family, whose members were prominent locally and regionally in the 18th and 19th century,
Borderland Historic District	The Borderland Historic District was the 1,200 acre estate of Blanche Ames Ames. The mansion was constructed in 1910 and the property includes a system of ponds, dams, and causeways surrounding the mansion. The exterior of the mansion was built using locally cut field stones. The district is considered significant due to its connection to the estate of Blanche Ames Ames. She was a inventor who was involved in art, farming, engineering and politics. She designed a hexagonal lumber cutter, patented a method for ensnaring airplanes in wires hung from balloons during World War II, and developed a water anti-pollution device in the late 1960s.

Assessment of Noise and Visual Impacts by Proposed Action

In our earlier correspondence, the FAA noted that we are "considering the possibility that changes in noise levels or additional visual impacts from an increase in overflights could alter the character or use of certain kinds of historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute." In order to address this possibility, an assessment was done to further quantify the auditory and visual impacts on the historic properties within the Area of Potential Effects.

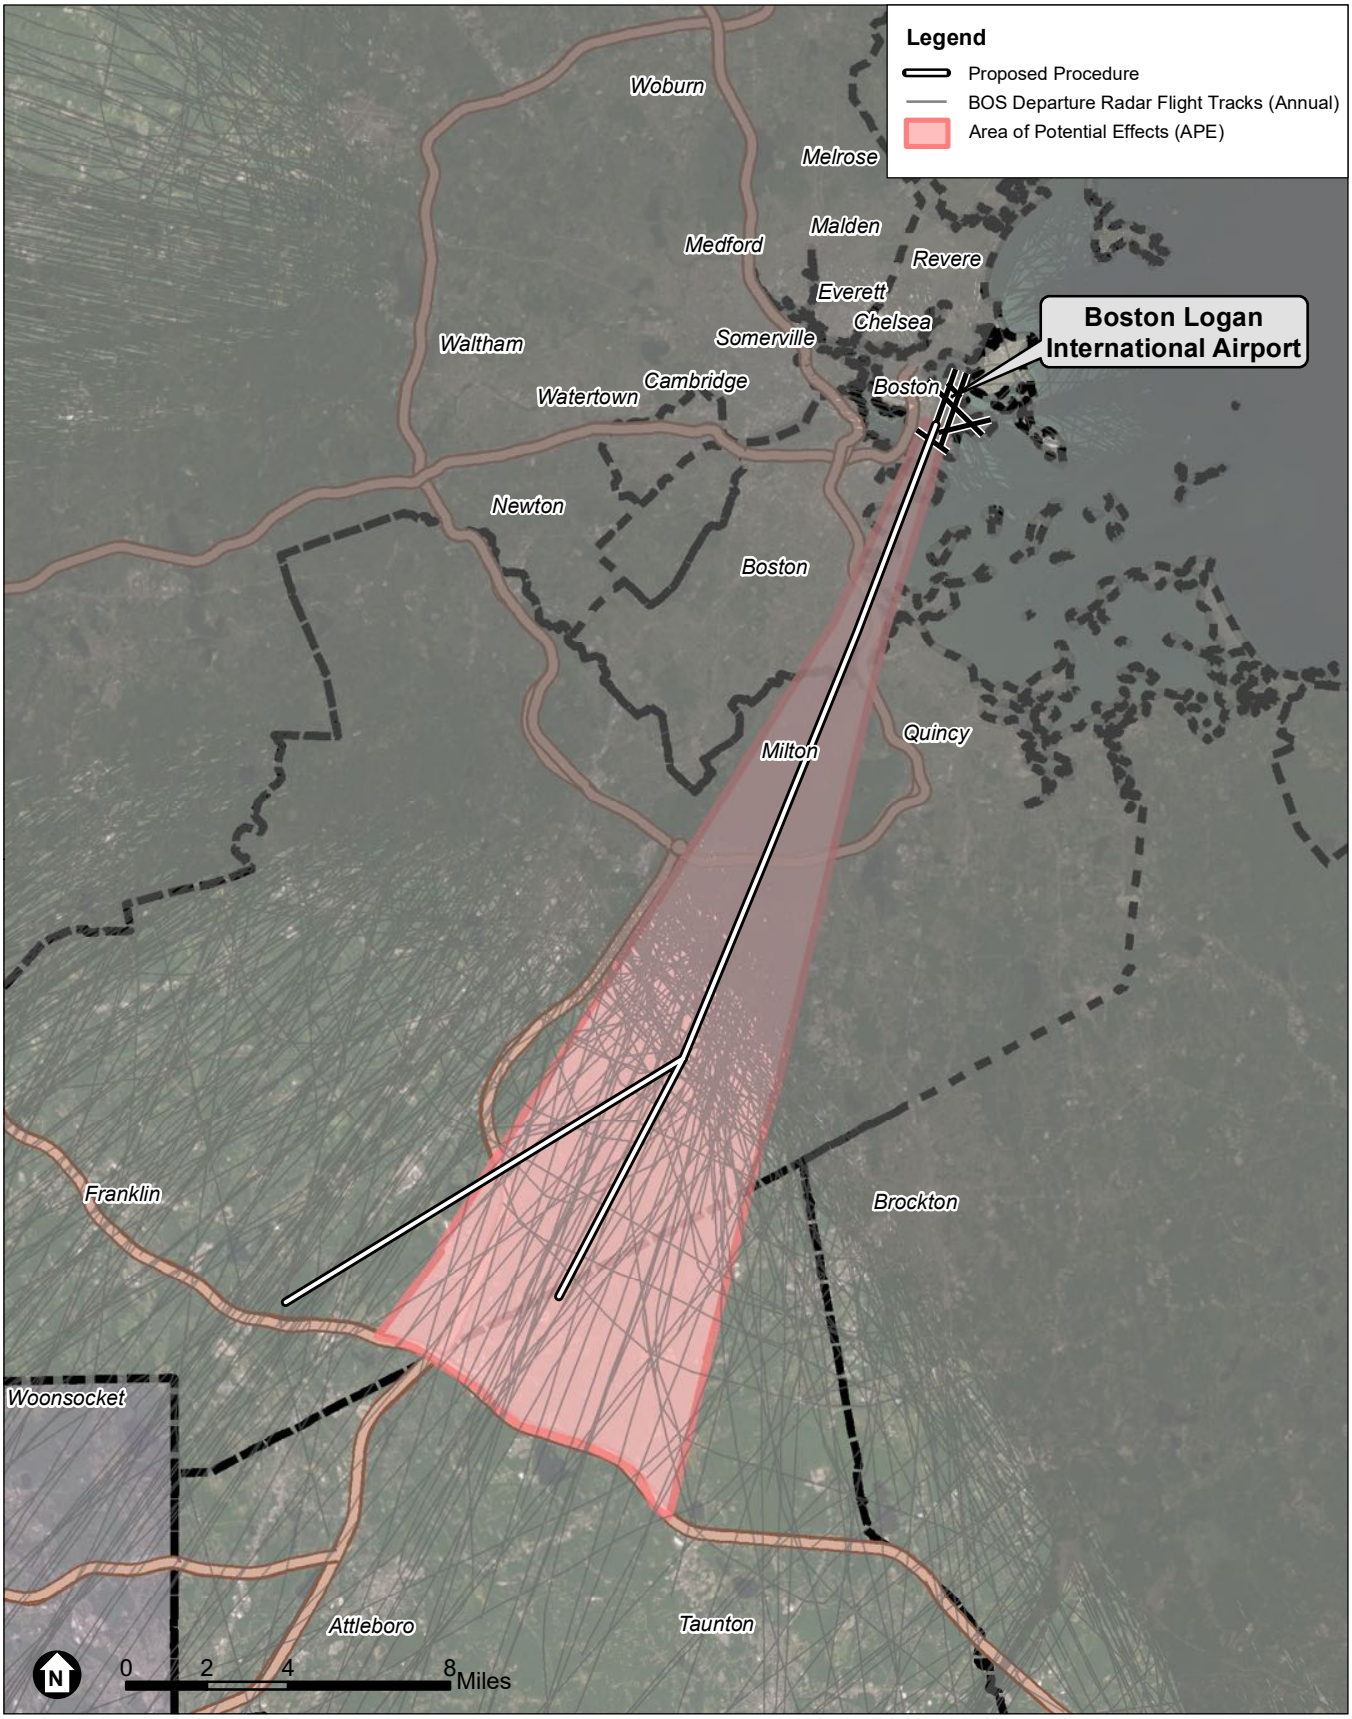
In order to assess the auditory impacts, the FAA used a metric known as Day-night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used here to assess the potential impact on every identified historic property within the Area of Potential Effects.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL is a graphical representation of the distribution of noise over the surrounding area from an airport's average operations. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours." In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.), the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed. The weighting penalty accounts for the more intrusive nature of noise during the nighttime hours. The significance thresholds for aircraft noise for DNL, as spelled out in FAA Order 1050.1F, are given below.

- For DNL 65 dB and higher: +1.5 dB

This threshold has been used by FAA for many years and is applied at airports across the country and will be used to determine noise impacts on historic properties within the APE. The use of this threshold is consistent with the Section 106 analyses for many FAA projects, including the Northern California and Southern Florida Metroplex projects, two of FAA's most recent projects that also modified the flight path of aircraft through the airspace.

According to FAA Order 1050.1F, a significant noise impact could occur to noise sensitive land uses if it had a level of DNL 65 dB with the Proposed Action and also experienced an increase of 1.5 dB when compared to the No Action Alternative. The FAA also recognizes that, in limited instances, resources that have a "quiet setting" as a qualifying attribute may be adversely affected by noise increases that would otherwise not be significant. There are no NRHP properties with a noise exposure of DNL 65 that experience a 1.5 dB noise increase. Further, the NRHP properties were reviewed and none of them were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook.

