

Lost Communications Procedures

Prior to flying the PIC will have completed a radio check with the ground observer.

In the event of a communication breakdown between the observer and the PIC, the aircraft will be brought back to the home position. When communication is reestablished and there are no intermittent communication issues, the PIC and ground observer will decide if flying can continue. If communications are not re-established the flight will terminate.