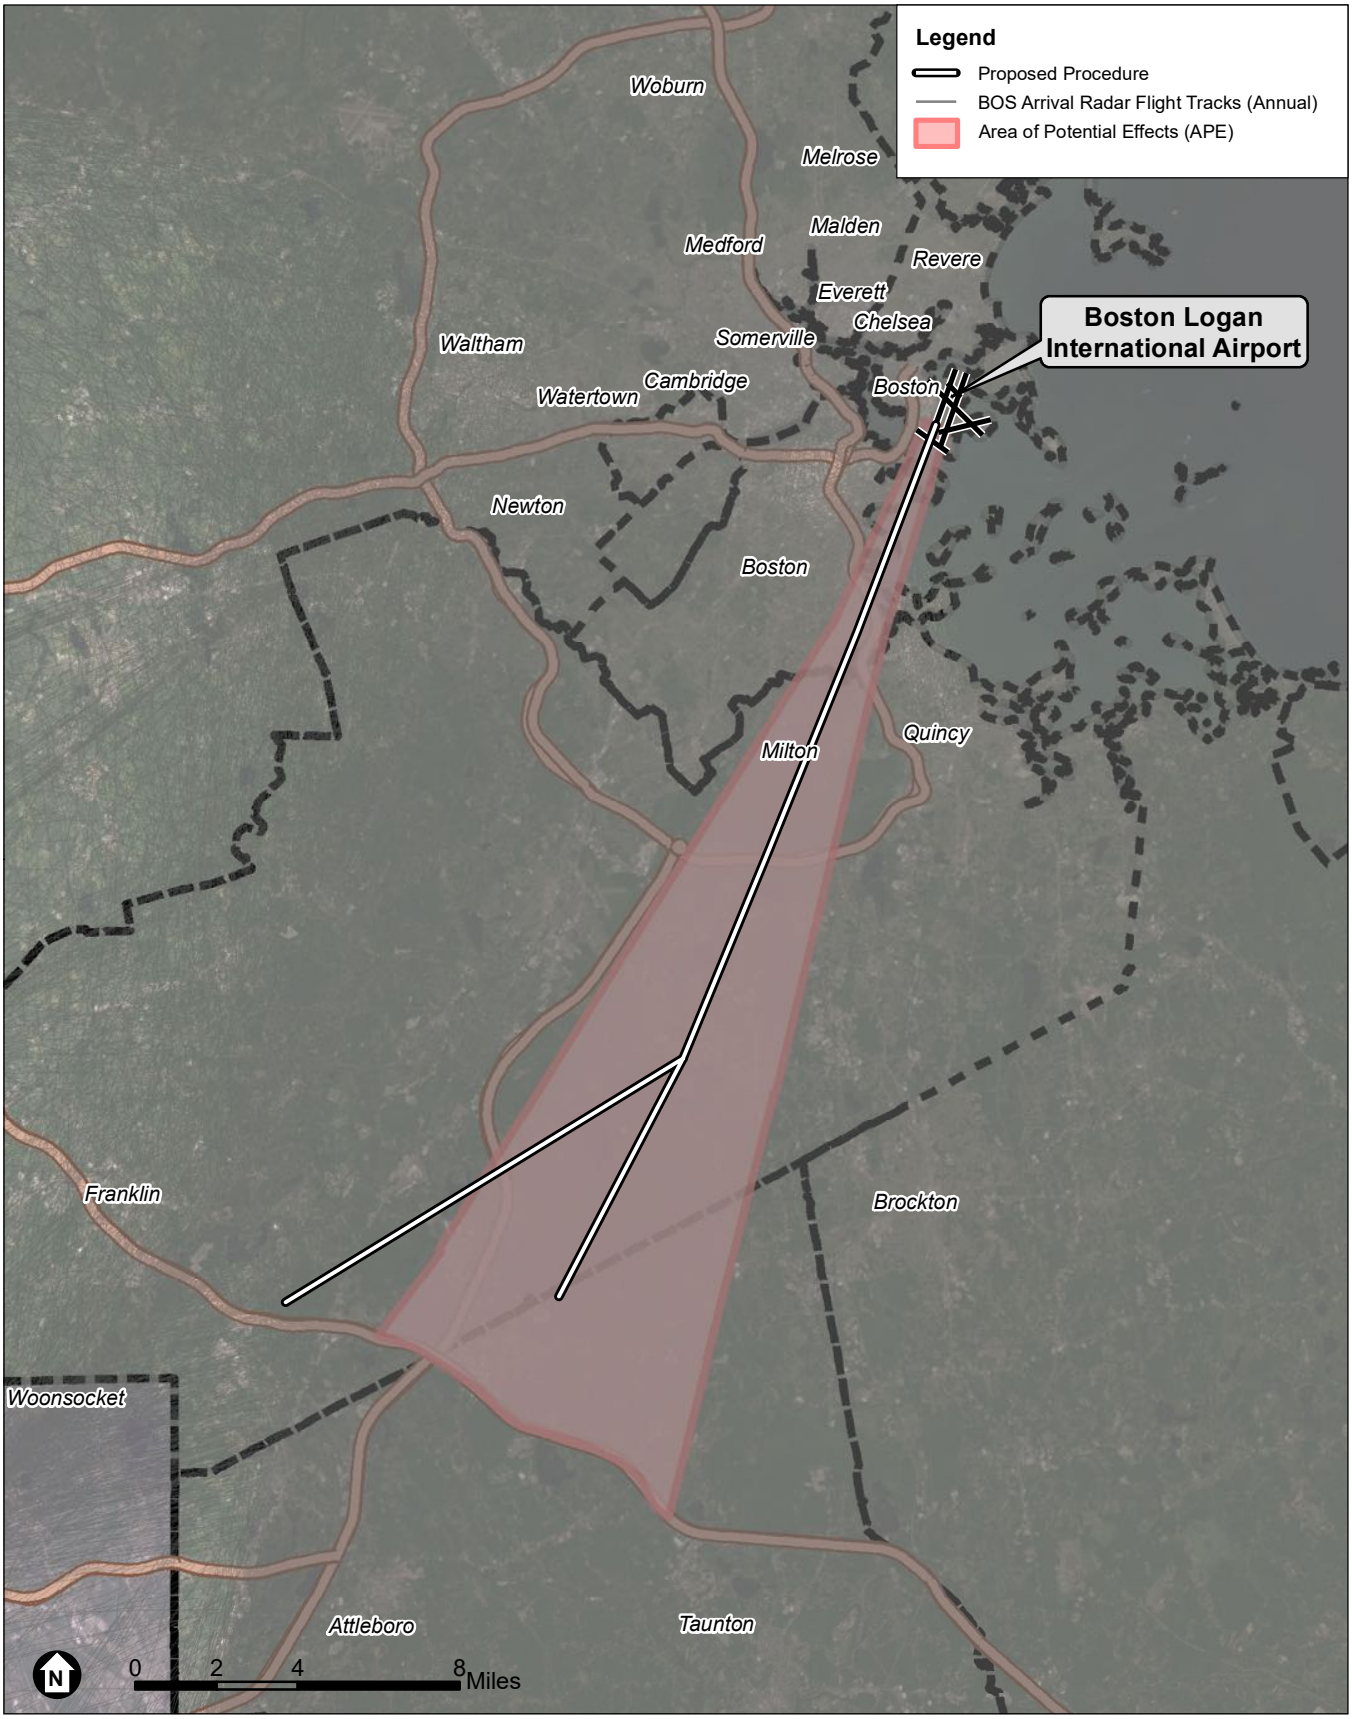


When the analysis is expanded to include the state and local designated properties that are assumed to be eligible for the NRHP, there are no properties that experience a 1.5 dB noise level increase with a proposed action noise level of DNL 65 or greater. As indicated in Table 4.6-3 of the Draft EA, the maximum exposed noise level decreases as a result of the Proposed Project

when compared to the No Action Alternative when considering towns/neighborhoods as a whole. Furthermore, as described below, the largest proposed noise changes within the APE are multiple orders of magnitude below the noise thresholds given within FAA Order 1050.1F.

The FAA's noise analysis demonstrates that historic resources will generally experience equivalent noise exposure with the addition of the Proposed Action. Specifically, the maximum change in noise exposure for a historic property is less than 0.2 dB across all historic properties in the APE. For example, one of these properties has a value of 22 dB under the No Action Alternative and 22.1 dB with the Proposed Procedure. Importantly, as depicted in Attachment A, the procedure is an overlay of existing traffic to Runway 4L and is only expected to lead to an annual net increase of 255 arrivals to BOS, out of a current total of 205,837 arrivals. In sum, the FAA will not be introducing audible impacts to resources not already experiencing noise impacts, and any change in noise exposure will be minimal.

In order to assess the potential visual impacts of the historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at BOS from the previous memorandum was reassessed to compare to the newly designated APE. Considering one year of radar track data, the APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually. On an average daily basis that corresponds to 216.1 arrival and 52.0 departure overflights. The Proposed Action is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. When considering the APE as a whole, the increase in overflights would amount to just a 0.26% increase in overflights and would not introduce audible or visual noise in the APE. In order to confirm that the overflights over the APE were not focused on particular historic resources in the APE, the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights was mapped over the APE in Attachments A and B respectively. Attachment A shows that the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flights become more disperse as the APE moves to the southwest. However, Attachment B, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, show that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE.



For more information on the analyses performed as a part of the Draft EA, please visit www.faabostonworkshops.com for a copy of the Draft EA. More information on the noise analysis can be found at www.faabostonworkshops.com/noise-visualization/ and in Sections 3.4.6 and 4.6 of the Draft EA. The Noise Modeling Technical Report is included in Appendix D of the Draft EA.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

In order to establish a Finding of No Adverse Effect, the Proposed Action must not meet any of the criteria spelled out in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook, which are based on criteria in ACHP's section 106 regulations in 36 CFR Part 800. This section presents why the Proposed Action does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the Proposed Action physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The Proposed Action will not have any physical impact on any property. The Proposed Action changes the location of arrival flights in the airspace around Boston Logan International Airport.

- Does the Proposed Action alter the property in any way that is consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The Standards guide the design and implementation of physical changes to historic properties. This may include changes in use, material repair or substitution, or modification of historically important features. The Proposed Action is located in the airspace above historic resources does not result in any changes in use, material alteration, or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the Proposed Action remove a property from its historic location?
    - The Proposed Action does not remove any property from its location.

- Does the Proposed Action change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The Proposed Action does not change the character of a property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.
    - Any changes to setting as a result of the Proposed action would be audible or visual features which are discussed in the following criterion.

- Does the Proposed Action introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual feature to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - Audible: there will not be an introduction of audible noise as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the noise impacts of the Proposed Action on all of the historic resources in the APE will either decrease noise exposure or cause increases that are orders of magnitude below the significance thresholds for DNL aircraft noise as described in FAA Order 1050.1F and therefore will not cause an introduction of audible impact on any of the properties.
    - Visual: there will not be an introduction of visual impacts as a result of the Proposed Action. Furthermore, the entire APE currently experiences 268 average daily overflights as described in the above analysis. The Proposed Action will add less than 1 additional overflight per day. This increase will not change the current visual features of any historic resource in the APE, as depicted in Attachment B.

- Does the Proposed Action result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale or lease?

- The Proposed Action will not cause any property to be sold or transferred.

Given the results discussed in this letter, the FAA is putting forth at this point a Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. This determination is based on the findings discussed in this letter, which includes that none of the NRHP listed properties reviewed herein were found to have a "quiet setting" as described in the FAA's Section 106 Handbook. Furthermore, the net change in aircraft operations as a result of the Proposed Action would be minimal and would not cause an adverse effect, including no physical impacts and no introduction of audible or visual impacts within the APE.

Public Meetings, Comments, and Consultation

The FAA conducted Virtual Public Workshops for the Draft EA on October 23rd, and October 28th, 2020. By attending the Virtual Public Workshops, participants were provided with an overview of the Draft EA which includes results from the noise analysis performed to assess the potential noise impacts of the Proposed Action on historic resources and populations located within the General Study Area. The MHC concurred with the APE on December 8, 2020 so the impacts were shown for historic resources throughout the entire Study Area. During the meeting, the FAA responded to a large number of questions from the community. These meetings were recorded and remain on the FAA's YouTube page for interested community members to review. During the meeting and other forms of engagement, the FAA received over 40 comments regarding the Proposed Action. The FAA is currently reviewing and developing responses to these comments to be shared with the public as part of the Final Environmental Assessment but it should be noted that none of the comments mention any potential impact to historic resources from the Proposed Action.

We look forward to hearing back from you on the FAA's proposed finding. We welcome the input from consulting parties on the historic properties considered as part of the analysis and on the finding itself. RE: Logan Airport RNAV (GPS) RWL 4L Approach Procedures, Boston, MA; MHC# RC.68314

Dear Ms. Johnson:

Staff of the Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) have reviewed the information you submitted, received at this office on June 21, 2021, for the project referenced above.

The information submitted referenced a number of websites where pertinent information could be found. The MHC requires that all information be submitted to this office in hard copy. The MHC does not accept electronic submissions. Please forward the information to this office in hard copy. Please submit a hard copy of the Draft Environmental Assessment (EA) and noise/visual analysis reports.

Additionally, the staff of the MHC understands that the FAA is currently reaching out to historical commissions, regional planning commissions, and other organizations that MHC identified as possibly consulting parties. Please forward all comments from these groups to our office for review.

Finally, the staff of the MHC understands that the FAA has held Virtual Public Workshops which provided an overview to the Environmental Assessment (EA). The letter received states that the FAA received over 40 comments regarding this project. Please forward these comments to our office for review.

These comments are offered to assist in compliance with Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 (36 CFR 800). Please do not hesitate to contact Elizabeth Sherva of my staff if you have any questions.

Dear Ms. Simon,

Your letter dated July 21, 2021 was received by the FAA and we have prepared the requested additional materials for your review. You will find enclosed in this package the following items:

- The Draft Environmental Assessment for the Boston Logan RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L procedure including all appendices.
- The replies received from historical commissions, regional planning commissions, and other organizations as of 8/9/2021, which consists of a single letter from the Foxborough Historical Commission. For your reference, the table below contains all the organizations with whom the proposed finding was shared.
- The comments received from the public in response to the Draft Environmental Assessment.

We would ask that you please expediate your review of the proposed finding if possible. If you have any additional comments or questions on this undertaking, please don't hesitate to contact me at (404)-305-5598, or at veronda.johnson@faa.gov.

RE: Logan Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedures, Boston, MA; MHC# RC.68314

Dear Ms. Johnson:

Staff of the Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) have reviewed the information you submitted, received at this office on August 11, 2021, for the project referenced above.

The FAA's June 21, 2021 submission indicated that at that time the FAA was reaching out to historical commissions, regional planning commission, and other organizations that MHC identified as possible consulting parties. MHC staff had requested that all comments from these groups be submitted to our office for review. The MHC reiterates this request. The MHC received an email request from the FAA on June 14, 2021 for an email address of Air, Inc., one of the potential consulting parties that MHC had recommended be notified. Please confirm that the FAA sent correspondence inviting each party that MHC recommended. Staff would also like to note that many Local Historical Commissions have reduced meetings during the summer months and the notifications may have taken longer to be received by the Local Historical Commissions.

MHC staff understand that there is also a public information session to be hosted by Massport and the FAA scheduled for September 23, 2021 at 5:30pm. The session is regarding the Boston Logan RNAV Study and current Block 2 recommendations. The Study was in response to community concerns related to the FAA's implementation of NextGen procedures including RNAV. Block 2 was identified as a block within the Runway 4L path. Public comments from this information session should be provided to the MHC.

The MHC cannot concur with FAA's finding of "no adverse effect" to historic properties.

The proposed RNAV (GPS) Runway 4L approach procedures will concentrate flights in a more precise vertical and horizontal track. As indicated in the draft Environmental Assessment (EA), the number of overflights will increase and result in an increased number of events when air traffic noise will be heard over historic resources (see 36 CFR 800.5(2)(v)).

These comments are offered to assist in compliance with Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 (36 CFR 800). Please do not hesitate to contact Elizabeth Sherva of my staff if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Brona Simon

Reference: Follow up on Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA (MHC# RC.68314)

Dear Ms. Simon,

Your letter dated September 10, 2021, stating your non-concurrence with our proposed finding of "no adverse effect" was received by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) on September 21, 2021 and we have prepared the following additional information.

To address the issues raised in your letter, we can confirm that FAA did reach out to all of the organizations identified in the Massachusetts Historic Commission (MHC) letter dated July 24, 2020 as possible consulting parties:

- All Local Historical Commissions of the cities and towns in the Area of Potential Effects (APE)
- All Regional Planning Commission in the APE
- Air Inc.
- Eagle Hill Civic Association
- Fair Skies Nation

A letter inviting participation as a consulting party was sent to historical commissions and planning boards from Milton, Quincy, Stoughton, Sharon, Randolph, Norton, Mansfield, Canton, Easton, Foxborough, and Boston, Massachusetts. The Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe, and the Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head were invited to participate in consultation by letters sent June 9, 2021. Air Inc., Eagle Hill Civic Association, Fair Skies Nation, were also invited to participate in consultation, for a total of twenty-seven parties. The Proposed Finding was mailed via USPS to all of these organizations in June 2021 with a signature confirmation with the exceptions of Fair Skies Nation and the Eagle Hill Civic Association to whom the Proposed Finding was emailed. Confirmation of receipt was obtained for all of these potential consulting parties.

The only responses received to date have been from the Foxborough Historical Commission and a recent email from Fair Skies Nation. The letter from the Foxborough Historical Commission, which was previously shared with the MHC in the FAA's package dated August 9th, 2021, stated that the Foxborough Historical Commission "does not believe that this will have any impact on any historical property in the town." The email from Fair Skies Nation, which was received on September 19, 2021 stated that "implementation of the 4L RNAV actually would help relieve some of the excessive noise and pollution that residents and historic areas under the overused 4R path experience." That email from Fair Skies Nation, received by the FAA on September 19, 2021, is included here per your request for all comments related to the Proposed Finding.

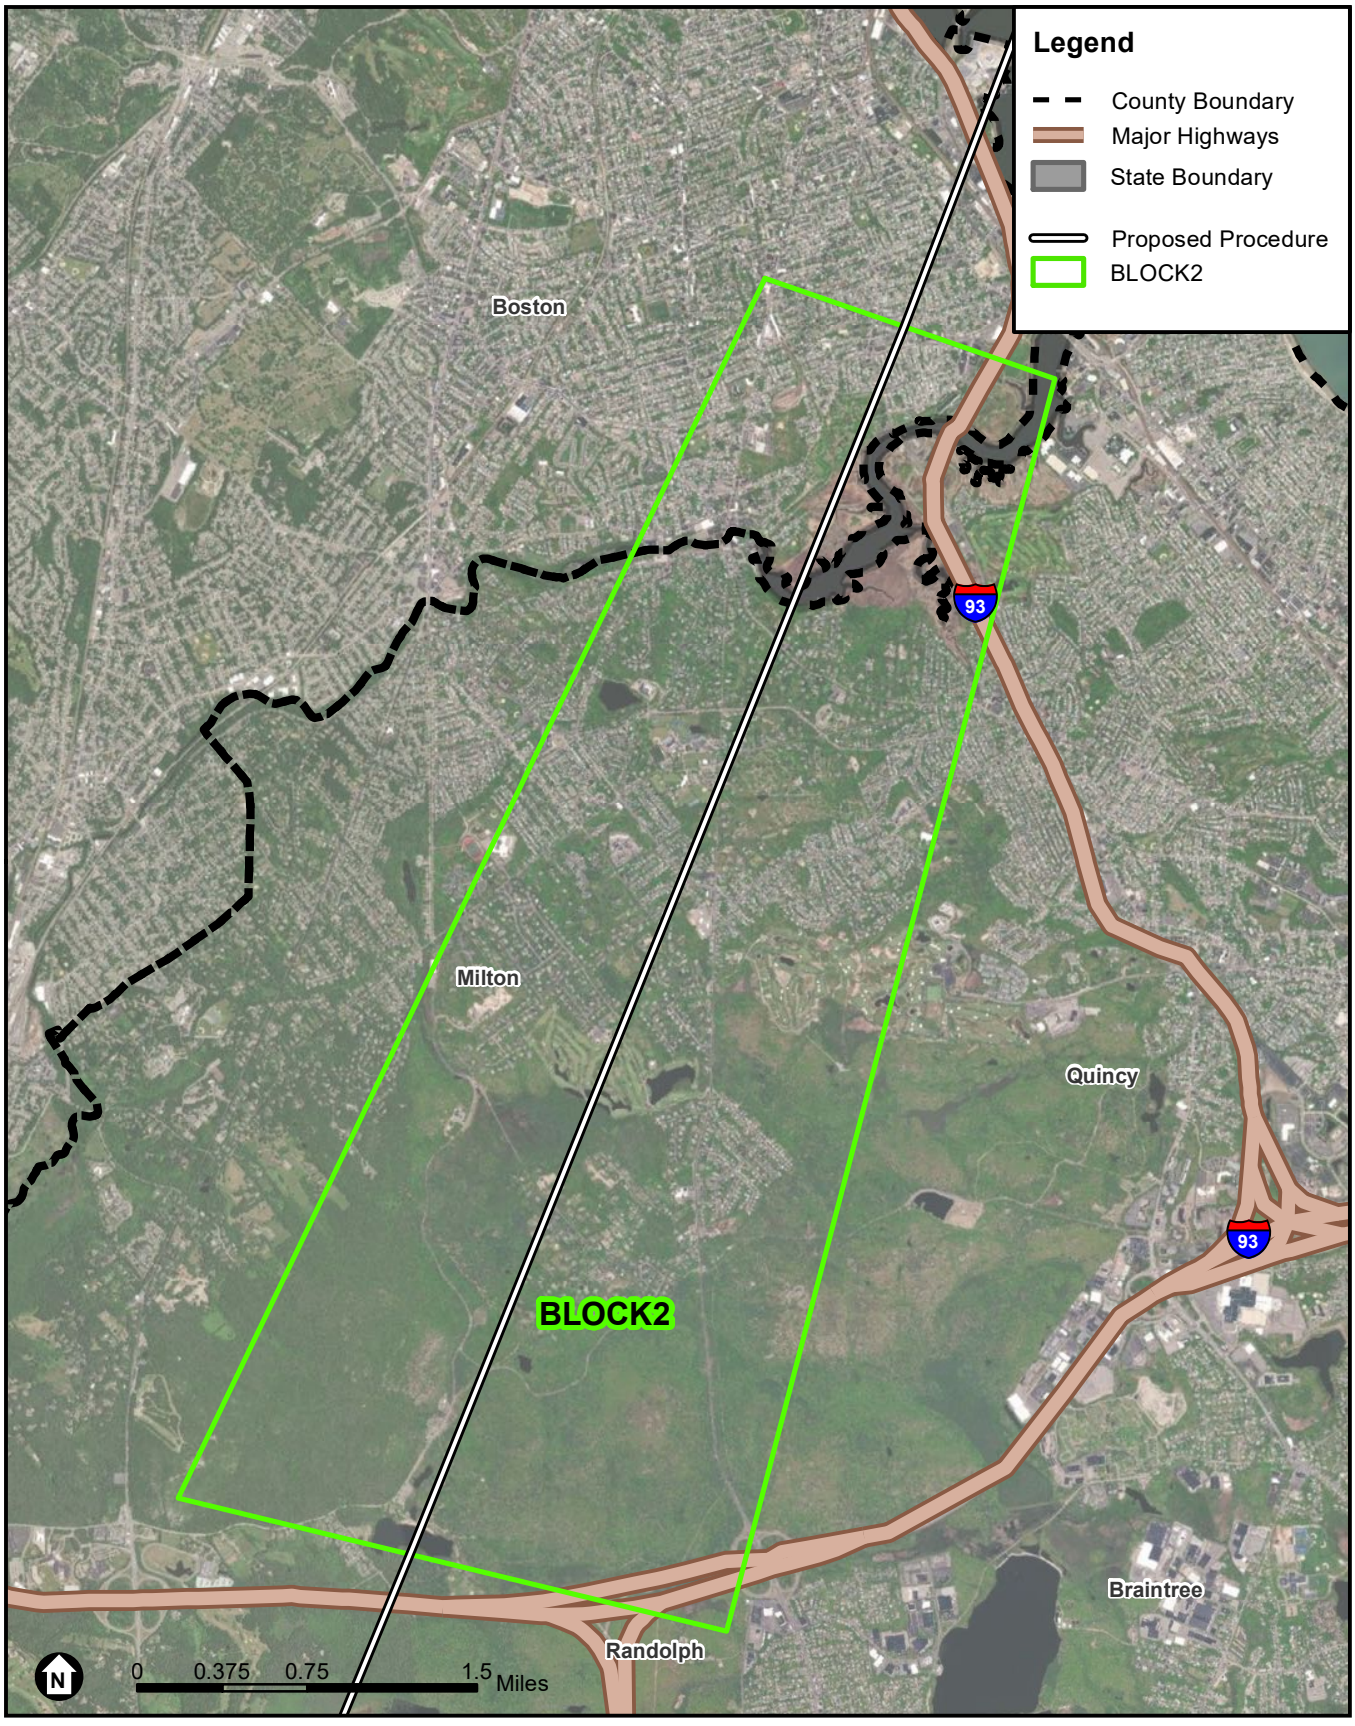
The public information session hosted by Massport on September 23, 2021, referenced in your September 10th letter, concerned a different project: the Boston Logan RNAV Study and the Block 2 Recommendations. This study, which is a collaborative effort involving Massachusetts Port Authority (Massport), the FAA, and experts from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) to attempt to address the effect of aircraft noise while maintaining safety at the airport, is a separate undertaking than the Proposed RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure. The confusion between that project and this undertaking may have arisen because in the methodology described in the FAA letter dated October 29, 2020 for selecting an APE for this project, the descriptor "BLOCK2" was used to describe an area of land for the overflight analysis. This "BLOCK2" has been recreated in Attachment A and is simply a polygon around the Proposed Procedure, which was used to estimate overflights in the area of the Proposed Action. This "BLOCK2" polygon was introduced to help establish an APE for this undertaking and is not related to the Block 2 recommendations referenced in the September 23, 2021 meeting. The use of similar terminology for the two unrelated projects is simply coincidental. Therefore, the comments from this recent meeting are not included in this correspondence.

The FAA would like to continue consultation regarding the Proposed Finding and better understand MHC's position that the undertaking would meet the criterion of adverse effects cited in your letter (36 CFR 800.5(2)(v)). Specifically, FAA seeks further information on the types of resources the MHC believes would be adversely affected by the undertaking through the introduction of visual or audible elements, given that the area is already heavily overflown.



In our June 10, 2021 letter proposing a finding of "no adverse effect" we described our methodology for assessing auditory and visual impacts to the historic properties where a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute.[1] MHC's September 10th letter states that the proposed undertaking "will concentrate flights in a more precise vertical and horizontal track" but does not provide an explanation of how any such concentration would diminish the integrity of significant historic features of properties in the APE. With a better understanding of the basis for MHC's non-concurrence, FAA may be able to provide additional information or analysis that might help us to reach consensus.

[1] Because this undertaking does not require land acquisition, construction, or ground disturbance, the FAA focused its "reasonable and good faith effort to carry out appropriate identification efforts" on properties for which setting and feeling are characteristics contributing to the property's National Register eligibility and where integrity of significant historic features could be affected by the introduction of visual or audible elements.

If the MHC is open to further discussion, we would welcome a Zoom meeting to facilitate continued consultation that could assist in clarifying the Proposed Finding for this project. The meeting could be recorded so it could be presented as part of the record of correspondence between the FAA and the MHC. Please respond by contacting me at 404-305-5598, or at veronda.johnson@faa.gov to indicate how you would like to proceed.

Subject: FAA's 4L proposed RNAV approach path

BOS Fair Skies received a copy of a 9/10/21 letter from Brona Simon, Executive Director Massachusetts Historical Commission, to Ms. Veronda Johnson at the FAA about the FAA's proposed RNAV flight path for Runway 4L approaches to Logan Airport. Air Inc, a group we collaborate with on many efforts, shared the letter with BOS Fair Skies.

Implementation of the 4L RNAV actually would help relieve some of the excessive noise and pollution that residents and historic areas under the overused 4R path experience. In 2019, those under the 4R flightpath had 9 aviation noise events for every 1 to 4L. The two RNAV approach paths to 4L should be used to disperse the planes from 4R to an area that has few fly overs when compared to those under the 4R path, which also affects residents and historic places in Quincy and Braintree.

If you would like more information about why the 4L RNAV path is needed for dispersion, equity, and fairness, please respond to this email and ask that your response be forwarded to Phil Johenning or Cindy L. Christiansen. One or both of them will connect with you directly. Thanks.

RE: Logan Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedures, Boston, MA; MHC# RC.68314

Dear Ms. Johnson:

Staff of the Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) have reviewed the information you submitted, received at this office on October 13, 2021, for the project referenced above.

Your letter seeks further information on the types of resources the MHC believes would be adversely affected by the undertaking through the introduction of visual or audible elements.

Concentrated flights in a more precise vertical and horizontal track will place a higher volume of aircraft in the 4L RNAV flight path. This increase of 359 flights annually will introduce increased visual and audible events which will affect the historic resources under and near the 4L RNAV flight path.

In addition to the properties identified in your correspondence, received at this office on June 21, 2021, it is the opinion of MHC that a number of other important historic resources will be impacted by additional audible and visible flight events. Please see a list below:

Cedar Grove Cemetery
The Cedar Grove Cemetery is located directly below the proposed RNAV Runway 4L flight path. MHC's Inventory of Historic and Archaeological Assets of the Commonwealth provides information on the importance of this historic resource that in MHC staff's opinion meets the criteria of eligibility for listing on the National Register of Historic Places. "Cedar Grove's land bordering the Neponset with its low lying hills, marshland and wooded areas constituted a textbook perfect location for a rural garden cemetery of the type pioneered by Dr. Jacob Bigelow, General Dearborn and others at Mt. Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge/Watertown in the 1830s. The peace and charm of the place was apparent to the fashionable strollers of the mid 19th century." The Luther Briggs, Jr. designed Cedar Grove Cemetery with Dorchester Park provide a glimpse of the marshland, meadows, and gently rolling hills characteristic of southern Dorchester before intensive, post 1890-development.

Governor Hutchinson's Field
Governor Hutchinson's Field is listed in the National Register of Historic Places as a contributing element of the Milton Hill Historic District. Governor Hutchinson built his family a country estate on Milton Hill to escape the city. According to A History of Milton 1640-1887, "he found leisure to cultivate his rural tastes and spent much time in laboring with his men in setting out and grafting trees and attending to the routine of farming and of cultivating fruits..." The field is all that remains of the estate today but continues to represent the former rural peaceful landscape of those who left the city for a rural respite.

Captain R. B. Forbes House
The Captain R. B. Forbes House and Carriage House is a National Historic Landmark. The structures and site are also listed in the National Register of Historic Places as contributing elements to the Milton Hill Historic District.

Blue Hills Reservation Multiple Resource Area
While the list the FAA provided includes the Blue Hills Parkway and Blue Hills Reservation Parkways-Metropolitan Park System of Greater Boston, the list does not include the Blue Hills Reservation Multiple Resource Area. The Blue Hills Reservation is listed in the National Register of Historic Places and includes prehistoric and historic resources of the Blue Hills and Neponset River Reservations. The Blue Hills Reservation has served as an important recreation area since the latter decades of the nineteen century. Improvements at the turn of the last century included the construction of buildings to support the public's use of the important outdoor space for the residents of the surrounding communities. The Great Blue Hill Weather Observatory, found at the top of the Great Blue Hill, is a National Historic Landmark.

Historic properties that are associated with or designed for leisure, respite, or places of rest and solemnity would be adversely effected by the increased flight events. Through the introduction of visible and audible elements that are out of character with the setting of these historic properties (36 CFR 800.5(a)(2)(v)).

Thus, the MHC cannot concur with FAA's finding of "no adverse effect" to historic properties.

The proposed RNAV (GPS) Runway 4L approach procedures will concentrate flights in a more precise vertical and horizontal track. As indicated in the draft Environmental Assessment (EA), the number of overflights will increase and result in an increased number of events when air traffic noise will be heard over historic resources (see 36 CFR 800.5(2)(v)).

These comments are offered to assist in compliance with Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 (36 CFR 800). Please do not hesitate to contact Elizabeth Sherva of my staff if you have any questions.

Reference: Additional Information Regarding FAA's Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect for the Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure, Boston, MA (MHC# RC.68314)

Dear Ms. Simon,

The FAA and MHC have engaged in correspondence since June 2020 regarding the proposed Boston Logan International Airport RNAV (GPS) RWY 4L Approach Procedure (the undertaking), which is proposed to enhance safety at the airport. Letters from the MHC dated July 21, 2021, and September 10, 2021, have briefly discussed the MHC's concerns with the Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect as a result of the undertaking. The FAA has attempted to address those concerns by providing additional information and responding to your questions in correspondence dated August 9 and October 12, 2021. In our most recent October 12th letter, we asked to continue consultation to better understand MHC's position that the undertaking would meet the criteria to cause adverse effects and for further information on the types of resources the MHC believes would be adversely affected by the undertaking. In that letter, as well as in previous telephone conversations with your staff, we offered to meet with MHC to discuss this further. MHC responded by letter dated November 15, 2021 with further information on the types of resources it believes would be adversely affected by the undertaking through the introduction of visual or audible elements.

As contemplated in 36 CFR 800.5(c)(2), the FAA is interested in consulting with MHC to resolve the disagreement with our proposed finding. We have reviewed the information you provided and offered additional analysis of potential effects to six resources described below, which include the four resources cited in your letter and two additional resources we believe are representative of the effects of the undertaking. Based on that further analysis, we are reaffirming our Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect, re-notifying you pursuant to 36 CFR § 800.5(b), and providing the supporting documentation specified in 36 CFR § 800.11(e).

This letter summarizes and provides additional information about the analysis undertaken to support the FAA's Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect and includes additional discussion and information regarding the specifics of that analysis. We request that you review this information and advise the FAA within 30 days whether you now concur with, or have no objection to, our Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect.

Undertaking Summary

The undertaking would enhance aviation safety and efficiency by providing lateral and vertical guidance to aircraft landing on Runway 4L over four different paths converging onto a common final approach path. The undertaking is a RNAV (GPS) Instrument Arrival Procedure (IAP)[1], which requires that an aircraft flying the procedure remain within one nautical mile of the procedure centerline 95% of the total flight time. The expected change to airport operations from the proposed undertaking would be comprised of the following:

- A net annual increase of 255 arrivals at Boston Logan. This increase is attributable to previously scheduled arrivals that will no longer need to be cancelled due to increased Airport efficiency during instrument meteorological conditions (IMC) or "poor weather." With the availability of the 4L RNAV procedure, these arrivals will now be able to land on Runway 4L instead of being cancelled.
- A shift of 104 annual arrivals from Runway 4R to Runway 4L. These 104 arrivals represent flights that would otherwise have been delayed for a landing on Runway 4R, but with the availability of a 4L RNAV procedure would instead be able to land on Runway 4L earlier in the day.
- Combined, there will be an expected increase of 359 arrivals to Runway 4L, representing 255 flights that no longer need to be cancelled and 104 flights no longer delayed due to poor weather conditions.[2] All other airport operations in the No Action Alternative and Proposed Action Alternative are expected to be the same.

The net increase in 255 annual arrivals resulting from the undertaking would be the result of aircraft being able to access Runway 4L during IMC, which is not currently possible. The undertaking is not expected to result in any changes in flight tracks of arrivals for aircraft currently flying a visual (as opposed to an instrument) approach.

Area of Potential Effects

In a letter dated June 18, 2020, the FAA proposed an initial approach for determining the Area of Potential Effects (APE). After receiving feedback from MHC on October 29, 2020, the FAA proposed an updated methodology that focused the APE. This APE was determined by reviewing the altitudes of aircraft flying in and out of the airport and calculating the increase in overflights from the proposed undertaking in order to identify those areas that would be most impacted by the proposed undertaking. The MHC did not disagree with the proposed focused APE as stated in

[1] The term RNAV means "area navigation" in this context. Within RNAV procedures, there are two categories of navigation specifications, area navigation (RNAV) and required navigation performance (RNP). RNP is a system that allows for more precise flying due to additional equipment on the aircraft. In the United States, RNP approach or arrival procedure are titled RNAV(GPS) procedures. For more information about RNAV and RNAV (GPS) procedures, refer to https://www.faa.gov/air_traffic/publications/atpubs/aip_html/part2_enr_section_1.17.html.

[2] This estimate of additional flights only includes aircraft flying in instrument meteorological conditions (IMC) or "poor weather"; aircraft flying in visual meteorological conditions (VMC) or "good weather" are not expected to use the proposed undertaking. Aircraft flying VMC would continue to fly the same current path until within approximately five nautical miles of the Airport. At this point, they would have the option to utilize the proposed undertaking for reference purposes because all aircraft converge on the runway at this point; aircraft flight paths would not meaningfully differ from those associated with a visual approach.

a letter dated December 8, 2020. (A map of the APE can be found in Attachment A of this letter.)

Summary of Historic Properties

The online electronic files of the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), MHC, and the Boston Landmarks Commission were used to compile a comprehensive list of historic properties previously identified within the APE.[3] Additionally, the FAA requested input from the historical commissions and planning boards from Milton, Quincy, Stoughton, Sharon, Randolph, Norton, Mansfield, Canton, Easton, Foxborough, and Boston, Massachusetts, as well as the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe and the Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head to identify additional properties not previously identified as eligible for the NRHP. This effort identified 4,242 properties listed in or potentially eligible for listing in national, state, or local historic registers. Of these, 58 properties within the APE are currently listed in or have been formally determined eligible for listing in the NRHP. These properties are listed by name along with their NRHP-designated area of significance and city in Table 1. For the purposes of the analysis, FAA assumed all 4,242 properties within the APE are eligible for listing in the NRHP.

The FAA received correspondence from MHC dated November 15, 2021. In this letter, the MHC states that historic resources "would be adversely effected by the increased flight events through the introduction of visible and audible elements." They also identified four specific "important historic resources" under or near the 4L RNAV flight path that the MHC believes would be "impacted by audible and visible flight events" introduced by the proposed undertaking. These identified historic resources are Cedar Grove Cemetery, Governor Hutchinson's Field, Captain R.B. Forbes House, and the Blue Hills Reservation Multiple Resource Area (MRA).[4] These properties were identified or had multiple historic resources found within the MRA as part of the initial inventory of 4,242 historic resources.

Because the undertaking would not have physical effects (see discussion below), this identification effort focused on identifying properties for which setting and feeling are characteristics contributing to the property's NRHP eligibility. These may include isolated properties where a cultural landscape is part of the property's significance, rural historic districts, outdoor spaces designed for meditation or contemplation, and certain traditional cultural properties in continuous use. These property types are more susceptible to auditory and visual impacts and include sacred spaces such as cemeteries, places of worship and sites of religious significance to tribes; parks and open recreational lands; historic properties that include designed or vernacular landscapes, and areas culturally significant to tribes and other distinct populations.

[4] The Blue Hills Reservation MRA is 7,000 acres spanning from Quincy to Dedham, Milton to Randolph. This resource is a multiple property listing that includes individually-listed resources in the NRHP. The MRA includes prehistoric and historic sites where location data is restricted and not available.

We have selected six examples of properties that fall within these property types to demonstrate the anticipated effects as a result of the proposed undertaking. This includes the four properties identified by MHC on November 15, 2021, and two others identified by FAA as exemplifying the significant historic features that could be affected by the proposed undertaking.

Many of the historic resources within the APE were designated in the 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s. As such, they have been potentially subject to decades of change including the introduction of visual and audible elements. This includes incremental changes, such as the increase in surface and aircraft traffic throughout the APE, as well as large changes such as widening of Interstate 93 through the Blue Hills Reservation. These changes may have diminished the integrity of the properties setting or feeling, although other aspects of integrity may be sufficient to convey the properties' significance, and none have been removed from the National Register. However, for purposes of this analysis FAA looked specifically at whether the properties retain integrity of setting and feeling under existing conditions. Therefore, the FAA assumes that all retain sufficient integrity to be considered historic resources for the purposes of this study.

Assessment of Effects

The undertaking would have an effect on a historic property if it alters the characteristics qualifying that property for the National Register. Such effects are considered "adverse" if they would diminish the integrity of a property's significant historical features (including its setting, provided the setting is a contributing factor to the property's historical significance). The undertaking does not require land acquisition, construction, or ground disturbance, and the FAA anticipates no physical effects to historic properties. However, the FAA recognizes that for certain types of historic properties, particularly those where the property's setting contributes to its historical significance, the introduction of visual, atmospheric, or audible elements could diminish the integrity of a property's significant historical features, and therefore aircraft operations could result in non-physical effects.

Therefore, the FAA focused its assessment of effects on the potential for the undertaking to introduce visual or audible elements that would diminish the integrity of setting or feeling for historic properties where those are significant historical features. The FAA also considered the extent to which those aspects of integrity have already been diminished under existing conditions.

Assessment of Auditory Effects

In order to assess the auditory impacts of the undertaking on historic properties, the FAA first modeled the projected noise attributable to additional arrivals using a metric known as Day-Night Average Sound Level (DNL). DNL is the standard noise metric used for all FAA studies of aviation noise exposure in airport communities and was used to assess the potential noise exposure of every identified historic property within the APE.

DNL is a 24-hour, time-weighted average noise metric, expressed in terms of decibel units of sound heard by the human ear, which accounts for the noise levels of individual aircraft events, the number of times those events occur, and the time of day they occur. DNL takes the contribution of noise from average aircraft operations and allows for a single number to represent aviation noise over a 24-hour period. There is one unique modification in that there is a "noise penalty" of any noise generated during "nighttime hours" (10:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m.). In the calculation of DNL, for each hour during nighttime hours, the sound levels are increased by a 10 decibel-weighting penalty (equivalent to a 10-fold increase in aircraft operations) before the 24-hour value is computed.

The FAA's procedures for compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) define a significant noise impact as an increase of a DNL by 1.5 dB in areas exposed to aircraft noise of DNL 65 dB and higher.[5]

As presented in section 4.6 of the Draft EA, the noise impacts resulting from the proposed undertaking are an order of magnitude below the significance threshold given above. Using the DNL metric, the largest noise change at a historic resource is 0.2 dB across the APE, which is a change in noise that is imperceptible to the human ear.[6] Many historic resources within the APE experience either no difference or a small decrease in noise exposure between the Proposed Action and the No Action Alternative. These locations are currently affected by the noise from 78,879 annual flights. The additional net 255 annual flights introduce a relatively small noise change reflective of an average of less than one additional daily flight and a projected decrease of 52 nighttime arrivals.[7]

However, FAA's NEPA procedures also note that special consideration needs to be given to the evaluation of the significance of noise impacts on noise sensitive areas within historic sites, including traditional cultural properties, where the land use compatibility guidelines in 14 CFR Part 150 are not relevant to the value, significance, and enjoyment of the area in question. For example, the DNL 65 dB threshold may not adequately address the impacts of noise on areas

[5] Specifically, the action would increase noise by DNL1.5 dB or more for a noise sensitive area that is exposed to noise at or above the DNL 65 dB noise exposure level, or that will be exposed at or above the DNL 65 dB level due to a DNL 1.5 dB or greater increase, when compared to the no action alternative for the same timeframe. where other noise is very low, and a quiet setting is a generally recognized purpose and attribute.

In order to assess the potential for incremental changes in noise levels or changes in the character of aircraft noise that may result in alteration of those characteristics of historic properties that qualify them for inclusion in the NRHP, the FAA considered the projected increase in the number or concentration of overflights over these areas. This analysis also informed the assessment of visual effects described below. As illustrated in the examples below, increasing overflights by an average of less than one per day would not introduce audible elements that would alter those characteristics of a historic property that qualify it for inclusion in the NRHP.

Assessment of Visual Effects

Recognizing that some types of historic properties may be affected by overflights due to visual impacts, the FAA also considered the potential for the introduction of visual elements that could diminish the integrity of the property's historical features. In order to assess the potential visual impacts on historic properties, the data for a year of overflights at the airport was overlain on the APE in ArcGIS.[8] The APE experiences 78,879 arrival and 18,989 departure overflights annually, which corresponds to 216.1 daily arrival overflights and 52.0 daily departure overflights within the APE. Looking at the APE as a whole, the undertaking is estimated to add 255 annual arrival overflights or 0.70 daily average overflights to the APE. This is a 0.26% increase in overflights within the APE. This shows that the APE is already heavily overflown as a whole. However, existing flights are not evenly distributed over the APE but follow flight paths which converge close to and in line with the runways. In order to further assess the impact of the undertaking on individual historic resources within the APE, the FAA considered the possibility that the undertaking could increase flights over parts of the APE that are not heavily overflown under current conditions. This was done by mapping the dataset of departure overflights and arrival overflights over the APE (see Attachments B and C) to look for specific areas within the APE that would experience overflights from the undertaking in locations that are not already heavily overflown. Attachment B shows that when looking only at departures, the APE areas closest to the airport are already dense with overflights but the flight tracks become more dispersed as the APE moves to the southwest. However, when arrivals are considered, this pattern disappears. Attachment C, which displays a year of arrival radar tracks, shows that the APE is already heavily overflown over the full extent of the APE. The combined effect is that historic properties throughout the entire APE are heavily overflown under current conditions.

When considering the potential for introduction of visual elements to historic properties, the analysis compared the numbers and locations of existing overflights within the APE against the undertaking. The undertaking would increase overflights within the APE from 268.1 daily overflights to 268.8 daily overflights, an average of less than one per day. A visual analysis of the current flight tracks shows that the entire APE is densely overflown. As noted above, the increase in overflights attributable to the undertaking is very small compared to the existing level of overflights (a 0.26% increase). As illustrated in the examples below, the additional 0.7 average daily overflights would not be expected to introduce visual elements that would change the existing characteristics of a historic property that qualify it for inclusion in the NRHP.

[8] The year of overflight data used was from November 1, 2018, to October 31, 2019.

Analysis of Potential Auditory and Visual Effects on Representative Historic Properties

To exemplify the potential impacts on historic properties within the APE that are especially sensitive to overflights (i.e., where the introduction of visual or audible elements could diminish the integrity of a property's significant historical features), the FAA looked more closely at six properties: Milton Cemetery, Dorchester Park, Cedar Grove Cemetery, Governor Hutchinson's Field, the Captain R. B. Forbes House, and the Blue Hills Reservation MRA. Milton Cemetery and Dorchester Park were selected from the NRHP properties in the APE as property types sensitive to noise and visual intrusions that could experience the maximum potential impact from the undertaking as they are located as close as possible to where the aircraft flying on the proposed procedure are closest to the ground. The other four properties were identified by MHC in their November 15, 2021, letter as "other important historic resources" that warranted a closer analysis of the potential impacts of the undertaking. These six properties are pictured with the proposed undertaking and the overflight radar data in Attachments D1 and D2.

Milton Cemetery was established in 1672, covers 104 acres, and has gravestones ranging back to the late 1600s. It was listed in the NRHP in 2004 under Criterion A (events) and C (architecture) as a landscape representative of the evolution of traditional New England burial sites, and for being designed by noted landscape architects Robert Morris Copeland, Horace William Shaler Cleveland, and Ernest W. Bowditch in the 19th century "rural" cemetery movement.[9] The gravestones represent a valuable collection of folk and burial arts spanning over 300 years, and several are attributed to master craftsmen. It has a period of significance of 1672-1954.[10] As an example of the rural cemetery movement, it is a property where a pastoral setting and a feeling of serenity are attributes of significance.[11] The Milton Cemetery is completely within the APE, is 6.3 nautical miles from Boston Logan, and would be directly overflown by aircraft using the proposed undertaking.

Dorchester Park was established in 1891 and stretches over 28.45 acres in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston. It was listed in the NRHP in 2008 under Criterion A (events) and C (architecture) for both its association with the Colonial period and early development of the Dorchester neighborhood as evidenced in the mile marker located on Adams Street, and as the work of a master designer, the notable landscape design firm of Olmsted, Olmsted, and Eliot.[12] It has multiple periods of significance. The first is 1734, the date of the mile marker. The second is 1891 to 1957, corresponding to when the park was established through 1957.[13] The Park contains athletic fields and a forest with scenic pathways. As a park that was designed by Frederick Law Olmsted's successor firm that forms part of Boston's "Emerald Necklace," it represents the naturalistic design that is characteristic of Olmsted's work. The landscape setting and the feeling of escape from city life are characteristics of its significance. Dorchester Park is completely within the APE, is 5.9 miles from Boston Logan, and is 0.35 miles from the center path of the undertaking.

Cedar Grove Cemetery was established in 1868 to provide additional burial grounds for the Town of Dorchester. The land along "the Neponset with its low-lying hills, marshland and wooded areas constituted a text book-perfect [sic]location for a rural garden cemetery… The peace and charm of this place was apparent to fashionable strollers of the mid 19th century [sic]."[14] It was purchased for $17,648.83 and laid out by architect Luther Briggs Jr. It was constructed between c.1880 and 1930 as part of a small residential settlement and large public park in the Dorchester neighborhood of Boston.[15] It is associated with early residential development as well as with the rural cemetery movement of the mid- to late-19th century. While not formally listed in the NRHP, MHC has indicated that this historic resource is considered eligible for listing in the NRHP.[16] Like Milton Cemetery above, it is a property where a pastoral setting and feeling of serenity are attributes of its historical significance. The Cedar Grove Cemetery is located immediately east and across Adams Street from Dorchester Park. It is completely within the APE, is 5.4 nautical miles from Boston Logan, and would be directly overflown by aircraft using the proposed undertaking.

Governor Hutchinson's Field is a contributing element of the Milton Hill Historic District. As such, it was listed on the NRHP in 1995 under Criterion A (events) and C (architecture) as "a residential area that contains the most significant concentration of 19th and early 20th century high-style and period architecture in [Boston]."[17] It has a period of significance of 1740 – 1945, marking the district's rise to prominence as an estate district with the founding of Governor Thomas Hutchinson's summer estate in 1742, through to the 50-year significance cutoff of the nomination.[18] The district contains a number of features, including Governor Hutchinson's Field. This feature is a 9.65-acre rectangular open area that extend from the Neponset River to the crest of Milton Hill. It once functioned as a fruit orchard associated with the Hutchinson estate. Since 1898 it has been maintained as a public open space used for passive recreation and "affords an unobstructed view of the Neponset River and Boston from the summit of Milton Hill."[19] While not recognized individually as a historic resource, it contributes to the Milton Hill Historic District as an open space historically associated with both agriculture and recreation. Governor Hutchinson's Field functions as a reminder of the early history of the district when it was part of a more rural setting and represents late 19th-century efforts to preserve remnants of a pastoral landscape for public recreation. As such, it is a property where a rural and pastoral setting are attributes of its historical significance. It is completely within the APE, approximately 6.5 nautical miles from Boston Logan, and would be directly overflown by aircraft using the proposed undertaking.

The Captain R. B. Forbes House (215 Adams Street, Milton, MA) is individually listed as a National Historic Landmark and is located within the Milton Hill Historic District. It is recognized as exemplifying both the Greek Revival style, as designed by the Boston architect Isiah Rogers, and the influences of 18th and 19th century trade with China. The house, built in 1833, is decorated with Chinese and nautical motifs and furnished with period furniture and art imported from China. It has a "large octagonal cupola enabling the captain's mother and sister to watch for ships entering and leaving Boston Harbor."[20] Its owner, Captain R.B Forbes, was head of the Chinese trade firm Russell and Company. It was listed as a National Historic Landmark in 1966.[21] It has a period of significance of 1833 and is presumably listed under Criterion C (architecture) as both its date of construction (1833) and design are presented prominently in the documentation.[22] As a residence constructed at the top of a local prominence (Milton Hill) and within an established residential community (Milton Hill neighborhood/historic district), this resource could be considered to have special visual characteristics that could be attributes of its historical significance. It is within the APE, approximately 6.6 nautical miles from Boston Logan, and would be directly overflown by aircraft using the proposed undertaking.

Blue Hills Reservation Multiple Resource Area includes both prehistoric and historic archeological sites and historic-era architectural and landscape resources.[23] This resource area encompasses the entirety of the Blue Hills Reservation and includes multiple properties individually listed in the NRHP. While a comprehensive inventory of sites has not been completed, notable contributors to the Multiple Resource Area (MRA) include areas where Quincy's granite industry flourished (Lyons Turning Mill and Fuller Quarry, both outside the APE), as well as natural landscapes that were identified for preservation in the late 19th century and developed for passive and active recreation in the early 20th century. Even before it was established as part of the Metropolitan Park System, the area was a popular destination for outdoor recreation such as hiking, as well as for early meteorological experimentation. The views from Great Blue Hill were enjoyed by visitors and provided unobstructed sightlines to the shoreline, prompting construction of an observatory tower in 1885 (Blue Hills Meteorological Observatory). The Blue Hill Meteorological Observatory is documented as "the most important historic building in the Blue Hills Area."[24] It was listed as a National Historic Landmark in 1989.[25] In the 1930s, the Civilian Conservation Corps built a second tower on Great Blue Hill (Eliot Tower) which provides views of the skyline of Boston to the north, the harbor islands to the northeast, Houghton's and Ponkapoag ponds to the east, and Mount Wachusett to the west. The park structures in the area were designed in the early 20th century by the master architectural firm Stickney and Austin, and areas for camping and nature study were later developed by the Appalachian Mountain Club in the 1920s-40s. The area has been altered by the reconstruction of Route 128 in the 1960s to expand it to a six-to-eight lane highway. As a landscape that derives part of its historical significance from views of Boston as well as sightlines to the coast, the Blue Hills Reservation MRA is sensitive to visual effects. It is almost completely within the APE and approximately 7.4 nautical miles from Boston Logan. Given the size of the MRA, there are portions that would be directly overflown by aircraft using the proposed undertaking.

Auditory Effects

The noise impact on the six properties discussed above was calculated and compared against the existing noise exposure from aircraft as measured in DNL. The current noise conditions for each resource are as follows:

- Milton Cemetery – DNL 53.4 dB
- Dorchester Park – DNL 51.3 dB
- Governor Hutchinson's Field (part of Milton Hill Historic District) – DNL 52.1 dB
- Captain R. B. Forbes House – DNL 52.4 dB
- Cedar Grove Cemetery – DNL 54.0 dB
- Blue Hills Reservation MRA ─DNL 39.2 to 50.7 dB across the entire MRA

These noise levels are consistent with a quiet urban environment, and all properties appear to retain integrity of setting and feeling under the existing conditions.[26] The cumulative noise exposure of these properties, measured in DNL, would be unchanged under the proposed undertaking.[27]

In addition, FAA considered whether there might be a change in the character of aircraft noise over the area that could affect these properties.[28] Because the area is already densely overflown and the undertaking would increase overflights by an average of less than one per day, we have concluded that the incremental increase in overflights caused by the undertaking would not introduce any audible elements that would diminish the integrity of these properties' significant historical features.

Visual Effect

The visual impact on the six properties attributable to the increase in overflights was calculated and compared against the existing conditions. This includes consideration of both direct overflights and flights that may be visible from the historic resource.[29] The visual impacts for properties where the undertaking would likely result in direct and/or visible overflights is discussed below.

- Milton Cemetery is currently directly overflown by 177.1 average daily overflights. The undertaking would increase the number of daily overflights by 0.7 flights, for a total of [26] "Fundamentals of Noise and Sound," Federal Aviation Administration, https://www.faa.gov/regulations_ policies/policy_guidance/noise/basics/. It should be noted that the figure referencing the "quiet urban environment" is an A-weighted SEL level while the calculated values above are DNL, which is weighted over 24 hours instead of 1 second and includes a nighttime penalty. As a point of reference, noise exposure levels below DNL 65 dB are considered compatible with residential use, parks, churches, and concert halls. 14 CFR part 150, appendix A.

[27] When analyzing the potential noise impacts to historic resources, the current and future no-action conditions were modeled with consideration to the less precise level of dispersion of flights that would be reflective of conditions without the proposed undertaking. When the future action alternative was modeled, the more concentrated flight tracks that would result from use of the proposed undertaking were used.

[28] For example, a shift from small numbers of relatively loud operations to large numbers of relatively quiet operations can result in the same DNL but have different effects on historic properties.

[29] Visual impacts were assessed by determining the total number of arrival and departures (e.g., overflights) that would be considered visible at each property. Aircraft were assumed to be visible if the overflight was within five miles of the historic resource.

177.8 average daily overflights. Milton Cemetery also currently experiences a daily average of 288.7 visible flights. The undertaking would increase the number of visible flights by 0.7, for a total daily average of 289.4.

- Dorchester Park is currently directly overflown by 4.5 average daily overflights. It is located 0.35 nautical miles laterally from the proposed procedure's centerline but aircraft on the final approach to Runway 4L are flying on such a straight line that they do not directly overfly Dorchester Park, and the undertaking would not increase the number of direct overflights over Dorchester Park. It would increase the number of daily visible flights. Dorchester Park currently experiences a daily average daily of 321.2 visible flights. The undertaking would increase the number of visible flights by less than one per day, for a daily total average of 321.9.
- Cedar Grove Cemetery is currently directly overflown by 11.4 average daily overflights. The undertaking would increase the number of daily overflights by 0.7 flights, for a total of 12.1 average daily overflights. Cedar Grove Cemetery also experiences a daily average of 323.8 visible flights. The undertaking would increase the number of visible flights by 0.7, for a total daily average of 324.5.
- Governor Hutchinson's Field (part of Milton Hill Historic District) is currently directly overflown by 3.0 average daily overflights. The undertaking would increase the number of daily overflights by 0.7 flights, for a total of 3.7 average daily overflights. This resource also currently experiences a daily average of 293.7 visible flights. The undertaking would increase the number of visible flights by 0.7 flights, for a total daily average of 294.4.
- Captain R. B. Forbes House is currently directly overflown by 1.7 average daily overflights. It is located 0.06 nautical miles laterally from the proposed undertaking. Although this resource is very close to the final approach centerline of the undertaking, aircraft would be expected to fly on such a straight line as to not directly overfly the House. Therefore, the undertaking would not increase the number of direct overflights but would increase the number of daily flights that are visible to visitors. The House currently experiences a daily average of 293.6 visible flights. The undertaking would increase the number of visible flights by 0.7, for a total daily average of 294.3.
- The entire Blue Hills Reservation MRA is currently directly overflown by 213.0 average daily overflights across the 7,000-acre resource. The undertaking would increase the number of daily average overflights by 0.7, for a total of 213.7 average daily overflights. The Blue Hills Reservation MRA also experiences a daily average of 225.7 visible flights. The undertaking would increase the number of visible flights by a daily average of 0.7, for a total of 226.4 daily average of visible flights.

The average altitude of direct overflights was estimated for the six properties and compared against the undertaking to assess the visual impacts. The average altitude of overflights for the properties that would result in less than one direct and/or visible overflight as a result of the undertaking is discussed below.

- Milton Cemetery currently experiences overflights at an average altitude of 2,090 feet above ground level (AGL) for arriving aircraft and 3,470 feet AGL for departing aircraft.

The undertaking would result in an increase of less than one direct overflight per day with an altitude between 2,140 to 2,340 feet AGL.

- Dorchester Park currently experiences overflights traveling at 1,880 feet AGL for arriving aircraft and 3,260 feet AGL for departing aircraft. The resource is located 0.35 nautical miles laterally from the proposed undertaking but aircraft on final approach to Runway 4L are flying on such a straight line that they do not directly overfly Dorchester Park. Therefore, the undertaking would not increase the number of direct overflights over Dorchester Park but would increase the number of daily visible flights by less than one per day with an altitude between 1,690 to 1,790 feet AGL.
- Cedar Grove Cemetery currently experiences overflights at an average altitude of 1,800 feet AGL for arriving aircraft and 3,140 feet AGL for departing aircraft. The undertaking would result in an increase of less than one direct overflight per day with an altitude between 1,720 to 1,820 feet AGL.
- Governor Hutchinson's Field (part of Milton Hill Historic District) currently experiences direct overflights at an average altitude of 1,960 feet AGL for arriving aircraft and 3,360 feet AGL for departing aircraft. The undertaking would result in an increase of less than one direct overflight per day with an altitude between 1,880 to 2,080 feet AGL.
- Captain R. B. Forbes House currently experiences overflights at an average altitude of 2,000 feet AGL for arriving aircraft and 3,680 feet AGL for departing aircraft. This resource is located 0.06 nautical miles laterally from the proposed undertaking. Although this resource is very close to the undertaking's final approach centerline, aircraft would be expected to fly on such a straight line as to not directly overfly the historic resource. Therefore, the proposed undertaking would not increase the number of direct overflights, but the proposed undertaking would increase visible flights by less than one per day with an altitude between 1,870 to 2,070 feet AGL.
- The entire Blue Hills Reservation MRA currently experiences overflights with an average altitude of 2,680 feet AGL for arriving aircraft and 6,210 feet AGL for departing aircraft. The undertaking would result in an increase of less than one direct overflight per day with an average altitude between 2,410 to 2,610 feet AGL.

These examples represent types of historic properties that are most sensitive to aircraft overflights and are located where the undertaking's effects would be the most pronounced. Although some of the six properties would experience additional overflights at a lower altitude on average as a result of the proposed undertaking, each area is already directly overflown, and the undertaking would increase overflights by an average of less than one per day. Given that overflights and visible flights would increase by an average of less than one per day, we conclude that the incremental increase in overflights caused by the undertaking would not introduce any visual elements that would diminish the integrity of these properties' significant historic features and therefore would not adversely affect the historic properties. This indicates that historic properties that are less sensitive to noise or visual intrusions and/or are farther removed from the centerline of the proposed procedure would also not be adversely affected by the undertaking.

Finding of No Adverse Effect Criteria

To support a Finding of No Adverse Effect, an undertaking must not meet any of the criteria set forth in the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation's Section 106 regulations at 36 CFR § 800.5(a). This section presents why the undertaking does not meet any of these criteria.

- Does the undertaking physically destroy or damage the property?
    - The undertaking would not have any physical impact on any property.

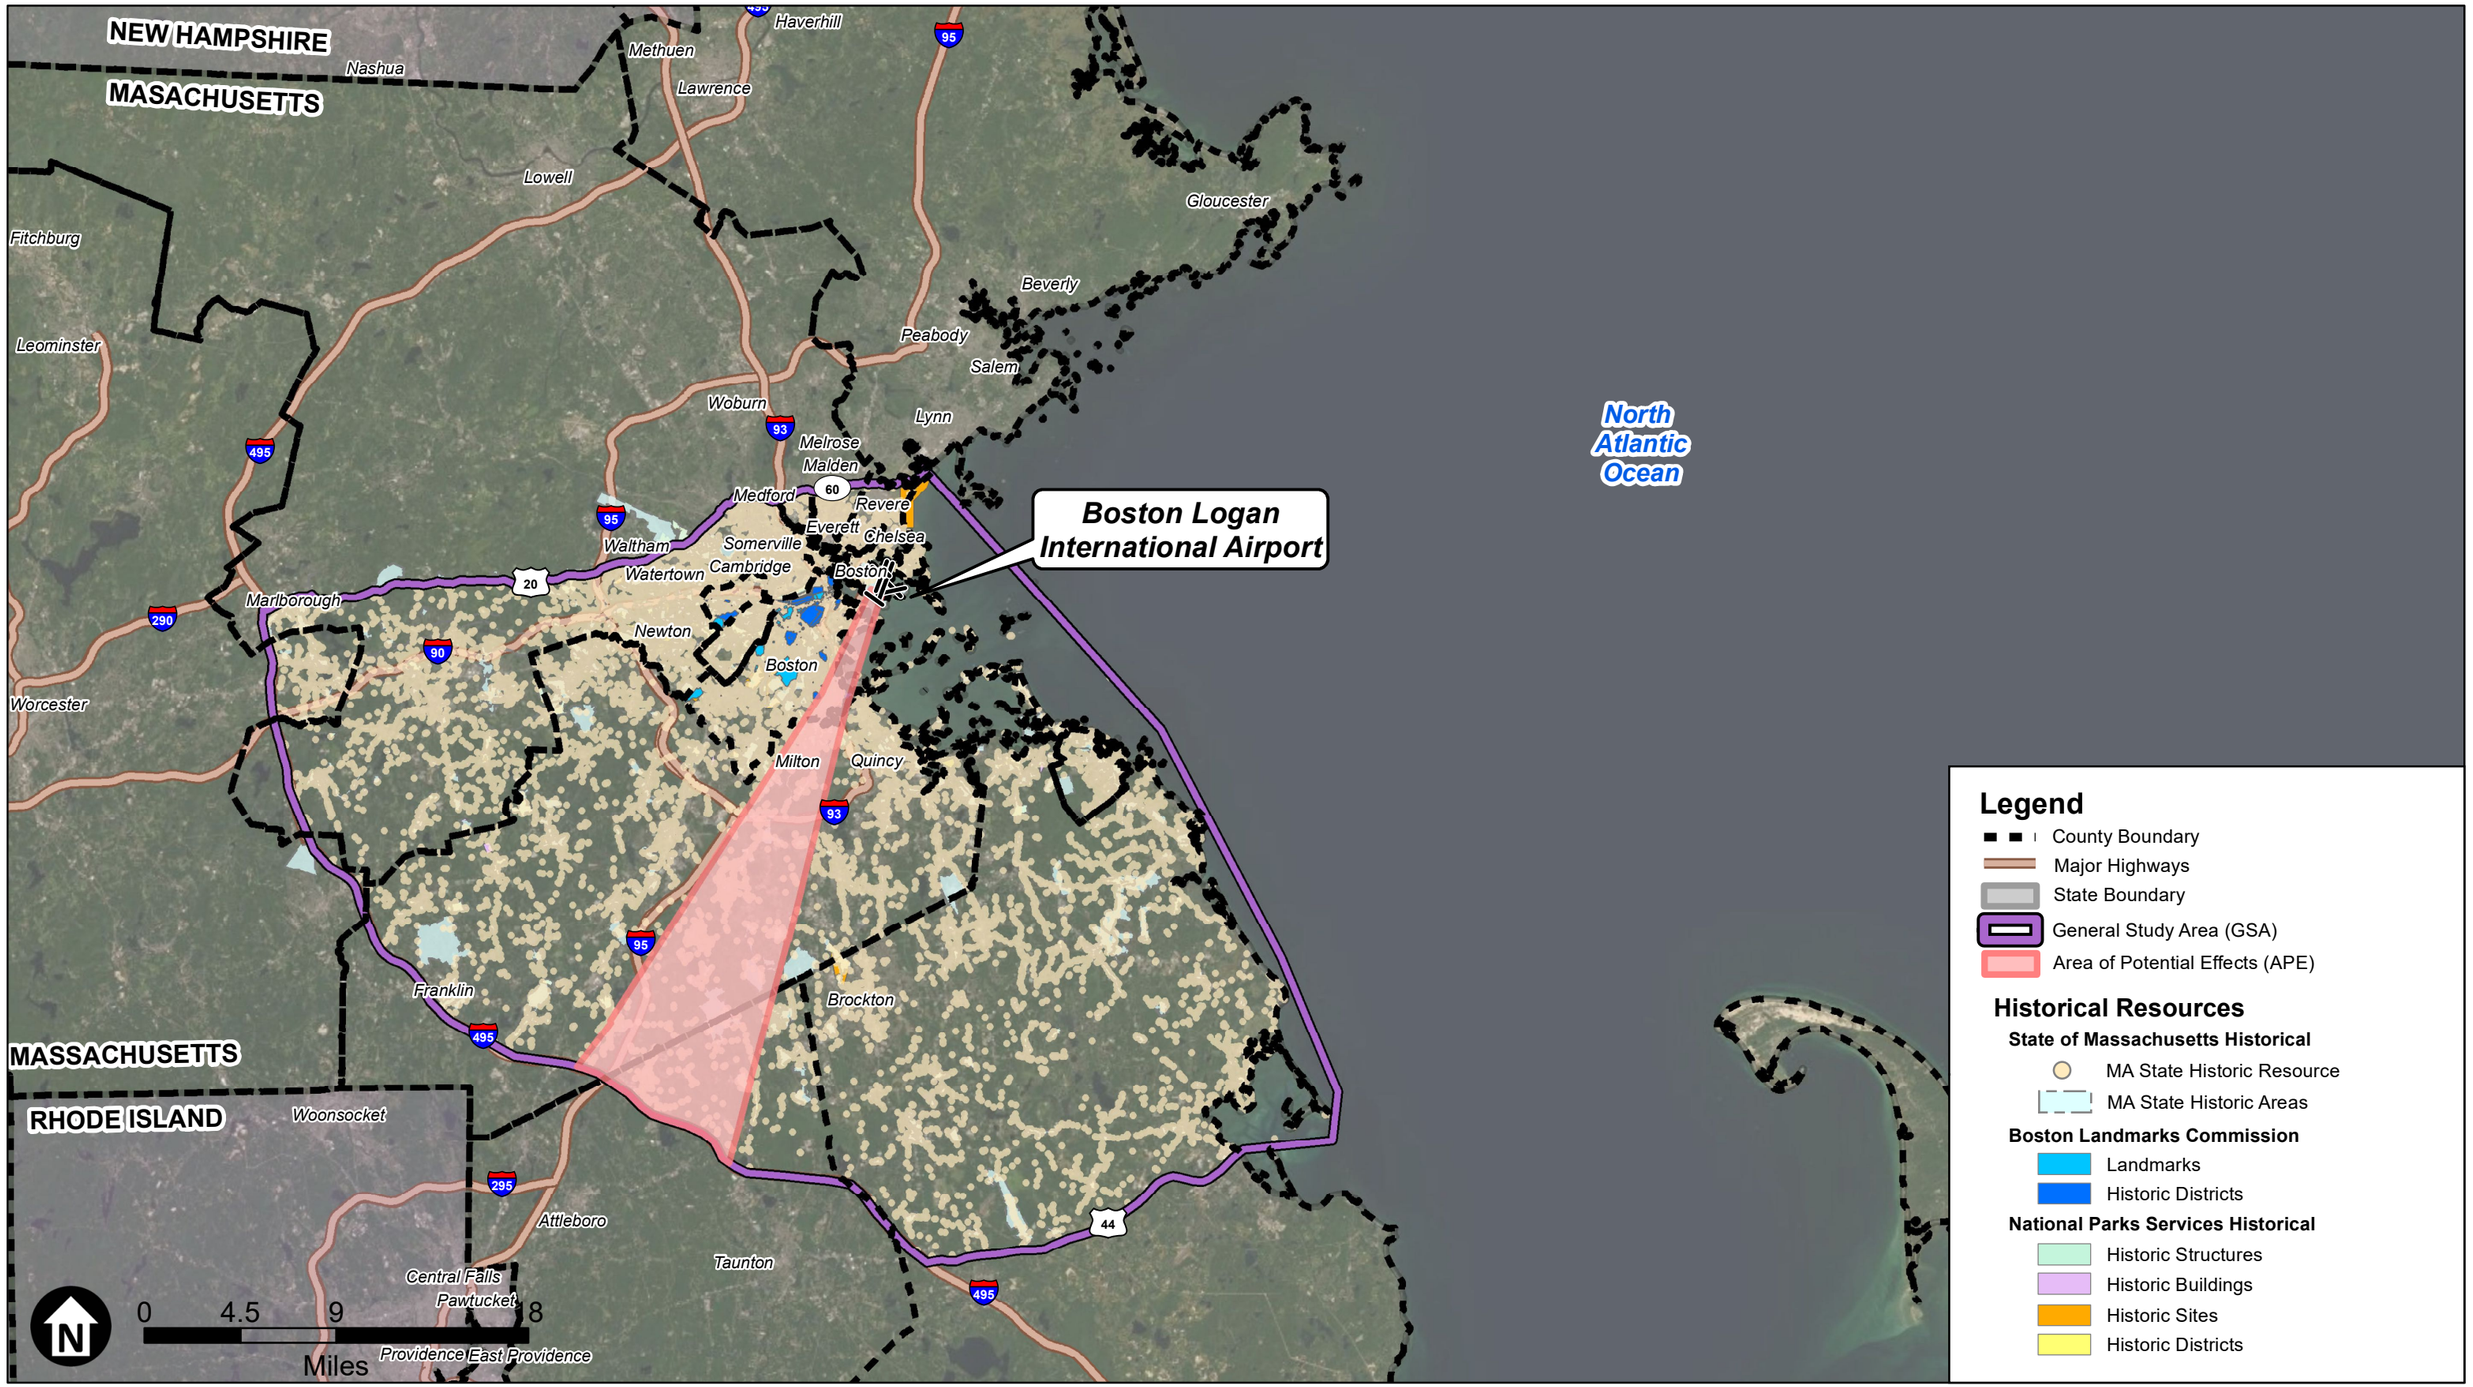
- Does the undertaking alter the property in any way that is inconsistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Treatment of Historic Properties (36 CFR Part 68)?
    - The undertaking is located in the airspace above the historic resources and would not result in any alteration or physical modifications to these resources.

- Does the undertaking remove a property from its historic location?
    - The undertaking would not remove any property from its location.

- Does the undertaking change the character of the property's use, or of physical features within the property's setting that contribute to its historic significance?
    - The undertaking would not change the character of any property's use or any physical features in any historical property's setting.

- Does the undertaking introduce an atmospheric, audible, or visual element to the area that would diminish the integrity of the property's significant historic features?
    - As discussed above and illustrated by the six examples (of Milton Cemetery, Dorchester Park, Cedar Grove Cemetery, Governor Hutchinson's Field, the Captain R. B. Forbes House, and the Blue Hills Reservation MRA), the small increase in overflights attributable to the undertaking, less than one additional overflight per day, would not introduce audible or visual elements that would diminish the integrity of the significant historical features of any historic resource in the APE.

- Does the undertaking result in neglect of a property which would result in its deterioration, transfer, sale, or lease?
    - The undertaking would not cause any property to be neglected, sold, or transferred.



Based on the analysis offered above, the FAA is reaffirming our Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. Although the undertaking potentially affects the setting and feeling of certain types of historic properties that would be overflown by aircraft using the proposed procedure, the incremental increase in overflights (an average of less than one per day) in an area already densely overflown would not diminish the integrity of any historic properties' significant historical features. We hope this additional information and analysis responds to your concerns and addresses your previous non-concurrence to the FAA's Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect. The FAA has attempted to address those concerns by providing additional information and analysis responding to your questions in correspondence.

We request that you review this information and advise the FAA within 30 days of receipt of this letter whether you now concur with, or have no objection to, our Proposed Finding of No Adverse Effect.

Sincerely,

Dear Secretary Haaland:

This letter is intended to provide you with notice of a consultation involving National Historic Landmarks, as set forth in 36 C.F.R. § 800.10(c). Specifically, the FAA is proposing to publish a new satellite-based arrival procedure for Runway 4L at Boston Logan International Airport (BOS) and there are two National Historic Landmarks located within the Area of Potential Effects.

The procedure is needed to enhance the safety and efficiency of aircraft operations at BOS by providing vertical and lateral electronic guidance to aircraft, which is particularly important during poor weather conditions. The procedure will allow for a stabilized approach and will reduce pilot workload during those conditions, and also reduce delays and cancellations at BOS. Once the procedure is published, the FAA expects there would be an annual increase of 255 arrivals to Runway 4L at BOS, which were previously scheduled flights that would no longer need to be cancelled due to increased efficiency. The procedure would also allow for the shift of 104 annual arrivals from Runway 4R to Runway 4L due to increased efficiency on Runway 4L. Besides the overall increase of 359 flights to Runway 4L and the decrease of 104 flights to Runway 4R, the number of annual operations at BOS would not change.

This proposal is an undertaking under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act. As part of the FAA's assessment of effects to historic resources from this undertaking, the FAA identified two National Historic Landmarks within the Area of Potential Effects: the Captain Robert Bennet Forbes House (215 Adams Street, Milton, MA) and the Great Blue Hill Weather Observatory (located in the Blue Hills Reservation MRA, East Milton, MA). However, based on its assessment of adverse effects, the FAA has proposed a Finding of No Adverse Effects.

Enclosed please find the FAA's initial Finding of No Adverse Effects, which was sent to all consulting parties, as well as additional consultation letters between the FAA and the Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) relating, in part, to the Captain Robert Bennet Forbes House. To date, the MHC has indicated it cannot concur with the FAA's Finding of No Adverse Effect and has stated that "this increase of 359 flights annually will introduce increased visual and audible events which will affect the historic resources under and near the 4L RNAV flight path." The FAA is currently engaged in additional consultation with MHC and has provided additional analysis of the effect on historic properties under the procedure's flight path that we believe shows that the procedure will not introduce any audible or visual elements that would diminish the integrity of the properties' significant historic features. In addition, you can access the FAA's Draft Environmental Assessment for the procedure, prepared pursuant to the National Environmental Policy Act, at the following website: https://faabostonworkshops.com/.

We believe this letter and the enclosed consultation letters satisfy our responsibility to notify the Secretary of the Interior under 36 C.F.R. § 800.10(c). Please do not hesitate to contact us with any questions.

Sincerely,

Veronda Johnson
